

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

HDI

HW 2QF0 5

KE 38187 44473

Harvard College Library

THE GIFT OF

SAMUEL ABBOTT GREEN, M.D.,

OF BOSTON.

(Class of 1851.)

27 Sept. 1898.

A DICTIONARY OF QUOTATIONS,
&c. &c.

G. Woodfall, Printer,
Paternoster-row, London.

TAKEN CHIEFLY FROM THE LATIN AND FRENCH.

THE FOURTH EDITION,
REVISED, AND VERY CONSIDERABLY ENLARGED.

Quis expedituit psittaco suum χαῖρι. PERSIUS.

"He has been at a great Feast of languages, and stolen all the scraps."
Moth, in SHAKESPEARE'S "Love's Labour's Lost."

LONDON:
PRINTED FOR G. AND J. ROBINSON, PATERNOSTER-ROW.

1803.

~~VII. 3717.~~

~~LU 2050, 3H~~
KE 38187

Dr. S. A. Green.

INTRODUCTION.

WHEN a work of this description, aiming only to be useful, has passed in a short time through three Editions, it may be supposed, without a strained inference, to have gained the sanction of those for whose use it was intended. The Compiler, therefore, finds it no longer necessary to apologize for the novelty of the attempt, whatever palliations he may have to offer for the manner in which it has been brought forward. The first sketch of this Work, he has simply to say, was drawn up for the use of a private friend, and without a view to publication. By mere accident, it met the eye of a most worthy and intelligent man, to whose zeal and spirit the Public is indebted for publications of infinitely higher importance*.—It was his opinion, that the sketch should be published as a matter of experiment. It was well received; and the critics of the day complained only of its brevity. Since that time, the Compiler has devoted much of his occasional leisure, to reduce that to order and system, which, on a first view of the subject, appeared to many as impracticable.

* The late Mr. George Robinson.

At a former period of our literary History, it is certain, that an attempt to form "A Dictionary of Quotations" would have been fruitless, and unavailing. When Memory, and not Taste, was consulted, in citing Passages from ancient Authors, no compilation, however voluminous, could have been adequate or useful. But at present, whether we refer to Miscellaneous Reading, or to Conversation, little remains of those tedious and frequent Quotations, which "larded the leanness" of some of our earlier Writers, and which were even deemed necessary in colloquial intercourse.

The practice having thus gradually yielded to the influence of a better taste, the Quotations, which we either hear or read, consist chiefly of classic flowers, culled and retained from the poets of the Augustan age, or of apophthegms, and technical phrases, the pith and point of which are not easily transferred into another language. We have also borrowed, but with a sparing hand, some useful precepts, and a few poetic blossoms, from our continental neighbours. These, however, collectively taken, are so far from being numerous, that it is more a matter of surprise, that they should not before have been alphabetically arranged, than that it should now for the first time be attempted. There have been some previous compilations of a similar nature, but these were scanty in their limits, and the quotations being arranged according to their subject matter, it was required of the reader, who was acquainted only with his vernacular tongue, to divine the general meaning of the exotic phrase, before he could learn where to apply for more exact information!

The alphabetical arrangement which the Compiler of this Work has adopted, whilst it offers a more ready and convenient mode to readers of this description, has also led, the Compiler must admit, to some repetitions; but of these it must be pleaded in excuse, that they were absolutely unavoidable. Thus, in the well-known precept of Horace,

~~—Hic murus abeneus esto—~~

~~Nil conscire sibi—nullâ pallescere culpâ.~~

The three branches of the period are often severally quoted; it was necessary therefore to give the two latter distinctly, as otherwise the reader, not classically informed, would be left without a clue to guide his research.

Some objections have been started from other quarters, as if the compilation was intended to increase the means of multiplying quotations,—a practice which was honestly condemned in the preface to the former Editions. The present performance is, in truth, meant for the use of that numerous class of society, who are acquainted only with their mother-tongue. The false taste which continues to introduce unnecessary quotations, and the necessity for their introduction in some cases, combine to furnish so many stumbling-blocks to this description of readers. If these are in any degree removed by this compilation, the end of the Compiler is attained.

The

The sanction which has been given to the Work by the rapid sale of three former Editions, has induced him to render the present as completely useful as it could be made by his labour and attention.— Amongst the additions, which are considerable, will be found nearly a complete collection of those Law-Maxims, which so frequently occur, and which Sir EDWARD COKE says, are so called “Quia MAXIMA est eorum Dignitas, atque certissima Auctoritas.” — “Because their respect stands very high, and their authority is most certain.” In the illustrations which he has given of these, and in his explanation of the terms of Law, the Compiler does not affect to be technical. To satisfy the Lawyer, he must have been more diffuse. To the general Reader, he trusts that his brief Definitions will convey all that may be deemed requisite.

A translation of the Motto's of the British and Irish Peerage was also regarded as necessary, those which occur in the common books of Heraldry, being in many instances defective or absurd. Of the latter a single specimen may suffice. The Motto of the Irish Marquis of THOMOND is “Vigueur de dessus.” deffus." "Strength is from above:" in some of the books above-mentioned, it is rather waggishly rendered, "Vigour to get uppermost."

It were to be wished that the Writers, who quote largely from other languages, would furnish a Translation, either marginally, or otherwise. The practice of Quotation, without those necessary aids, has been lately on the increase with some affected Writers, who seem to take for granted that all their readers are classically informed. To those who are not so, this Collection of Common-places will, the Compiler trusts, be found useful.—That he looked merely to its usefulness, must be evident from this; that the additions in this instance, consist almost wholly of those short phrases, and borrowed snatches of Classic Poetry, &c. which meet the eye each day; and in every periodical publication.—If he were to quote large Passages, the translations of which are always at hand;—if he were to follow the scientific man through his labours, or the pedant through his researches, he might have made the Work as voluminous as the Statutes at large. He felt it, on the contrary, his duty to confine himself to the Quotations "in common use."—Taken in this point of view, he presumes to flatter himself, that however critics may impugn his taste, the reader will not have to complain of his want of industry.

to

INDEX TO THE ABBREVIATIONS.

GR. Greek.	TAC. Tacitus.
LAT. Latin.	CIC. Cicero.
SP. Spanish.	SEN. Seneca.
ITAL. Italian.	VIRG. Virgil.
FR. French.	LAB. Laberius.
FR. PROV. French Prov.	OV. Ovid.
HOR. Horace.	LUCRET. Lucretius.
JUV. Juvenal.	CAT. Catullus.
CLAUD. Claudian.	MART. Martial.
LUC. Lucan.	PROP. Propertius, &c.

N.B. The Passages in inverted Commas, after each Quotation, are in general a close, if not a literal Translation. What follows is a more diffuse Explanation of its Bearing and Application than a mere Translation could possibly convey.—Where the Sense is sufficiently clear, the Explanation is of course omitted.

NOTICE. It is recommended to the general Reader, if the Quotation should not be found on a first Reference, to drop the first Monosyllables, at, car, et, id, il y a, nam, sed, ut, which are variously used to link the Quotation with the Context. The second Word, on referring to the alphabetical Order, will generally be found, in these Cases, to furnish the desired Explanation.

A DICTIONARY

A DICTIONARY OF QUOTATIONS,

&c. &c.

Ab actu ad posse valet consecutio. Lat.—“The induction is good, from what has been to what may be.”—By this logical maxim it is meant to state, that when a thing has once happened, it is but just to infer that such a matter may again occur.

Ab alio expectes, alteri quod feceris. Lat. LABERIUS.—“You may expect from one person, that which you have done to another.”—Your conduct to others shall form the measure of your own expectations.

Abbatis. Fr. Milit. Term.—Stakes driven in the ditch of a fort to prevent a storm.

A barbe de fol, on apprend a raire. French.—“Men learn to shave on the chin of a fool.”—They love to make experiments at the expence of others.

A bis & a blanc. Fr. Prov.—“At the brown and the white.”—By fits and starts.

Absentem qui reddit amicum

Qui non defendit alio culpante—

Hic niger est hunc tu Romane caveto.

Lat. HORACE.

“He who attacks an absent friend, or who does not defend him when spoken ill of by another—That man is a dark character; do you, Roman, beware of him.”—The man who yields even a silent assent when his friend is calumniated, must be regarded as wholly unworthy of confidence or regard.

Ab

Ab inconvenienti. Lat. Phrase.—“From the inconvenience.”—Argumentum ab inconvenienti—An argument to shew that the result of a proposed measure will prove inconvenient or unsuited to circumstances.

Ab initio. Lat. Phrase.—“From the beginning.”—His proceedings were ill-founded ab initio.

Abnormis sapiens. Lat. HORACE.—“A person whose wisdom is not derived from instruction.”
“A Mother-wit, and wise without the schools.”

A bon chat bon rat. Fr. Prov.—“To a good cat, a good rat.”—The parties are well suited, or matched.

Absentem lædit cum ebrío qui litigat. Lat. SYRUS.—“He hurts the absent who quarrels with a drunken man.”—You should consider your adversary as absent when his senses are departed.

Absit invidia. Lat.—“All envy apart.”—Without being supposed to speak invidiously.

Abundat dulcibus vitiis. Lat. QUINTIL.—“He abounds with luscious faults.”—Spoken of an author, even in whose errors something pleasing is to be found.

Ab uno disce omnes. Lat. VIRG.—“From this single instance, you may learn the nature of the whole.”
—From this specimen of guilt, you may form a general inference of the criminality.

A bon chien il ne vient jamais un bon os. French Proverb.—“A good bone does not always come to a good dog.”—Merit does not always meet its due reward.

Ab ovo usque ad mala. Lat. Phrase.—“From the eggs to the apples.”—From the beginning to the end of the entertainment. These were the first and last articles served up at a Roman feast.

Ab urbe condita. Lat.—“From the building of the city.”—In general thus abridged, A. U. C. in the chronology of the Romans. A capite

AC ——— AC

A capite ad calcem. Lat.—“From the head to the foot.”—Thoroughly, completely. From the beginning to the end.

A causa persa parole assai. Ital. Prov.—“When the cause is lost there is enough of words.”—Do not discuss that which is already decided.

Accedas ad Curiam. Law Lat.—“You may approach the Court.”—This name is given to a Writ by which Proceedings may be removed from an inferior to a superior Court.

——— Acceptissima semper

Munera sunt auctor quæ pretiosa facit.

Lat. OVID.

“Those gifts are ever the most acceptable which the giver has made precious.”—They derive frequently their value from our estimation of the donor. It may also allude to the manner of giving, as in SHAKESPEARE.

“You gave—with words of so sweet breath composed,

“As made the things more rich.”

Accusare nemo se debet nisi coram Deo. Lat. Law Maxim.—“No man is bound to accuse himself, unless it be before God.”—No oath is to be administered, whereby any person may be compelled to confess a crime, or accuse himself. The law will not force any man to say or shew that which is against him.

Acerrima proximorum odia. Lat. TACITUS.—“The hatred of those who are near to us is most violent.”—A contest between relatives is generally conducted with more acrimony than is a dispute between persons who are strangers to each other.—The phrase may also be applied to that violence of rage which generally belongs to a civil war.

Ac etiam. Law Lat.—“And also.”—A clause added by recent custom, to a complaint of trespass in the Court of King’s Bench, which adds “and also” a plea of debt. The plea of trespass, by fiction, gives cognizance to the court, and the plea of debt authorizes the arrest.

Acribus initiis, incurioso fine. Lat. TACITUS.—“Alert in the beginning, but negligent in the end.”—Applied to a business vigorously conducted in the first instance, but where the exertion falls off, as the affair draws nearer to a conclusion.

A cruce salus. Lat.—“Salvation from the cross.”—Motto of the Fr. E. of MAYO.

Acta exteriora indicant interiora secreta. Lat. Law Maxim.—“By the outward acts we are to judge of the inward secrets.”—We can only decide on men’s intentions from their conduct.

Actio personalis moritur cum persona. Lat. Law Maxim.—“A personal action dies with the person.”—In case of a trespass or battery, the death of one or the other of the parties puts an end to the action.

Actis ævum implet, non seignibus annis. Lat. OVID.—“He fills his space with deeds, and not with lingering years.”—Applied to a character distinguished for a number of brilliant actions accomplished in the course of a short life.

Actum est de Republicâ. Lat.—“It is all over with the Republic.”—A phrase used to intimate that the constitution is in extreme danger.

Actum ne agas. Lat. TERENCE.—“Do not overdo what has been already done.”—The work which is finished may be endangered by the touches of a superfluous anxiety.

Actus Dei nemini facit injuriam. Law Max.—
 “No one shall be injured through the act of God.”—As if a house be set on fire by lightning, the tenant shall not be responsible for the damage.

Actus legis nulli facit injuriam. Lat. Law Maxim.
 —“The act of the law does injury to no man.”
 —If land, for instance, out of which a rent-charge is granted, be recovered by elder title, the grantee shall have a writ of annuity, because the rent-charge is made void by course of law.

Actus me invito factus non est meus actus. Lat. Law Maxim.—“An act done against my will is not my act.”—If a person be compelled, for instance, through fear or duress, to give a bond or other writing, the deed is rendered void by the compulsion.

Actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea. Lat. Law Maxim.—“The act does not make a man guilty, unless the mind be also guilty.”—Unless the intent be criminal, the deed cannot be attainted of criminality.

A cuspide corona. Lat.—“A crown from the spear;”—Honour earned by military exploits.
 The motto of the Ir. Visc. MIDDLETON.

Ad calamitatem quilibet rumor valet. Lat.—“Any rumour is sufficient against calamity.”—When a man is distressed, a breath may complete his ruin.

Ad captandum vulgus. Lat.—“To ensnare the vulgar.”—A lure thrown out to captivate the mobility.

A Deo & rege. Lat.—“From God and the king.”
 —Motto of E. HARRINGTON and E. STANHOPE.

AD———AD

~~Addeone homines immutari~~
Ex amore, ut non cognoscas eundem esse?

Lat. TERENCE.

“That a man should be so changed by love, as not to be known again for the same person.”

Adco in teneris consuescere multum est. Lat. VIRGIL.

—“Of so much value is it to be accustomed in our tender years.”—Such are the advantages of an early education.

Ad eundem. Lat.—“To the same.”—In passing from one university or law society to another, it is said that he was admitted ad eundem, to the same precise rank which he held in the association or corporation of which he was previously a member.

Adhuc sub iudice lis est. Lat.—“The contest is still before the judge.”—The affair is not yet decided.

Adieu la voiture, adieu la boutique. French Proverb.
 “Farewell the carriage and farewell the shop.”
 —The affair is all over.

Ad infinitum. Lat.—“To infinity.”—And thus the calculation proceeds ad infinitum.

Ad Kalendas Græcas. Lat.—“At the Greek Kalends.”—The Kalends formed a division of the Roman month, which had no place in the Greek reckoning of time. The phrase was therefore used by the former to denote that the thing could never happen.

Ad libitum. Lat.—“At pleasure.”—In Music it is used to signify those ornamental graces which are left to the taste of the performer.

Ad nullum confurgit opus cum corpore languet. Lat. GALLUS.—“When the body is indisposed, it is in vain that we call on the mind for any strenuous application.”

Adolescens verecundum esse decet. Lat. PLAUTUS.—“It becomes a young man to be modest.”—Reserve and modesty are the flowers with which youth should be decorated.

Ad populum phaleras, ego te intus & in cute novi. Lat. PERSIUS.—“Away with those trappings to the vulgar, I know thee both inwardly and outwardly.”—I know the man too well to be deceived by appearances.

Ad quæstionem juris respondeant iudices, ad quæstionem facti respondeant juratores. Lat. Law Maxim.—“Let the judges answer to the question of law, and the jurors to the matter of fact.”

Ad quod damnum. Law Lat.—“To what damage.” A writ which ought to be issued before the king grants certain liberties, such as a fair or market, ordering the sheriff to enquire what damage the county is liable to suffer by such grant. The same writ is also issued for a similar enquiry with respect to lands granted to religious houses or corporations, for turning highways, &c.

Ad referendum. Lat.—“To be further considered.”—A diplomatic phrase borrowed from the States of Holland, and now used proverbially to imply a slowness of deliberation and decision.

Adjustez vos flutes. French.—“Make your flutes agree.”—Settle your differences by yourselves.

Adscriptus glebæ. Lat.—“Attached to the soil.”—Disposible with the land. This is now the wretched description of the peasantry in Russia. It was formerly so in other countries.

Ad tristem partem strenua est suspicio. Lat. SYRUS.

"Suspicion is ever strong on the suffering side."

—When we play a losing game, we are apt to suspect all those who are around us of treachery.

Adulandi gens prudentissima laudat

Sermonem indocti, faciem deformis amici.

Lat. JUVENAL.

"The skilful class of flatterers praise the discourse of the ignorant, and the face of the deformed friend."—They attack each man on his weak side.

Ad valorem. Lat.—"According to the value."

Ægri somnia vana. Lat. HORACE.—"The idle dreams of a sick man."—The fickle dreams of a distempered brain.

Ægroto dum anima est, spes est. Lat. CICERO.—

"Whilst life remains to a sick man there is hope."—This has passed as a proverb into our own language.

———Æqua lege necessitas

Sortitur insignes & imos.

Lat. HORACE.

"Necessity by an equal law takes the highest and the lowest."—No rank can shield us from the impartiality of death or fate.

———Æquam memento rebus in arduis

Servare mentem.

Lat. HORACE.

"Remember to preserve an equal mind in arduous affairs."—Æquanimity is the best support under difficulties.

———Æqua tellus

Pauperi recluditur regumque pueris. Lat. HOR.

"The earth opens equally for the poor man and the prince."—The sentiment is precisely similar with that of the preceding quotation.

Æquam

Æquam servare mentem. Lat.—“To preserve an equal mind.”—Motto of Lord RIVERS.

———Æquanimiter. Lat.—“With equanimity.”
—Motto of Lord SUFFIELD.

Æquitas sequitur legem. Lat. Law Maxim.—“Equity follows the law.”—Equity cannot however make a different rule from that which the law has established. It were much to be wished however, (says Blackstone) for the sake of certainty, peace, and justice, that each court (those of law and equity) would as far as possible follow the other in the best and most effectual rules for attaining those desirable ends.

Æqua anima. Lat.—“With an equal mind.”—Motto of the Irish Baron PENHRYN.

———Æquum est

Peccatis veniam poscentem reddere rursus.

Lat. HOR.—

“The man who asks pardon for his faults should grant the same.”—Our charities and indulgencies should be mutual.

Ætas parentum pejor avis tulit

Nos nequiores, mox daturos

Progeniem vitiosorem.

Lat. HORACE.—

“The age of our fathers, which was worse than that of our ancestors, produced us who are shortly to raise a progeny even more vicious than ourselves.”—This is a common-place frequently resorted to by those who wish to prove, that the manners of every age are worse than those of the preceding.

A facto ad jus non datur consequentia. Lat. Law Maxim.—“The inference from the fact to the law is not allowed.”—A general law is not to be trammelled by a specific or particular precedent.

Affirmativum.

AF——AL

Affirmativ. Lat.—“In the affirmative.”

Afflavit Deus & dissipantur. Lat.—“The breath of God has issued, and they are dispersed.”—This was the inscription of the medal struck in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, on the dispersion and destruction of the vaunted Spanish armada. It is now sometimes quoted to mark what is held to be a signal interference of Providence in discomfiting the views of an enemy.

A fin. French.—“To the end.”—Motto of Sc. Earl AIRLY.

A fortiori. Lat.—“With stronger reason.”—If a weak man be dangerous, it follows, a fortiori, that a weak and bad man must be more dangerous.

A grands frais. French Phrase.—“At great expence.”—Sumptuously.

Agnosco veteris vestigia flammæ. Lat. VIRGIL.—“I recognize some traces of my former flame.”—I feel that my passion is not wholly extinguished.

Aide toi le ciel t'aidera. French. FONTAINE.—“Help yourself and heaven will help you.”—Depend rather on your exertions than your prayers. The allusion is to the waggoner in Æsop, who, when his waggon was overturned in a ditch, prayed stoutly for the aid of Hercules.

A la bonne heure. French.—“At a good hour.”—This comes happily—It is well timed.

A la mode. French.—“According to the fashion.”

A l'extinction de la chandelle. French.—“To the extinguishing of the candle.”—To the last extremity. It is also used to denote a sale by “inch of candle.”

Alia

A L ——— AL

Alia tentanda via est. Lat. VIRG.—“Another way must be tried.”—We must diversify our means to attain our end.

Alias. Lat.—“Otherwise,” as Robinson alias Robson. An alias is also a name given to a second writ issuing from the courts of Westminster, after a first writ has been sued out without any effect.

Alieni appetens, sui profusus. Lat. SALLUST.—“Desirous of the property of others, but lavish of his own.”—This is the description given by the historian of Catiline. It has been often applied to politicians who are not disinclined to waste their own property, in order to obtain a power over that of others.

Alibi. Latin.—“Elsewhere.”—Law term for a defence where the culprit aims to prove his absence at the time and from the place where the crime was committed.

Aliena negotia curo, excussus propriis. Lat. HOR.—“I attend to other men’s business, having lost my own.”—The quotation is used to mark an idle obtruder.

Aliena nobis, nostra plus aliis placent. Lat. SYRUS.—“The things which belong to others please us more, and that which is ours is most pleasing to others.”—This maxim is applicable in many cases, perhaps in none more than in the article of wives.

Alienâ optimum frui insaniâ. Lat.—“It is of the highest advantage to be able to derive instruction from the madness of another.”—It is true practical wisdom to make the faults of others serve as so many beacons to warn us from the rocks and shoals on which they have been wrecked.

—————Alieno

Alieno in loco

Haud stabile regnum est. Lat. SENECA.—

"The sovereignty which is held over strange or remote territories is precarious."

Aliquis malo sit usus ab illo. Lat.—"Some use or benefit may possibly be derived from that evil."

There are some mischiefs which have a tendency not only to rectify themselves but to produce an opposite result.

À l'improviste. French—"Unawares."—At an opportunity not foreseen.

À l'impossible nul est tenu. French—"No man is bound to perform an impossibility."

Aliquando bonus dormitat Homerus. Lat. HOR.—

"Sometimes even the good Homer nods."—

The greatest genius has its weakness and its failures.

Alitur vitium, vivitque tegendo. Lat. VIRGIL.—

"Vice thrives and lives by concealment."—It is in the nature of foul deeds to delight in darkness.

Aliquis non debet esse iudex in propria causa. Lat.

Law Maxim.—"No man should be a judge in his own cause."—A lord of the manor, though having cognizance of all kinds of pleas, cannot hold plea where he is himself a party.

Alma mater. Lat.—"A benign mother."—A name given by students to the university in which they were educated.

Al molino ed alla sposa

Sempre manca qualche cosa. Prov. Italian.—

"A mill and a woman are always in want of something;" the former from the complexity of its machinery, and the latter from the influences of her caprice.

Alium

AL——AL

Alium filere quod valeas primus file. Lat. SENECA.

—“To make another person hold his tongue, be you first silent.”—Do not irritate an idle dispute by fruitless perseverance.

Αλλαν ιατρος, αυτος ελκεισιν βρωχιν. Gr. PLUTARCH.—

Allo iatros, autos elkesi bruon.—“The physician of others whilst he himself teems with ulcers.”

—A man who pretends to cure other's faults whilst he has abundance of his own.

Alta sedent civilis vulnere dextra. Lat. LUCAN.—

“The wounds of civil war are deeply felt.”—

Its evils are more severe and immediate, than any which can follow from hostilities with a foreign enemy.

—Alterius sic

Altera possit opem res & conjurat amice.

Lat. HORACE.—

“Thus one thing demands the aid of the other, and both unite in friendly assistance.”—This is applied by the poet to the alliance which should exist between Study and Genius. It is sometimes used, however, to describe combinations of a different nature.

Alter remus aquas, alter mihi radat arenas. Lat.

PROPERTIUS.—“Let me strike the water with one oar, and with the other scrape the sands.”—Let me never hazard my safety by getting out of my depth.

Alterum alterius auxilio eget. Latin. SALLUST.—

“The one stands in need of the assistance of the other.”—Neither of the two matters in question could stand without a reciprocal support.

Amabilis

AM———AM

Amabilis insania, & mentis gratissimus error. Lat. HORACE.—“A delightful insanity, and a most pleasing error of the mind.”—The poet puts these words into the mouth of a person, who being cured of madness, laments that he has lost the grateful reveries which occurred in his delirium. They are ironically applied to men who look with complacency on their own mistakes and errors, though these may be as gross as if they “had eaten of the insane root.”

Amantium iræ amoris redintegratio est. Lat. TERENCE.—“The falling out of lovers is the renewal of love.”—The disputes of lovers generally end in a warm reconciliation.

Amare & sapere vix Deo conceditur. Lat. LABERIUS.—“To love and to be wise is scarcely granted to the highest.”—Love and prudence are absolutely incompatible.

A ma puissance. French.—“To my power.”—Motto of Earl STAMFORD.

Ambiguas in vulgum spargere voces. Lat. VIRG.—“To scatter doubtful rumours amongst the vulgar.”—To endeavour to mislead the croud by ambiguous intimations.

Ambiguum pactum contra venditorem interpretandum est. Lat. Law Maxim.—“An ambiguous deed or contract is to be expounded against the seller or grantor.”—Thus if a man has a warren in his lands, and grants the same land for life, without mentioning the warren, the grantee will have it with the land.

Ame damnée. French.—“A d——d soul.”—A tool, a drudge, one who will do any dirty work.

Ame

Ame de boue. Fr.—“A foul of mud.”—A debased creature.

A mensa & thoro. Lat.—“From bed and board.”

A merveille.—“To a wonder.”—Rarely. He executed his part a merveille.

Amici vitium ni feras prodis tuum. Lat. SYRUS.—
“Unless you bear with the faults of a friend you betray your own.”—If you do not concede a little, you disclose your own want of temper or of friendship.

Amicum ita babeas, posse ut fieri hunc inimicum scias.
Lat. LABERIUS.—“Be on such terms with your friend as if you knew that he may one day become your enemy.”

Amicus humani generis. Lat.—“The friend of the human race.”—The highest title which man can obtain, and which but few FRANKLINS and HOWARDS are found to claim.

Amicus certus in re incerta cernitur. Lat. ENNIUS.—
—“A sure friend is tried in doubtful matters.”
—It is only in situations of hazard that we can prove the sincerity of friendship.

Amicus curiæ. Lat.—“A friend of the court.”—
This appellation is given in Courts of Law to the person who gives his advice or opinion, when not immediately concerned in the cause.

Amicus Plato, amicus Socrates, sed magis amica veritas. Lat. “Plato is my friend, Socrates is my friend, but Truth is more my friend.”—
By this quotation the speaker or writer intimates that he is not without his personal feelings and attachments, but that nothing can make him swerve from the sacred interests of truth.

Amicus

AM———AN

Amicus usque ad aras.—"A friend even to the altar."—One who will sustain his friendship, even to the last extremity.

Amittit merito proprium qui alienum appetit. Lat. PHÆDRUS.—"He deservedly loses his own property, who covets that of another."—It is not without reason that few are displeased to see the greedy man fall into the trap which he has constructed for the ruin of another.

Amo. Lat.—"I love."—Motto of the Scotch Earl DELORAINE, and of Earl DONCASTER.

A moitié de moitié.—"From half to half."—By halves.

Amor patriæ. Lat.—"The love of our country."—The affection which the native of every climate bears to the soil which has given him birth.

Amoto quæramus seria ludo. Lat. HORACE.—"Setting raillery aside, let us now attend to serious matters."

Amphora cæpit

Institui; currente rotâ cur urcens exit? Lat. HORACE.—"A large jar was begun to be formed: why as the wheel goes round does it turn out to be an insignificant pitcher?"—The metaphor is taken from the potter's wheel. The quotation is applied to those, who having promised a magnificent work, produce in the end something inadequate, and perhaps contemptible.

Anglicè.—"In English."—According to the English fashion.

Anguis in herba. Lat.—"A snake in the grass."—A lurking danger, or one not actually foreseen.

Animal

Animal implume, bipes. Lat.—“An animal without feathers, and walking on two legs.”—This is PLATO’s celebrated definition of a man, which was so successfully ridiculed by DIOGENES, who brought a plucked cock into the school, and scornfully asked “if that was PLATO’s man!”

Animi cultus quasi quidam humanitatis cibis. Lat. CICERO.—“Cultivation is as necessary to the mind, as food is to the body.”

Animus & fides. Lat.—“By courage and faith.”—Motto of the Earl of GURFORD.

Animus non astutiâ. Lat.—“By courage not by craft.”—Motto of the Duke of GORDON, as Earl of NORWICH.

Animus videt, ingenio complexus est, eloquentiâ illuminavit. Lat. PATER of CICERO.—“These subjects he saw by the power of his mind; he comprehended by his understanding; and enlightened by his eloquence.”

———Animæque supersunt

Jam prope post animam. Lat. SIBON. APOLL.—“Their spirit seems even to survive their breath.”—This figure of the poet is scarcely transferable into another language. The intimation is, that though their bodies were deprived of life, their attitudes still bespoke atonement and revenge.

Animam picturâ pascit inani. Lat. VIRGIL.—“He fills his mind with a vain or idle picture.”—He dwells with eagerness upon the painted semblance.—This is sometimes applied in ridicule to dilettanti, or picture-fanciers.

Animus furandi. Lat. Lat.—“The intention of stealing.”—He took the goods animus furandi—with a felonious design.

C ———Animas

Animus quod perdidit optat, Atque in præterita se totus imagine versat.

Lat. PETRON. ARBITER.—

"The mind still wishes for what it has missed, and loses itself in the retrospective contemplation."—Most men have occasion to look back with regret on their lost opportunities.

An præter esse reale actualis essentialis sit aliud esse necessarium, quo res actualiter existat? MARTINUS SCRIBLERUS.—"Whether, besides the real being of actual being, there be any other being necessary to cause a thing to be?"—A question humourously put to ridicule the absurdity of metaphysics run mad.

*An quisquam est alius liber, nisi ducere vitam
Cui licet, ut voluit.* Lat. PERSIUS.—

"Is there any man free, him excepted, who has the power of passing his life in what manner he pleases?"—It is the very essence of freedom, that each man shall do whatever he likes, without injury to another.

An nescis longas regibus esse manus? Lat. OVID.—
"Do you not know that Kings have long hands?"—It were to be wished, says Swift, "that they had as long ears."

Anno domini. Lat.—"In the year of our Lord," Annus mirabilis. Lat.—"The wonderful year."—
The year of wonders.

Ante tubam trepidat. Lat.—"He trembles before the trumpet or charge is sounded."—His fears anticipate the danger.

Antiqua homo virtute ac fide. Lat. TERENCE.—
"A man of ancient virtue and fidelity."—Of that honesty and good faith which is represented in all ages, as belonging solely to the elder times.

Antiquam

Antiquam obtinens. Lat.—“Possessing antiquity.”—
Motto of Lord BAGOY.

A pas de géant. Fr.—“With a giant’s stride.”—
This is a phrase of exaggeration not uncommon with our continental neighbours. They will say, for instance, we have hitherto advanced with a slow pace, but now we shall proceed a pas de géant, ‘with gigantic steps,’ and come sturdily and fairly to the purpose.

Aperte mala cum est mulier, tum demum est bona.
Lat. Prov.—“When a woman is openly bad, she then is at the best.”—Her avowal is preferable to her hypocrisy.

Aperto vivere voto. Lat. PERSIUS.—“To live with every wish expressed.”—This half line, denoting the value of a certain frankness of demeanour, has been adopted as their motto by the Earls of AYLESFORD.

Apparent rari nantes in gurgite vasto. Lat. VIR-GIL.—“They appear thinly scattered and swimming in the vast deep.”—This phrase, originally used to describe the mariners surviving a shipwreck, is now critically applied to a work where the few thoughts of value are nearly whelmed in a mass of baser matter.

Appetitus rationi pareat. Lat.—“Let the appetite or desire be obedient to reason.”—Motto of Ir.
E. FITZWILLIAM.

A posteriori. Lat.—“From the latter.”

A priori. Lat.—“From the former—in the first instance.”—Phrases which are used in logical argument, to denote a reference to its different modes. The schoolmen distinguish them into the propter quod, wherein an effect is proved from the next cause, as when it is proved that the moon is eclipsed, because the earth is then between between the sun and the moon. The second is the quia, wherein the cause is proved from a remote effect, as that plants do not breathe because they are not animals; or that there is a God from the works of the creation. The former of these is called demonstration a priori, the latter demonstration a posteriori.

Appuyé. Fr. milit. term.—“The point to lean on.”
—The support, the strength, the defence.

Apropos. Fr.—“To the purpose—seasonably.”
It has struck me apropos.

Aqua fortis.—“Strong water.”—Aqua regia.—
“Royal water.”—Two chemical preparations well known for their solution of metals. The latter is so called because it will dissolve gold, which has been termed a royal metal.

Aquila non mangia mosche. Prov. Ital.—“An eagle does not feed upon flies.”—A great mind does not stoop to low, or little pursuits.

Araneorum telia texere. Lat.—“To weave a spider’s web.”—Metaphorically taken—to maintain a sophistical argument.

Arborē dejecta quicvis ligna colligit. Lat. JUVENAL.
—“When the tree is thrown down, any person may gather the wood.”—It is in the power of the meanest to triumph over fallen greatness.

—————Arcades ambo

Et cantare pares, & respondere parati.

Lat. VIRGIL.—

“Both Arcadians, and both equally skilled in the opening song, and in the response.”—The poet speaks of two contending shepherds. The quotation is applied, however to disputants, of another description, either to intimate that they are closely matched; or that they are playing, as the phrase is, into each other’s hands.

A R ——— A R

Arcanum. Lat.—“A secret.”—The grand arcanum,—the philosopher’s stone.

Arcana imperii. Lat.—“State secrets.”—The mysteries of government.

Arcanum demens detegit ebrietas. Lat. VIRGIL.—
“Mad drunkenness discloses every secret.”—
All reserve is laid aside in moments of intoxication.

*Arcanum neque tu scrutaveris ullius unquam,
Commissumve teges & vino tortus & ira.*

Lat. HOR.—

“Never enquire into another man’s secret, but conceal that which is entrusted to you, though tortured both by wine and passion to reveal it.”

Arcum intenso frangit, animum remisso. Lat. SY-RUS.—“Straining breaks the bow, and relaxation the mind.”—Our proverb has it, that the bow which is always bent must break. This maxim properly adds, that the mind will in time lose its powers unless they are called into due activity.

Ardentia verba. Lat.—“Glowing words.”—Expressions of uncommon force and energy.—One of our poets has carried the idea still further.
He speaks of

“Thoughts that glow, and words that burn.”

A rez de chaussée. Fr.—“Even with the ground.”

Argent comptant. Fr.—“Ready money.”—For immediate payment.

Argilla quidvis imitaberis uda. Lat. HORACE.— “You will easily model any thing from the moist clay.”—This is one of the numerous apophthegms which insist on the advantage of early impressions.

AR——AR

Argumentum ad hominem. Lat.—“An argument to the man.”—An argument which derives its strength from its personal application.

Argumentum baculinum.—“The argument of the staff.”—Club law. Conviction per force.

Argumentum ad ignorantiam. Lat.—An argument founded on the ignorance of facts or circumstances, shewn by your adversary.

Argumentum ad iudicium. Lat.—“An argument to the judgment.”—An appeal made, according to LOCKE, to proofs drawn from any of the foundations of knowledge.

Argumentum ad veretundiam. Lat.—“An argument to the modesty”—an appeal to the decency of your opponent.

Ἀριστὸν μέτρον, Gr. Ariston metron.—“A mean is best in every thing.”—This was the saying of CLEOBENES, one of the seven wise men of Greece. On most occasions in common life, it is most prudent to steer a middle course.

Arma tenenti omnia dat, qui iusta negat. Lat. LUCAN.—“He grants every thing, who denies what is just, to those who have arms in their hands.”—A successful combatant will not be content with his naked right, but will insist on something more.

Armati terram exercent semperque recentes Convectare juvat prædas, & vivere rapto.

Lat. VIRGIL.—

“In arms they ravage the earth, and it is their delight to collect the recent spoil, and live on plunder.”—Vide the conduct of the French commanders in Rome and Switzerland. Anno 1798.

“Ars

Ars est celare artem. Lat.—“The art is to conceal the art.”—In every practical science, as in painting or acting, for instance, the great effort of the artist is, to conceal from the spectator the means by which the effect is produced.

Ars est sine arte, cujus principium est mentiri, medium laborare, & finis mendicare. Lat.—This is a most happy definition of the business of alchemy, or the vain search after the philosopher’s stone.—“It is an art without art, which has its beginning in falsehood, its middle in toil, and its end in poverty.”

Artes honorabit. Lat.—“He will honour the arts.”—Motto of the Ir. B. COLERAINE.

Aspera facietia, ubi nimis ex vero traxere, acrem sui memoriam relinquunt. Lat. TACITUS.—“A bitter jest when the satire comes too near the truth, leaves a sharp sting behind it.”—This experiment is always dangerous, but particularly when the shaft is levelled against high authorities.

Asperius nihil est humili cum surgit in altum. Lat. CLAUDIAN.—“Nothing is more harsh than a low man raised to a certain height.”—This is sufficiently illustrated by our homely phrase, “set a beggar on horseback,” &c.

Aspettare e non venire

Stare in letto, e non dormire

Servire e non gradire

Son tre cose, di far morire.

Ital. Proy.—

“To expect one who does not come—to lie a-bed and not to sleep—to serve and not to be advanced, are three things enough to kill a man.”

Assumpsit. Law term.—“He assumed—he took upon him to pay.”—An action on a verbal promise.

AS=====AN

Astra castra regunt lumen. Lat.—“The stars my camp, the Deity my light.”—This quibble, for such it is, in the original, is taken as the motto of Lord BALCARNAS.

A tort & a travers. Fr.—“At wrong and across.”
—At random.

At pulchrum est digito monstrari & dici hic est. Lat. PERSIUS.—“It is pleasing to be pointed at with the finger, and to have it said, ‘There goes the man.’”—In our several pursuits we are all actuated by a wish for notoriety.

At qui sunt ii qui Rempublicam occupavere? Homines sceleratissimi, immam avaritiâ, nocentissimi, iidemq. superbissimi. Lat. SALLUST.—“But who are those that have seized on the Commonwealth?—Men the most profligate, of insatiable avarice, and whose guilt is only equalled by their insolence.”

At spes non fracta. Lat.—“But my hope is not broken.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl HOPETOUN.

Au bon droit. Fr.—“To the just right.”—Motto of the Earl of EGREMONT.

Au bout de compte.—“At the end of the account.”—After all.

Auctor pretiosa facit. Lat.—“The giver makes the gift more precious.”—Motto of the Earl of BUCKINGHAMSHIRE.

Audaces fortuna juvat timidosque repellit. Lat.—“Fortune assists the bold and repels the coward.”—Intrepidity will often succeed under circumstances, where timidity may produce a failure.

Audacter & sincere. Lat.—“Boldly and sincerely.”—Motto of Lords CLARE and CLIVE.

—————Audare

~~omni~~ Audax omnia perpeti

Gens humane ruit per vetitum nefas.

Lat. HORACE.—

“Daring to every extent of guilt, the human race rushes to perpetrate every thing that is wicked and forbidden.”—This often forms a motto to some discourse or tirade against the wickedness of the age.

Aude aliquid brevibus Gyaris & carcere dignum

Si vis esse aliquis.—Probitas laudatur & alget.

JUVENAL.

“Dare to do something worthy of transportation and imprisonment, if you mean to be of consequence. Virtue is praised but freezes.”—This is applied to the success of intrepid villainy, whilst virtue finds only a cold approbation.

Audento magnus tegitur timor. Lat. LUCAN.—

“Fear is often concealed by a shew of daring.”—The coward blusters to disguise his terrors.

Audentes fortuna juvat. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Fortune assists the bold.”—Intrepidity will generally ensure success.

Audi alteram partem. Lat. Prov.—“Hear the other party.”—Listen to what is said on both sides, and then judge impartially.

Audire est opera pretium. Lat. HORACE.—“It is worth your while to hear.”—What I am about to disclose is worthy of your attention.

Audita querela. Law phrase.—“The complaint being heard.”—A writ which lies where a person has any thing to plead, without having a day in court to make his plea.

Auditque vocatus Apollo. Lat. VIRGIL.—“And Apollo hears when called upon.”—When the God of Poesy has not been fruitlessly invoked.

Au

Au fond. Fr.—“To the bottom.”—I know the man au fond.—I understand his character thoroughly.

Au plaisir fort de Dieu. Fr.—“At the strong disposal of God.”—Motto of VISC. EDGUMBE.

Aurum e stercore. Lat.—“Gold from dung.”—Valuable knowledge extracted from literary rubbish.

Aut nunquam tentes aut perfice. Lat.—“Either never attempt, or accomplish.”—Motto of the Duke of DORSET and Viscount SACKVILLE.

Avallanche. Fr.—The large and increasing ball of snow which frequently rolls destruction down the sides of the Alps and other high mountains.

Avec de la vertu, de la capacité, & une bonne conduite, l'on peut être insupportable; les manières que l'on néglige comme de petites choses sont souvent ce qui fait que les hommes décident de vous en bien ou en mal. Fr.—“With virtue, capacity, and good conduct, a man may yet be insupportable; certain modes of behaviour which are often neglected as beneath notice, are what frequently make the world judge well or ill of you.”

A verbis legis non est recedendum. Lat. Law Maxim.—“There is no departing from the words of the law.”—The Judges are not to make any interpretation contrary to the express words of the statute.

Avidos vicinum funus ut egros Exanimat, metusque metu sibi parcere cogit Sic teneros animos aliena opprobria sæpe Absterrent vitij. Lat. HORACE.—“As a neighbouring funeral terrifies the sick misers, and fear obliges them to have some regard “gard for themselves—so the disgrace of others will often deter tender minds from vice.”—Example, if properly held forth, has much influence, and particularly on young minds.

Aviendo pregonado vino, venden vinagre. Sp. Prov.—“After having cried up their wine, they sell us vinegar.”—This proverb is strongly applicable to those who having pre-excited attention, are the more ridiculous from their falling off in performance.

A vinculo matrimonii. Lat.—“From the chain or tie of marriage.”

Avito virescunt honores. Lat.—“He flourishes with hereditary honours.”—With honours transmitted from his ancestry. The motto of Lord CARDIFF, and of the Earl of BUTE.

Avise le fin. Fr.—“Consider the end.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl of CASSILIS.

Avi numerantur avorum. Lat.—“I follow a long train of ancestors.”—Motto of Lord GRANTLEY.

Aula Regis. Lat.—“The King’s Court.”—A court which accompanied the King wherever he travelled. This was the original of the present Court of King’s Bench.

Au pis aller. Fr.—“At the worst.”—Let the worst come to the worst.

Auribus teneo lupum. Lat. TERENCE.—“I hold a wolf by the ears.”—I know not how to quit or to retain my hold with safety.—This is similar to our English phrase of “catching a Tartar.”—The latter is supposed to arise from a trooper meeting a Tartar in the woods, and exclaiming that he had caught one. To the exclamation of his companions, "bring him along with you"—the reply was, "he won't let me."—The meaning of each is to represent a man grappling with such a difficulty, that he knows not how to advance or to recede.

AU———AU

A vostra salute. Ital.—"To your health."

*Auro pulsa fides, auro venalia jura,
Aurum lex sequitur, non sine lege pudor.*

Lat. PROP.

"By gold all good faith has been banished; by gold our rights are abused: the law itself follows gold, and soon there will be an end of every modest restraint."—The spirit of venality appears to have loosened all the bonds of society.

Aurea mediocritas. Lat.—"The golden medium." The happy intermediate state between pomp and poverty.

*Auream quisquis mediocritatem
Dilegit, tutus caret obsoleti
Sordibus testis, caret invidenda Sobrius aula.*

Lat. HORACE.

"Whoever is fond of the golden mean is serene, and exempted equally from the filth of an old mansion, and from the cares of an envious court."—The greatest share of human happiness is placed in the condition of mediocrity.

Auri sacra fames. Lat. VIRGIL.—"The accursed thirst of gold."—See the phrase at length, Quid non mortalia pectora, &c.

Aurum omnes victa pietate colunt. Lat. PROP.—"All men now worship gold, all other reverence being done away."—The age is become so venal, that nothing is respected but wealth and its possessors.

Aurum

AU——AU

Aurum potabile. Lat.—“Liquid or drinkable gold.”

—Some quacks in ancient times pretended that they could form, by a solution of this metal, a panacea, or medicine which should cure all diseases. The phrase is now applied to draughts of a different kind, such as are generally prescribed by orthodox ministers for the cure of political heresies.

Auspicium melioris ævi. Lat.—“A pledge of better times.”—Motto of the Duke of St. ALBAN’S.

Aussitot dit aussitot fait. Fr. Prov.—“No sooner said than done.”

Aut insanit homo, aut versus facit. Lat. HORACE.

—“The man is either mad or he is making verses.”—Either the man has lost his reason, or he has been bitten by a frantic Poetaster.

Auto da fè. Sp.—“An act of faith.”—The name given in Spain and Portugal to the broiling of Jews and hereticks for the love of God!

Autrefois acquit. Fr.—“Formerly acquitted.”—A plea by which the culprit states that he had been tried for the same offence, and found not guilty.

Aut amat, aut odit mulier, nil est tertium. Lat. SYRUS.—“A woman either loves or hates; there is no medium.”—Her passions are ever in extremes.

Autant on emporte le vent. Fr.—“So much the wind carries away.”—This is all idle talk.

Aut Cæsar, aut nullus. Lat.—“He will be CÆSAR or nobody.”—He will either reach the first station or not exist.

Autumnus libidinis quæstus æstivæ. Lat. JUV.—

“The autumn is the harvest of greedy death.”

—It has always been considered as the most unhealthy season.

Auxilia

A U ——— B E

Auxilia humilia firma consensus facit. Lat. LABE-RIUS.—“Union gives firmness and solidity to the humblest aids.”—Small states, when they coalesce with unanimity, are strong in their means. The most powerful coalitions will on the contrary moulder away from their disunion.

Ayez loyauté. F.—“Love loyalty.”—The motto of the Duke of BOLTON.

B.

Basis virtutum constantia. Lat.—“Steadiness is the foundation of all virtues.”—Motto of Viscount HEREFORD.

Bastardus nullius est filius, aut filius populi. Lat.
Law Maxim.—“A bastard is the son of no man, or the son of the people.”—A bastard being born out of marriage, his father is not known by the law.—He is therefore in law, as no man’s issue, it being regarded as uncertain from whom he is descended.

Beau Monde. Fr.—“The gay world.”—The world of fashion.

Beaux esprits. Fr.—“Gay spirits.”—Men of wit.

Bella femina che ride, vuol dir, borsa che piange.
Ital. Prov.—“The smiles of a pretty woman are the tears of the purse.”—The latter must be drained to ensure the continuance of the former.

Bella! horrida Bella! Lat.—“Wars! horrid wars!”—Motto of the Ir. Baron LISLE.

Bella matronis detestata. Lat. HORACE.—“Wars detested by matrons”—by orphans, widows, &c.
—by all but ambitious ministers, commissaries, contractors, and id genus omne.

Bellum

Bellum internecinum. Lat.—“A war of mutual destruction.”—A war to be continued until one or the other of the contending parties be ruined or extirminated.

Bellum lethale. Lat.—“A deadly war.”—The sense is nearly similar with that of the preceding phrase.

Bellum nec timendum, nec provocandum. Lat. PLINY.—“War is neither to be timidly shunned, nor unjustly to be provoked.”

Bellum pax rursus. Lat. TERENCE.—“A war and again a peace.”—Alternate warfare and reconciliation—applied by the author to the contests between lovers.

Beneficia usque eo lata sunt dum videntur exsolvi posse; ubi multum antevenerere pro gratia odium redditur. Lat. TACITUS.—“Benefits are so far acceptable, as the receiver thinks he may make an adequate return; but once exceeding that, hatred is returned instead of thanks.”—A man hates to be indebted for a favour which he knows he cannot repay.

Beneficia dare qui nescit, injuste petit. Lat. Prov.—“He who knows not how to confer a kindness, must ask for one unjustly.”

Beneficium accipere libertatem vendere est. Lat. LABERIUS.—“To receive a benefit is to sell your liberty.”—This is a phrase very often used, it is however but partially and circumstantially just. The sense of obligation is however not rarely a painful tie upon the feeling mind.

Bene

Bene si amico feceris, ne piget fecisse

Ut potius pudeat si non feceris. Lat. PIAUTUS.

“If you have acted kindly to your friend, do not regret that you have done so, as you should rather be ashamed of having acted otherwise.”

Benigna numine. Lat.—“By the favour of Providence.”—This is the motto of the first founder of the house of CHATHAM.

Benignus etiam dandi causam cogitat. Lat. Prov.—

“Even the benevolent man reflects on the cause of giving.”—There is but little merit in inconsiderate bounty.

Ben vengas si vengas solo. Spanish Prov.—“Thou comest well, if thou comest alone.”—Spoken of a misfortune.

Bis dat qui cito dat. Lat. Prov.—“He gives twice who gives soon.”—A promptitude in giving heightens a favour which may be depreciated by delay.

Bis est gratum quod opus est, si ultra offeras. Lat. Prov.—“That which is necessary is doubly grateful, if you offer it of your own accord.”—Spontaneous bounty is ever most acceptable.

Bis peccare in bello non licet. Lat. Prov.—“It is not permitted to err twice in war.”—In hostile operations an error is to be prevented by as much caution, as if it were irretrievable.

Bis vincit qui se vincit in victoria. Lat. SYRUS.—“He conquers twice who conquers in victory.”—He conquers his enemy by his valour, and subdues himself by his moderation.

Boctum

Bocotum in crasso jure sicut satum. Lat. How a calf.—“You would swear that he was born in the thick air of the Bocotians.”—The people of the Greek province of Bocotia were proverbially remarkable for their stupidity.

Bona fide. Lat.—“In good faith.”—Actually, in reality.

Bona malis paria non sunt, etiam pari numero; nec letitia ulla minimo moerore pensanda. Lat. PLINY.—“The enjoyments of this life are not equal to its evils, even in number. There is at the same time no joy which can be weighed against the smallest degree of grief or pain.”—This is the sentiment of a melancholy man. It must however be generally admitted, that the “compunctious visitings” of human life are such as to outweigh its most valued enjoyments.

Bonorum rerum consuetudo pessima est. Lat. SYRUS.—“The too constant use even of good things is hurtful.”—We should restrain ourselves so as to use, but not to abuse our enjoyments.

Bon avocat, mauvais voisin. Fr. Prov.—“A good lawyer is a bad neighbour.”—One of the popular satires on the professors of the law.

Bon gré, mal gré. French.—“With a good or ill grace.”—Whether the party wills it or not.

Boni pastoris est tondere pecus non deglubere. Lat. SUETONIUS.—“It is the part of a good shepherd to shear his flock, but not to flay them.”—This is a political maxim now grown out of use. The best minister at present is the man who can extort the most money from, not he who imposes the least burdens on the people.

Bon jour, bonsoir. Fr.—“A good day, a good work.”—This corresponds with the English proverb—“The better day, the better deed.”

Bonis nocet, quisquis pepercerit malis. Lat. SYRUS.
—“He hurts the good, who spares the bad.”

Bonis quod beneficit haud perit. Lat. PLAUT.—“The kindness, which is bestowed on the good, is never lost.”

Bonne bouche.—“A nice morsel—A delicate bit.”—Something reserved as a gratification.

Bonne & belle assez. Fr.—“Good and handsome enough.”—The motto of Earl FAUCONBERG.

Bonne rénom: de vaut mieux que ceinture dorée. Fr. Prov.—“A good name is better than a girdle of gold.”—Is preferable to wealth or splendour.

Bonum est fugienda aspicere in alieno malo. Lat. SYRUS.—“It is well for those who can infer from the misfortunes of others what are the things which they should avoid.”—In this case, without suffering adversity, they acquire that prudence which it inculcates.

Bonum magis carendo quam fruendo cernitur. Lat. Prov.—“That which is good is descried more strongly in its absence than in its enjoyment.”—Shakespeare has somewhere translated this maxim most admirably,
“That which we have we prize not to the worth,
“ But being lack’d and lost—why then we rate its value.”

Bonum summum, quod tendimus omnes. Lat. LUCRETIVS.—“That supreme good to which we all aspire.”

Boutez

Bautez en avant. Fr.—“Push forward.”—Motto of the Ir. Earl of BARRYMORE.

Brevis esse laboro, obscurus fio. Lat.—“I labour to be short, and I become obscure.”—A phrase applied to authors, who, aiming at terseness, leave so much unexplained as to become obscure to their readers, Brutum fulmen. Lat.—“A harmless thunder-bolt.”—A loud but ineffectual menace. A law which is not respected or obeyed. His discourse was a mere brutum fulmen—it was “full of sound and fury, signifying nothing.”

C.

Cacoethes. Gr.—Literally an evil habit or custom. It is never quoted alone, but always in combination with some other word, as in the three instances which follow.

Cacoethes carpendi.—“A rage for collecting.”

Cacoethes loquendi.—“A rage for speaking.”—A wish or itching frequently to speak in public.

Cacoethes scribendi.—“An itch for writing.”—He has the Cacoethes scribendi.—He is an arrant scribbler.

Cadit quæstio. Lat.—“The question falls, or drops to the ground.”—If matters be as stated, cadit quæstio, the point at law will not admit of a further discussion.

Cæca invidia est, nec quidquam aliud scit, quam detractare virtutes. Lat. LIVY.—“Envy is blind, and she has no other quality than that of detracting from virtue.”

CA—CA

Candor dat viribus alas. Lat.—“Truth gives wings to strength.”—The motto of the Ir. Earl of BELVEDERE.

Candida pax homines, trux decet ira feras. Lat. OVID.—“Fair peace becomes men; ferocious anger should belong to beasts.”

Candidè & constanter. Lat.—“Candidly and constantly.”—Motto of the Earl of COVENTRY.

Cantabit vacuus coram latrone viator. Lat. JUV.—“The empty traveller will sing before the robber.”—If poverty has its inconveniences, it has also its independence and security.

Capias. Law Lat.—“You may take.”—A writ to authorize the capture or taking of the defendant. It is divided into two sorts, viz.

Capias ad respondendum.—“You take to answer.”—A writ issuing to take the defendant for the purpose of making him answerable to the plaintiff; and Capias ad satisfaciendum.—“You take to satisfy.”—A writ of execution after judgment, empowering the officer to take and detain the body of the defendant until satisfaction be made to the plaintiff.

Captum te nidore suæ putat ille culina. Lat. JUVENAL.—“He thinks that you are taken with the smell of his kitchen.”—He is inclined to regard you as a parasite.

Caput mortuum. Lat.—“The dead head.”—In chymistry the ashes remaining in the crucible. Figuratively, “the worthless remains.”

Carec

Carere periculo, qui etiam tutus caret. Lat. SYRUS.—

“He is most free from danger, who, even when safe, is on his guard.”—A proverb which very happily illustrates the advantages arising from vigilance.

Carpe diem quam minime credula postero. Lat. HOR.—

—“Enjoy the present day, as distrusting that which is to follow.”—This is one of the maxims of the Epicurean school, which recommended, but no doubt unwisely, the immediate enjoyment of sensual pleasures, in preference to remote speculation.

Carte blanche. Fr.—“A blank sheet of paper.”—

To give carte blanche, is when one party is so far reduced as to sign his name to a blank paper, and to leave the other to prescribe the conditions. It imports of course “an unconditional submission.”

Car tel est notre plaisir. Fr.—“For such is our pleasure.”—

This was anciently the form of a regal ordinance, under the Norman line. It is now happily used, but in an ironical sense, to mark some act of despotic authority.

Cassis tutissima virtus. Lat. HORACE.—“Virtue is the safest shield.”—

This is adopted as the motto of Lord CHOLMONDELEY.

Castrant alios, ut libros suos per se graciles, alieno adipe suffarciant. Lat. JOVIUS.—“They castrate the books of other men, in order that with the fat of their works they may lard their own lean volumes.”—Applied to Plagiarists, in whose works whatever is good is found to be stolen.

Casus, quem sæpe transit, aliquando invenit. Lat. Prov.

—"Him whom the chance frequently passes over, it at some time finds."—The continuance of good fortune forms no ground of ultimate security. "The pitcher may go often to the well," &c.

Causa & origo est materia negotii. Lat. Law Maxim.

—"The cause and beginning is the matter of the business."—Every man has a right to enter into a tavern, and every lord to distrain his tenants beasts; but if in the former case a riot ensues, or if in the latter the landlord kills the distress, the law will infer that they entered for these purposes, and deem them trespassers from the beginning.

Caveat actor. Lat. Law Maxim.—"Let the actor or doer beware."—Let him look to the consequences of his own conduct.—If a landlord gives an acquittance to his tenant for the rent which is last due, the presumption is, that all rent in arrear has been duly discharged.

Caveat emptor, Lat.—"Let the buyer beware."—

Let the person concerned be on his guard.

Cautus enim metuit foveam lupus, accipiterque

Suspectos laqueos, & opertum milvius hamum.

Lat. HORACE.—

"The wolf once cautioned by experience dreads the pitfall, the hawk suspects the snare, and the kite the covered hook."

"For wily wolves the fatal Pit-fall fear,

"Kites fly the bait, and Hawks the latent snare."

FRANCIS.

Even animals learn to avoid that, by which they retain a sense of having been injured.

Cavendo

Cavendo tutus. Lat.—“Safe by caution.”—The motto of the house of CAVENDISH.

Cavendum est ne major pœna, quam culpa, sit; & ne iisdem de causis alii plebantur, alii ne appellentur quidem. Lat. CICERO.—“Care should be taken in all cases, that the punishment do not exceed the guilt; and also, that some men may not suffer for offences, which, when committed by others, are allowed to pass with impunity.”

Cedant arma togæ, concedat laurea linguæ. Lat.—“Let arms yield to the gown, and the laurel give way to the tongue.”—The power of eloquence is sometimes superior to military force.

Cede Deo. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Yield to Providence.”—Submit where all opposition must be vain.

Cede repugnanti, cedendo victor abibis. Lat. OVID.—“Yield to the opposer, by yielding you will obtain the victory.”—There are circumstances under which a prudent concession is equal to an advantage gained over your opponent.

Cedite Romani scriptores, cedite Graii.—“Yield ye Roman, and yield ye Greek writers. — Yield to a competitor who outweighs you all.”—This is a quotation generally employed in an ironical sense.

Celui qui devore la substance du pauvre, y trouve a la fin un os qui l'etrangle. Fr.—“He who devours the substance of the poor will find in it at length a bone to choak him.”—The great mass of the low and humble may be for a time exhausted by oppression; but their vengeance is generally hurled in the end at the head of their oppressor.

Celui-là est le mieux servi, qui n'a pas besoin de mettre les mains des autres au bout de ses bras. Fr. ROUSSEAU.—“That man is best served, who has no occasion to put the hands of others at the end of his arms.”—There is no maxim more just or more useful in common life, than this, that whatever a man can personally accomplish, he should never leave to be transacted by another person.

Celui qui se défait de son bien avant que de mourir, se prépare à bien souffrir. Fr.—“He that parts with his property before his death, prepares himself for much suffering.”—He will have to encounter a degree of insolent neglect, which he might have avoided by keeping his property at his own disposal.

Ce monde est plein de fous, & qui n'en veut pas voir, Doit se renfermer seul, & casser son miroir.

Fr. BOILEAU.—

“This world is full of fools, and he who would not wish to see one, must not only shut himself up alone, but also break his looking-glass.”

Ce qui fait qu'on n'est pas content de sa condition, c'est l'idée chimérique que l'on se forme du bonheur d'autrui. Fr.—“What makes many persons discontented with their own conditions, is the absurd idea which they form of the happiness of others.”

Ce qu'on nomme libéralité, n'est souvent que la vanité de donner, que nous aimons mieux que ce que nous donnons. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“That which is called liberality, is frequently nothing more than the vanity of giving, of which we are more fond, than of the thing given.”

Cernis

Celui qui a trouvé un bon gendre, a gagné un fils, mais celui, qui en a rencontré un mauvais, a perdu une fille. Fr.—“The man who has got a good son-in-law, has gained a son; but he who has found a bad one, has lost a daughter.

Ce n'est pas être bien aise que de rire. St. EVREMOND.
—“Laughing is not always a proof that the mind is at ease, or in composure.”

*Ce qui manque aux orateurs en profondeur
Ils vous la donnent en longueur.*

Fr. MONTESQUIEU.—

“What the orators want in depth, they give you in length.”—This cutting remark we must lay, was never more applicable than, with a few splendid exceptions, to the British senators.

Cernit omnia Deus vindex. Lat.—“There is an avenging God who sees all.”

Ce sont toujours les aventuriers, qui font des grandes choses, & non pas les souverains des grandes Empires. Fr. MONTESQUIEU.—“It is only adventurers that perform great actions, and not the sovereigns of large empires.”—This is a maxim which the commencement of the nineteenth century has elucidated, even beyond the expectation of its author.

C'est le ton qui fait la Musique. Fr.—“It is the tone that makes the music.”—By this it is intimated, that as much depends on the tone and manner in which words are employed, on certain occasions, as on the words themselves.

Certiorari. Law Latin.—“To be made more certain.”—A writ issuing to order the record of a cause, to be brought before a superior court.

Certum pete finem. Lat.—“Aim at a sure end.”—
Motto of the Ir. Viscount WICKLOW.

Cessante causa, cessat & effectus. Lat. Law Maxim.—

“When the cause is removed, the effect must cease to follow.”—Thus the release of a debt is a discharge also of the execution.

Ces discours, il est vrai, sont fort beaux dans un livre. Fr. BOILEAU.—“All this would do very well for a book,” i. e.—It is very shewy in theory, but not reducible to practice.

C'est fait de lui. Fr. Phrase.—“It is all over with him.”—He is a ruined man.

C'est là prospérité qui donne les amis, mais c'est l'adversité qui les éprouve. Fr.—“It is prosperity that gives us friends, but it is adversity that tries them.”

C'est là le diable. Fr. Phrase.—“There is the devil.”—There lies the whole difficulty.

C'est la source des combats des philosophes, dont les uns ont pris à tâche d'élever l'homme, en decouvrant ses grandeurs, & les autres de l'abaisser en représentant ses misères. Fr. PASCAL.—“The origin of the disputes between philosophers is, that one class of them have undertaken to raise man by displaying his greatness, and the other to debase him by shewing his miseries.”

C'est une grande habilité que de savoir cacher son habilité. Fr. ROCHEFOUCALT.—“The greatest skill is shewn in disguising our skill.”—The art of a painter or actor for instance is best shewn when the art, by which he produces a strong effect, is completely concealed.

C'est une grande folie de vouloir être sage tout seul. Fr. ROCHEFOUCALT.—“It is a great folly to think of being wise alone.”—None but a fool can suppose that he has a monopoly of good sense.

C'est

CE ——— CH

C'est le père aux écus. Fr. Phrase.—“He is the father of the crowns.”—He is the monied man.

C'est pour l'achever de peindre. Fr. Phrase.—“This is to finish his picture.”—This is to complete his character.

C'est un sot à vingt-quatre carats. Fr. Phrase.—“He is a fool of twenty-four carats.”—His folly is absolutely without any alloy.

C'est une bague au doigt. Fr. Phrase.—“It is a ring on your finger.”—It is as good as ready money.

C'est une autre chose. Fr. Phrase.—“It is quite a different thing.”—The facts completely differ from the statement.

Ceux qui n'aiment pas ont rarement de grandes joies : ceux qui aiment ont souvent de grandes tristesses. Fr. Prov.—“Those who do not love, seldom feel great enjoyments: those who do love, are frequently liable to deep sorrows.”

Chacun à son gout. Fr. Phrase.—“Every man to his taste.”—A proverbial remark in every language, on the prevailing diversity of choice and opinion.

Chacun dit du bien de son cœur & personne n'en ose dire de son esprit. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Every man speaks of the goodness of his heart, but no man dares to speak in the same manner of his wit.”

Chacun en particulier peut tromper & être trompé : personne n'a trompé tout le monde, & tout le monde n'a trompé personne. Fr. BOUHOURS.—“Every individual may deceive and be deceived, but no person has deceived the whole world, nor has the whole world ever deceived any person.”

Chaque

CH————CH

Chaque nation doit se gouverner selon le besoin de ses affaires & la conservation du bien publique. Fr.

—"Every nation ought to govern itself according to the necessity of its affairs, and the preservation of the public weal."—These being best known to the nation concerned, no other country or government can with justice or propriety interfere, unless it finds its own interests endangered.

Chaque oiseau trouve son nid beau. Fr. Phrase.—

"Every bird thinks his own nest handsome."—We are all most inclined to commend that which is our own.

Chat echaudé craint l'eau froide. Fr. Prov.—"A scalded cat dreads cold water."—This is a saying rather more pregnant than the English—"A burnt child dreads the fire."

Chasse-cousin. Fr.—"Chase-cousin."—Bad wine, such as is given for the purpose of driving away poor relations.

Chef d'œuvre. Fr.—"A master-piece."—An unrivalled performance.

Chevaux de frize. Fr. Mil. Term.—Stakes sharpened at each end, and fastened by the middle across each other to stop the progress of cavalry.

Che sarà sara. Prov. Ital.—"Whatever will be, will be."—This proverb which favours so strongly of the doctrine of fatalism, has, for some unknown reason, been chosen as the motto of the house of BEDFORD.

Chevalier

Chevalier d'industrie. Fr.—“A knight of industry.”
—A man who lives by ingenious and persevering fraud.

Chi t'ha offeso non te perdona mai. Ital. Prov.—
“The man who has offended you will never forgive you.”—There are some men who can never be reconciled to a person whom they have knowingly injured.

Chi non sa niente, non dubita de niente. Ital. Prov.—
“He who knows nothing doubts of nothing.”—Scepticism and curiosity are the great springs of knowledge; but ignorance, on the contrary, is found to go hand in hand with credulity.

Ciencia es locura se buen senso no la cura. Span. Prov.—
—“Science or learning is of little use, if it be not under the direction of good sense.”

Cineres credis curare sepultos? Lat.—“Do you think that the ashes of the dead can be by this affected?”—Do you think that they feel affected by the regard or contempt of the living?

Citius venit periculum cum contemnitur. Lat. LABERTUS.—“The danger arrives the sooner which is despised.”—The false contempt of an enemy naturally leads to insecurity.

Civitas ea autem in libertate est posita, quæ suis stat viribus, non ex alieno arbitrio pendet. Lat. LIVY.—“That state alone is free which rests upon its own strength, and depends not on the arbitrary will of another.”—Whatever may be the internal constitution of a state, its freedom can be no more than a shadow, if it is subjected in any way to a foreign interference.

Clarior

CL——CO

Clarior e tenebris. Lat.—“More bright from obscurity.”—The motto of the Irish Earl of MILTOWN.

Clausum fregit. Law Lat.—“He broke through the enclosure.”—A name given by a fiction of law to an action for debt, in which such a trespass is supposed to have taken place.

Cælum non animum mutant qui trans mare currunt. Lat. HORACE.—

“Those who cross the seas change their climate, but not their mind.”—This maxim of the poet is meant to enforce, that weak minds can derive but little advantage from the survey of foreign countries—or, in another sense, that the guilty cannot leave themselves behind.

Cælum non animum. Lat.—“You may change your climate, not your mind.”—Motto of E. WALDEGRAVE.

Cogi qui potest nescit mori. Lat. SENECA.—“The man who can be compelled, knows not how to die.”—He who is fearless of death may smile at the menace of compulsion.

Cognovit actionem. Lat. Law Maxim.—“He has acknowledged the action.”—This in law is where a defendant confesses the plaintiff's cause of action against him to be just and true; and after issue, suffers judgment to be entered against him without trial.

Calubrum in sinu fovere. Lat. ÆSOP.—“To nurse a snake in your bosom.”—To suffer a secret enemy to partake of your confidence.

Comes

Comes jucundus in viâ pro vehiculo est. Lat.—“An agreeable companion on a journey serves in the place of a carriage.”—His conversation will shorten the way, and beguile the fatigue.

Comitas inter gentes. Lat.—“Politeness between nations.”—That mutual consideration which is due from one civilized nation to another, which interferes even in their conflicts, and mitigates the asperities of warfare.

Commune periculum concordiam parat. Lat.—“A common danger produces unanimity.”—The menaces of a foreign foe in general put an end to civil dissensions.

Commune bonum. Lat.—“A common good.”—A matter of mutual or general advantage.

Communia propriè dicere. Lat. HORACE.—“To express common place things with propriety.”—This is stated by the poet to be the great difficulty of the dramatic author, whose scenes are drawn from middle life.

Communibus annis. Lat.—“One year with another.”—On the annual average.

Comme le voilà accommodé! Fr. Prov.—“How finely he is fitted!”—What a pickle he is in!

Comme il faut. Fr.—“As it should be.”—It is done comme il faut, it is neatly or properly executed.

Comme je fus. Fr.—“As I was.”—The motto of Viscount DUDLEY and WARD.

Commune vitium in magnis liberisque civitatibus, ut invidia gloriæ comes sit. Lat. CORN. NEP.—“It is an usual fault in great and free states, that envy should always be the companion of glory.”

glory."—Turbulence and jealousy are as much the characteristics of free states, as passive quiescence and implicit resignation are of despotic governments.

Compendiaria res improbitas, virtusque tarda. Lat.—

"Wickedness takes the shorter road, and virtue the longer."—Bad men sometimes arrive at pre-eminence, by a shorter, though less sure road, than those of a contrary description.

—————Componitur orbis

*Regis ad exemplum; nec sic inflectere fasces
Humanos edicta valent, quam vita regentis.*

Lat. CLAUDIAN.—

"The people are fashioned according to the example of their King: and edicts are of less power than the model which his life exhibits."—The fashions and morals take their progress downward, and every thing depends on high example.

Compos mentis. Law Lat.—"A man of a sound and composed mind."—A man in such a state of mind as to be qualified legally to execute a deed.

Compositum miraculi causâ. Lat. TACITUS.—"A narrative made up only for the sake of the wonder which it may occasion."—One of those fictions, the object of which is less to inform than to amaze the reader.

Comptant compté. Fr.—"The ready money being paid down."

Concordia discors. Lat.—"A jarring concord, or dissonant harmony."—Applied to an ill-suited junction of things or persons.

Concordia

Concordiæ res parvæ crescunt, discordiæ maximæ dilabuntur. Lat. SALLUST.—“By union the smallest states thrive and flourish, by discord the greatest are wasted and destroyed.”—This quotation is often and properly employed when stating the mischiefs which so frequently arise from civil dissensions.

Con amore. Ital. —“With love.”—He entered on the business con amore—with an earnest and particular zeal.

Condo & compono quæ mox depromere possim. Lat. HOR.—“I compose and lay up what I may soon after be able to bring forward.”—In my hours of leisure I form those sketches, which study may afterwards improve.

Confido, conquiesco. Lat.—“I confide, and am content.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl of DYSART.

Congè d'elire. Fr.—“A leave to elect.”—The King's permission to a dean and chapter, giving them leave to chuse a bishop. This is so far a mere form, as it is always accompanied by a letter, naming the person whom they must of course elect.

Conjunctio maris & fœminæ est de jure naturæ. Lat. Law Maxim.—“The conjunction of man and wife is of the law of nature.”

Consequitur quodcumque petit. Lat.—“He attains whatever he pursues.”—Motto of the Ir. Earl BECTIVE.

Constantia & virtute. Lat.—“By constancy and virtue.”—Motto of Lord AMHERST.

Consilio & animis. Lat.—“By wisdom and courage.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl of LAUDERDALE.

Conscia mens recti famæ mendacia ridet. Lat. OVID.
 —“The mind which is conscious of right, despises the lies of rumour.”—This is a maxim just in itself; but it is frequently abused. There are some species of calumny too dangerous to be overlooked.

Consensus facit legem. Law Maxim.—“Consent makes the law.”—When the parties make an agreement, the terms are of their mutual willing, and are no longer a matter of legal consideration, if not against the law.

Consuetudo manerii & loci est observanda. Lat. Law Maxim.—“The custom of the manor and of the place is to be observed.”

Consuetudo pro lege servatur. Lat. Law Maxim.—“Custom is to be held as a law.”—This and the preceding maxim only go to shew the principle—that where customs have prevailed from time immemorial, they have obtained the force of laws.

Contemneri est gravius stultitiæ, quam percuti. Lat.—“To folly it is more grievous to be despised than to be struck.”—Weak minds will sooner bear an insult than a reproach.

Contra bonos mores. Lat.—“Against good manners or morals.”—This quotation is generally used in legal discussions. If the act be not against law, it is an invasion upon morality.

Contra stimulum calces. Lat. TERENCE.—This is best translated by the phrase of St. PAUL.—“You kick against the pricks,” i. e. you attempt a vain opposition.

Contumacia.

Contredire, c'est quelquefois frapper a une porte pour savoir, s'il y a quelq'un dans la maison. Fr. Prov.

—"To contradict, means sometimes to knock at a door in order to know whether there is any body at home."—Contradiction does not always imply opposition. It is sometimes used to draw forth, and to examine the weight of a man's opinions or arguments.

Contre fortune bon cœur. Fr.—"A good heart against fortune."—A common phrase of admonition, to buoy up the spirits in case of disaster.

Conventio privatorum non potest publico juri derogare. Lat. Law Maxim.—"An agreement between individuals cannot set aside the public law."

Coram domino Rege. Lat.—"Before our Lord the King."

Coram nobis. Lat.—"Before us."—The vulgar say he was on his coram nobis—that is, he was brought before persons of authority.

Coram non judice. Lat.—"Before one who is not a judge."—The matter was coram non judice—it was before an improper tribunal.

Cordon. Fr. Milit. Term.—"A line,"—on which troops act and support each other.

Corpora lentè augeſcunt, cito extinguntur. TACIT.—"Bodies are slow of growth, but are rapid in their dissolution."

Corporis et fortunæ bonorum ut initium finis eſt. Omnia orta occidunt, & orta ſeneſcunt. Lat. SALUST.—"The blessings of health and fortune, as they have a beginning, ſo they muſt alſo find an end. Every thing riſes but to fall, and increaſes but to decay."

Corps diplomatique. Fr.—“The diplomatic body.”
—The ambassadors of several Courts acting under the diploma's which invest them with that character. It is sometimes used in a broader sense, to describe those men who are best acquainted with the diplomatic forms.

Corpus delicti. Law Phrase.—“The body of the crime.”—The whole nature of the offence.—The corpus delicti in many cases, as in that of a forged promissory note, is specially stated upon the record.

Corpus sine pectore. Lat. HORACE.—“A body without a soul.”—A dull and inanimate being.

Corruptio optimi pessima. Lat.—“The corruption of the best is productive of the worst.”—The best and purest institutions, when once vitiated and gangrened, are found in the process of corruption to outdo the very worst.

Corruptissima Republica, plurimæ leges. Lat. TACITUS.—“When the state is most corrupt, then the laws are most multiplied.”—The relaxed morals of a people may be estimated in some degree from the legal restraints which it is found necessary to impose.

Cor unum, via una. Lat.—“One heart, one way.”
—Motto of the Earl of EXETER.

Corpus onustum
Hesternis vitæ animus quodque prægravat undâ.

Lat. HORACE,
“The body loaded with yesterday's excess, also bears down the mind.”—The effect of dissipation is not only felt corporally, but mentally.

Corrumpunt bonos mores colloquia prava. Lat. PROV.
—“Depraved conversation will corrupt the best morals.”—Or, as in the English maxim—“Evil communication,” &c.

Cofa

Cosa fatta capo ha. Prov. Ital.—“A thing which is done has a head.”—There is, as it were, no life in a business until the main circumstance be completed. The statue may then be said to have gotten a head, and nothing is wanted but the finishing touches.

Coup de Main. Fr.—“A sudden or bold enterprise.”

Coup d'œil. Fr.—“A quick glance of the eye.”

Coup de grace. Fr.—“A stroke of mercy.”—The stroke which finished the sufferings of those who had been broken on the wheel.

Courage sans peur. Fr.—“Courage without fear.”
Motto of Lord GAGE.

Coute qui coute. Fr.—“Let it cost what it may.”—
At any expence.

Craignez honte. French.—“Fear shame.”—Motto of the Duke of PORTLAND.

Craignez tout d'un auteur en courroux. French.
BOILEAU.—“You are to apprehend the worst from an enraged author.”—The irritable temper of authors has long been a matter of notoriety. Thus HORACE mentions the genus irritabile vatum.—“The irritable race of poets.”

Gras credemus, hodie nihil. Lat. Prov.—“To-morrow we will believe, but nothing to-day.”—
Let us see what time may produce, for we cannot credit the present assertion.

Credat Judæus Apella. Lat. HORACE.—“Let the circumcised Jew believe it.”—A phrase of contemptuous incredulity. The Jews, when this was written, were treated pretty nearly as they are now: they were regarded as the outcasts of every community.

Credo quod habes, & habes. Lat.—“Believe that you have it, and you have it.”—Indulge your imagination, and it will gratify you in nearly an equal degree with the actual possession.

Credite posteri. Lat.—“Will posterity believe?”—Can they be led to think that such absurdities were accredited by their fore-fathers?

Credula res amor est. Lat. OVID.—“Love is an affair of credulity.”—Those who are in love believe every idle tale which flatters their expectations.

*Crescentem sequitur cura pecuniam
Majorumque fames. Multa petentibus
Desunt multa. Bene est cui Deus obtulit Parca quod satis est manu.*

Lat. HORACE.

“The accumulation of wealth is followed by an encrease of care, and by an appetite for more. He who seeks for much will ever be in want of much. It is best with him to whom God has given that which is sufficient, though every superfluity be withheld.”

Crescit amor nummi quantum ipsa pecunia crescit.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“The love of pelf encreases with the pelf.”—Avarice, like every other passion, encreases by indulgence.

Crescit indulgens sibi dirus hydrops. Lat. HOR.—

“The fatal dropsy gains on the patient from his gratifying his thirst.”—The same inference belongs to this as to the preceding quotation.

Crescit sub pondere virtus. Lat.—“Virtue grows under the imposed weight.”—The idea is taken from the received opinion of the palm-tree, which is said to grow the faster in proportion to the incumbent weight.—Motto of the Earl of DENBIGH.

Creta an carbone notandum. Lat.—“Whether to be marked with chalk or charcoal”—It was in this manner that the superstitious Romans distinguished their lucky and unlucky days.

Crimen læsæ Majestatis. Lat.—“The crime of wronging or injuring Majesty.”—The guilt of high treason.

*Crimina qui cernunt aliorum, non sua cernunt
Hi sapiunt aliis desipiuntque sibi.* Lat. OWEN.
“There are those who can see the faults of others, but who cannot discern their own.—These men are wise for others, and fools to themselves.”

———Crime ab uno

Disce omnes. Lat. VIRGIL.
“From a single offence, you may learn the nature of them all.”

Cruci dum spiro fido. Lat.—“Whilst I breathe I trust in the cross.”—Motto of the Ir. Viscount NETTERVILLE.

Crudelem medicum intemperans æger facit. Lat. SYRUS.—“A disorderly patient makes the physician cruel.”—He compels him to use restraints, which would otherwise be unnecessary.

Crux. Lat.—“A cross.”—Any thing particularly tormenting or vexatious, thus,

Crux criticarum, medicorum, mathematicarum, &c.—
“The greatest difficulty which can occur to critics, physicians, or mathematicians, &c.”

Crux est si metuas, quod vincere nequeas. Lat. AUSON.
—“It is a tormenting thing, to fear what you cannot overcome.”

Cucullus non facit monachum. Lat.—“The cowl does not make the friar.”—We are not to judge of the man from his disguise, or assumed character.

Cui bono? Lat.—“To what good” sc. will it tend? What is to be the advantage resulting from the measure which you propose?

Cuicunque aliquis quid concedit, concedere videtur & id, sine quo res ipsa esse non potest. Lat. Law Maxim.—“To whomsoever a man grants a thing, he grants that without which the thing cannot be enjoyed.”—A person, for instance, selling the timber on his estate, the buyer may cut down the trees and convey them away without being responsible for the injury which the grass may sustain, from carts, &c. during the necessary time of conveyance.

Cui gratia, fama, valetudo contingat abundè, Et mundus victus, & non deficiente crumena.

Lat. HORACE.

“Endowed with favour, fame, and health; with decent fare, and a purse not ill supplied.”—Such, in the opinion of the poet, are the qualities and possessions which should ground a man’s content, if not his happiness.

Cuilibet in arte sua credendum est. Lat. Proverb.—“Every man is to be trusted in his own art.”—We should, in general, give credit to men for superior skill in that art, or science, which they have made their peculiar study.

Cui licet quod majus, non debet quod minus est non licere. Lat. Law Maxim.—“He to whom the greater thing is lawful has certainly a right to do the lesser thing.”—Thus if a man has an office to himself and his heirs, he may make an assignee and, a fortiori, he may appoint a deputy.

Cui

CU———CU

Cui malo? Lat.—“To what evil” sc. will it tend?
—What or where is the mischief likely to arise from the measure proposed?

*Cui non conveniat sua res, ut calceus olim,
Si pedes major crit subvertet, si minor uret.*

Lat. HORACE.

“He to whom his fortune does not suit, it will act in the manner of a shoe; if too large, it will overturn him; if too small, ’twill gall him.”—A fine practical lesson to induce us to adapt our minds to our circumstances.

Cui prodest scelus, is fecit. Lat. SENECA.—“He has committed the crime, who has derived the profit.”—This as a general maxim is true, but not without some exceptions.

Cujus libet rei simulator atque dissimulator. Lat.
SALLUST of CATALINE.—“A man who could, with equal skill, pretend to be what he was not, and not to be what he really was.”
—A person deeply versed in the arts of hypocrisy,

Cujus est solum, ejus usque ad cælum. Lat. Law Maxim.—“He who has the property in the soil, has the same up to the sky.”—His neighbour must not therefore offend by making any improper projections to impend over his land or tenement.

*Cujus tu fidem in pecunia perspexeris,
Verere ei verba credere.* Lat. TERENCE.
“Can you fear to trust the word of a man, whose probity you have experienced in pecuniary affairs.”—There’s no touchstone of a man’s good faith beyond his punctuality in money matters.

Cul de sac. Fr.—“The bottom of a bag.”—A difficulty. A passage closed at the end.

—Cum

Cum altera lux venit

Jam cras hesternum consumpsimus; ecce aliud cras Egerit hos annos, & semper paulum erit ultra.

Lat. PERSIUS.

“When another day shall arrive, we shall find that we have consumed our yesterday’s tomorrow: another morrow shall arrive to propel our years, and still be a little beyond us.”—A strong reflection on the dilatory conduct of man, ever fixing for to-morrow that which he should do to-day, until his years have fled, and his opportunities are lost.

Cum corpore mentem

Crescere sentimus pariterque senescere.

Lat. LUCRET.

“We find that as the mind strengthens with the body it decays with it in like manner.”—Whatever be the advantages derived from experience, we see that the mind is debilitated by corporal infirmity.

Cum fortuna manet, vultum servatis amici

Cum cedit, turpi vertitis ora fugâ. Lat. OVID.

“Whilst fortune continues favourable, we have always the countenance of friends; but when she changes, they then turn their backs in shameful flight.”—This is a maxim so generally admitted, as not to require any particular illustration.

Cum licet fugere, ne quære litem. Lat. Prov.—“Do not seek the quarrel, or the suit, which there is an opportunity of escaping.”—Where there is an outlet, go neither to law nor to logger-heads.

Cum multis aliis quæ nunc prescribere longum est.

Lat.—“With many other matters which it would be now tedious to state.”—A summary which is generally placed at the end of a bead-roll of indifferent items, and in an ironical sense.

Cunctando

Cunctando restituit rem. Lat. ENNIUS.—“He restored his cause by delay.”—This praise was first given to FABIVS, who saved his country by avoiding the first onset of Hannibal. It is now generally applied to illustrate the advantages arising from caution, sagacity, and justifiable delay.

Cupido dominandi cunctis affectibus flagrantior est. Lat. TACITUS.—“The lust of power is the most flagrant of all the affections of the mind.”—Ambition may be termed the worst of vices, as it too often leads to the commission of every other crime.

Cur ante tubam tremor occupat artus. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Why should a tremor seize the limbs before the trumpet sounds.”—Wherefore those marks of trepidation before the danger is actually announced?

Curae leves loquuntur, ingentes sudent. Lat. SENECA.—“Light griefs may speak, deep sorrow’s tongue is bound.”—The anguished sufferer is silent, when complaints of a nature less severe are vented most loudly.

Cur omnium fit culpa, paucorum scelus?—“Why should the wickedness of a few be laid to the account of all?”

Currente calamo. Lat.—“With a running quill.”—Applied to works written with fluency and expedition.

Curtæ nescio quid semper abest rei. Lat. HORACE.—“A nameless something is always wanting to our imperfect fortune.”—The most opulent and happy, in the eyes of the world, if brought to a frank confession, would acknowledge that they felt some want or deficiency.

Custos

CU——DA

Custos morum. Lat.—“The guardian of morality.”
—Every judge is said, and ought, to be a custos morum.

Custos rotulorum. Lat.—The officer who has the custody of the rolls and records of the sessions of peace.

D.

Dabit Deus his quæque finem. Lat. VIRGIL.
“Providence will also put an end to these.”—
Generally spoken of public calamities, or infestations.

D'Accord. Fr.—“Agreed.”—In tune.

Da locum melioribus. Lat. TERENCE.—“Give place to your betters.”—Let a due deference be shewn to rank, to sex, and to superior station.

Damna minus consueta movent. Lat. JUVENAL.—
“The afflictions or losses to which we are accustomed affect us less deeply.”

Damnosa quid non imminuit dies? Lat. HORACE.—
“What does not injurious time diminish and impair?”—Every work of art and every production of nature is equally liable to injury from the lapse of ages.

Dammum appellandum est cum malâ fama lucrum.
Lat.—“The gain which is made at the expence of reputation should rather be set down as a loss.”

Dans l'art d'interresser consiste l'art d'écrire. Fr. DELILLE.—“In the art of interesting, consists the art of writing.”—The surest test of a writer of genius appears in arresting the feelings of the reader, and bearing them with him, through every every scene, without diminution or relaxation to the end. Men of inferior minds may amuse by florid descriptions; these however, “Play round the head; but come not near the heart.”

Dans les conseils d'un état, il ne faut pas tant regarder ce qu'on doit faire, que ce qu'on peut faire. Fr.
 —“In the councils of a state it is not so necessary to examine what ought to be done, as what can be done.”—The means are to be considered as well as the end.

Dans un pays libre, on crie beaucoup quoiqu'on souffre peu: dans un pays de tyrannie on se plaint peu quoiqu'on souffre beaucoup. Fr. CARNOT.—
 “In a free country there is much clamour with little suffering; in a despotic state there is little complaint, but much grievance.”—In a state of freedom, men sometimes speak loudly upon slight occasions; under a tyranny they are compelled to silence, even under the severest inflictions.

Dare pondus idonea fumo. Lat. PERSIUS.—“To give weight to smoke.”—To give to trifles an air of moment.

Da spatium tenuemque moram; male cuncta ministrat Impetus. Lat. STATIUS.—“Allow an interval for deliberation; all things are done badly that are done with violence and precipitancy.”

Data. Lat.—“Things granted.”—He proceeds on certain data—on premises which have been previously admitted.

Data fata secutus. Lat.—“Following his declared fate.”—Motto of Lord ST. JOHN.

Date obolum Belisaria. Lat.—“Give a farthing to BELISARIUS.”—This great General was reduced to beg in his old age. The phrase is therefore sometimes applied to fallen greatness.

Dat

DA——DE

Dat veniam corvis, vexat censura columbas. Lat. JUV.

—"Censure pardons the crows, whilst it harasses the doves."—This is a phrase of general use and application. The censorious too often fasten on the innocent, whilst, in their misplaced malice, the guilty are suffered to escape.

Davus sum non Œdipus. Lat. TERENCE.—"I am Davus (a simple servant), and not an Œdipus."—

I am not enough of a conjuror to divine the solution of your riddle. Œdipus, according to the Greek fables, had solved the enigma of the Sphinx. This was a monster, said to have the face of a woman, the body of a lion, and the wings of a griffin; and to tear to pieces, all those who could not answer this question. "Which is the animal that goes in the morning on four feet, at noon on two, and in the evening upon three?"—Œdipus said, that it was Man, who in his infancy crawled on all-fours; arriving at manhood, walked erect on two legs; and in the evening of life, was supported by a stick. The sphinx on hearing this solution, we are told, leaped from a rock, and destroyed herself.

Debouchure. Fr. Military Term.—"The mouth or opening of a strait or river."

De bon vouloir servir le roy. Fr.—"To serve the king with good will."—Motto of Earl TANKERVILLE.

Debito justitiæ. Lat. Law Phrase.—"By debt of justice."—By a claim justly established.

Decies repetita placebit. Lat. HORACE.—"It will continue to please, though ten times repeated."—This adulatory phrase is often applied to modern dramatic works in particular; but the event has seldom confirmed the prediction.

Desipimus

DE——DE

Decipimur specie recti. Lat. HORACE.—“We are deceived by the appearance of what is right—of rectitude.”—Fair appearances are necessary to the purposes of deception.

Dceptio visus. Lat.—“A deceiving of the sight.”—An illusion practised on the eye.

Decipit

*Frons prima multos:—rara mens intelligit
Quod interiore condidit cura angulo.*

Lat. JUVENAL.

“The first appearance deceives many. Our understandings seldom reach to that which has been carefully reposed in the inmost recesses of the mind.”—Those who attempt to judge at the first glance of the characters of men, will be most frequently disappointed. The manners and conversation of men of the world are artificial. It is only by some severe ordeal, or by a long experience, that their natural propensities are to be discovered.

Decori decus addit avito. Lat.—“He adds an honour to those of his ancestors.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl of KELLIE.

Decrevi. Lat.—“I have decreed.”—Motto of the Ir. Earl of WESTMEATH.

Dedimus potestatem. Lat.—“We have given power.”—A writ in law whereby commission is given to one or more private persons, to assist for the expedition of some act belonging to the judge. The words are used also to denote the commission of a justice of the peace, which begins in the same manner.

Didiscit animus sero quod didicit diu. Lat. SENECA.—“The mind unlearns with difficulty what it has long learned.”—Impressions long entertained are not easily erased.

De

DÉ———DÉ

De facto. Lat. Law Phrase.—“From the fact.”

De jure. Idem.—“From the law.”—These opposite phrases are best explained together. In some instances, the penalty attaches on the offender at the instant when the fact is committed; in others, not until he is convicted by law. In the former case, he is guilty de facto; in the latter, de jure.

Défaut de la cuirasse. Fr.—“The extremity or defective part of the armour.”—He was taken défaut de la cuirasse: he was attacked on his weak side.

De fide & officio judicis non recipitur questio. Lat. Law Maxim.—“No question can be entertained respecting the good intention and duty of the Judge.”—No presumption against him can be received in the first instance. There must be strong and full proof of malversation.

De gaieté de cœur. Fr.—“From gaiety of heart.” Sportively, wantonly.

Degeneres animos timor arguit. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Fear is the proof of a degenerate mind.”—This is an universal mode of arraigning timidity, which, in every state and country, is stated as a falling off from the valour of their ancestors.

De gustibus non est disputandum. Lat.—“There is no disputing about tastes.”—They are too many, and too various, to be the objects of rational discussion.

De haute lutte. Fr.—“By a violent struggle.”—By main force.

De lanâ caprinâ. Lat.—“About goat’s wool.”—“A dispute, de lanâ caprinâ, respecting a matter not worth discussion.

Delectando pariterque monendo. Lat. HORACE.—

“To give equal pleasure and instruction.”—

This best praise of an author, this great master has given elsewhere in other words—“Miscuit utile dulci.”—He combined that which was pleasurable with what was useful.

Delenda est Carthago. Lat.—“Carthage must be destroyed.”—The oft-repeated phrase of a Roman senator, tending to provoke the destruction of that rival city. It was lately used as a sort of war whoop, to urge a ‘War of extermination!’

Deliberandum est diu, quod statuendum semel. Lat. SYRUS.—“That should be considered long, which can be decided but once.”—Every precaution is necessary where the deed is irrevocable.

Deliberat Rema, perit Saguntum. Lat.—“Rome deliberates, and Saguntum perishes.”—We are slow to resolve, whilst our allies are in the extremity of danger.

Deliramenta doctrinæ. Lat.—“The wild speculations or wanderings of learned men.”—The Fantasies of those whom “too much learning hath made mad.”

Delirant reges, plectuntur Achivi. Lat.—HORACE.—“The monarchs err, the Greeks (i. e. the people) are punished.”—The following poetical paraphrase will render the quotation still more intelligible:

———“When doating monarchs urge “Unsound resolves, their subjects feel the “scourge.”

Delphinum

DE ——— DE

Delphinum appingit sylvis, in fructibus aprum.

Lat. HORACE.

"He paints a dolphin in the woods, and a boar in the waves."—He introduces objects which are unsuited to the scene.

De mal en pis. Fr.—"From bad to worse."

De monte alto. Lat.—"From a high mountain."

—Motto of the Ir. Baron De MONTALT.—

This appears to be what is not uncommon in the choice of motto's, a pun upon the family name.

De mortuis nil nisi bonum. Lat.—"Of the dead, let nothing be said but what is favourable."—This long-received maxim is by some not improperly amended by substituting verum for bonum.—

"Let nothing be said but what is true."

Denique non omnes eadem mirantur amantque.

Lat. HORACE.

"All men do not, in fine, admire or love the same things."—This is one of the numberless phrases, the sole tendency of which is to state the general diversity of taste and opinion.

De non apparentibus & non existentibus eadem est ratio. Lat.—"The reasoning must be the same with respect to things which do not appear, as to things which do not exist."

Deo date. Lat.—"Give to God."—The motto of Lord ARUNDEL.

Deo adjuvante non timendum. Lat.—"God assisting, there is nothing to be feared."—Motto of Ir. V. FITZWILLIAM.

Deo duce, ferro comitante. Lat.—"My God my guide, and my sword my companion."—The motto of the Irish Earl of CHARLEMONT.

Deo favente. Lat.—“With God’s favour.”

Deo juvante. Lat.—“With God’s assistance.”

Deo volente. Lat.—“God willing.”—So many phrases intimating a hope of the aid, or a submission to the will of Providence.

Deo non fortunâ. Lat.—“From God, not Fortune.”
—Motto of Lord DIGBY.

Depressus extollor. Lat.—“Having been depressed, I am exalted.”—Motto of the Ir. Visc. MOUNTGARRET.

Depôt. French Military Term.—“A store or Magazine.”

Dernier resort. Fr.—“The last resource.”

Desideratum. Lat.—“A thing desired.”—Such a work is a desideratum in that branch of literature.

→ Desinit in piscem mulier formosa superbo. Lat. HOR.
—“A woman elegantly formed above, ending in nothing but a fish.”—The idea is taken from the mermaid. The application is to literary works which give the fairest opening promise, and terminate in defect, and deformity.

Desunt cætera. Lat.—“The remainder is wanting,” placed at the end of an imperfect work.

Desunt inopiæ multa, avaritiæ omnia. Lat. SYRUS.
—“Poverty is in want of much, but avarice of every thing.”

Deteriores omnes sumus licentiâ. Lat. TERENCE.—
“We are all the worse for licence.”—The heart is generally deteriorated in those who can carry into act their own will, without responsibility or restriction.

Detour. French Military Term.—“A circuitous march.”

Detur aliquando otium quiesque fessis. Lat. SENECA.
—“Let ease and rest be sometimes granted to the wearied.”—Let there be due alternations of labour and repose.

Detur pulchriori. Lat.—“Let it be given to the fairest.”—This was the inscription on the apple which fable tells us was adjudged by Paris to the goddess Venus, to the mortification of Juno and Minerva.—Let the prize be given to the most deserving.

De vita hominis nulla cunctatio longa est. Lat. Law Maxim.—“When the life of a man is at stake, no delay that is afforded can be too long.”—By this humane maxim, it is intimated, that as the effect of a rash sentence cannot be recalled, we should pause and deliberate before we consign a fellow-creature to death. This maxim could not be too strongly impressed, if we did not conceive it to be a mere fiction of the poet, “Of wretches hung, that jurymen may dine!”

Deum cole, regem serva. Lat.—“Worship God and preserve the King.”—Motto of the Irish Viscounts INISKILLEN, and RANELAGH.

Deus nobis hæc otia fecit. Lat. VIRG.—“God has given to us this peace or leisure.”

Deus hæc fortasse benignâ Reducet in sedem vice. Lat. HORACE.
“Perhaps Providence by some happy change will restore things to their proper places.”

Dextra dare. Lat.—“To interchange right hands.”
—To give each other the most solemn assurance either of mutual support, or of mutual reconciliation.

Dii

DI——DI

Dies datus. Lat. Law Term.—“The day given.”
—The day or time appointed for the answer of the tenant or defendant.

Dies faustus. Lat.—“A lucky day.”

Dies infaustus. Lat.—“An unlucky day.”—These were marked by the superstitious Romans, the former with a white, and the latter with a black stone.

Dies non. Lat. Law Phrase. (The word Juridicus being understood.) The days on which no legal proceedings can take place. These are, all Sundays in the year; the Purification, in Hilary term; the Ascension, in Easter term; the festival of St. John Baptist, in Trinity term; and those of All Saints, and All Souls, in Michaelmas term.

Dieu avec nous.—“God with us.”—The motto of Lord BERKLEY.

Dieu defend le droit. Fr.—“God defends the right.”
—Motto of the Duke of MARLBOROUGH, and Earl SPENCER.

Dieu me conduise. Fr.—“May God conduct me.”
—Motto of Lord DELAVAL.

Dieu & mon droit. Fr.—“God and my right.”—The Motto of the Sovereigns of Great Britain.

Difficilem oportet aurem habere ad crimina. Lat. SYRUS.—“One should not lend an easy ear to criminal charges.”—To attack is so much more easy than to repel, that an accuser should ever be listened to with distrust.

DI——DI

Difficile est longum subito deponere amorem.

LAT. CATULLUS.

"It is difficult at once to relinquish a confirmed passion."—The poet speaks of the passion of love, but it is the same with every other, when once rooted by indulgence.

Difficile est satiram non scribere. LAT. JUVENAL.—

"It is difficult not to write satire;"—the times being such as to call for its severest correction.

Difficilis querulus, laudator temporis acti. LAT. HOR.

—"Mirth, complaining, and the eulogist of the times which are past."—This, generally speaking, is the just character of an old man. Age, we know, is querulous, and delights in the retrospect of its early enjoyments.

Digito monstrari & dici hic est. LAT. PERSIUS.—

"To be pointed at by the finger, and have it said, there goes the man."—Such is the ambition of many to be notorious.

Dignum laude virum Musa vetat mori. LAT. HOR.

—"The Muse forbids the virtuous man to die."
—She consecrates his name at least to immortality.

Dignus vindice nodus. LAT. HORACE.—"A knot worthy to be untied by such hands."—A difficulty which calls for the highest interference.

Dii penates. LAT.—"The household gods" among the ancients. Small images which they worshipped at home. It now sometimes is used in an ironical sense. They were such a man's Dii penates: they were the persons whom he caressed, entertained, and almost worshipped.

Dii abster visum. LAT. VIRG.—"It has seemed otherwise to the gods."—Providence has disposed of the matter in a different way.

——— Dii

——— Diis proximus ille est
Quam ratio, non ira movet, qui facta rependens
Consilia punire potest. Lat. CLAUDIAN.

“He is next to the gods, whom reason, and not passion, impels; and who, after weighing the facts, can measure the punishment with discretion.”—This is a pleasing picture of a mild governor.

Dilationes in lege sunt odiosæ. Lat. LAW MAXIM.—
 “Delays in the law are odious.”—This is a maxim, it is to be feared, rather belied in the practice. It can now go only to intimate that a dilatory plea cannot be received, unless the matter be supported by an affidavit.

Dimidium facti qui capit habet. Lat. HORACE.—
 This is literally translated by our own proverb
 —“What’s well begun, is half done.”

Diruit, ædificat, mutat quadrata rotundis. Lat. HOR.—
 —“He pulls down, he builds up, he changes the square into the round.”—He is perpetually changing, merely to gratify his own caprice.

Discipulus est prioris posterior dies. Lat. SYRUS.—
 “Each succeeding day is the scholar of that which preceded.”—The errors which we commit on one day, should teach us to conduct ourselves more wisely on those which follow.

Discite justitiam moniti & non temnere deos.
 Lat. VIRGIL.
 “Learn justice, being admonished, and not to despise the gods.”—Learn from infliction the sense of justice, and the respect which is due to Heaven.

Disfleur des bons mots. French.—“A sayer of good things.”—A would-be wit.

—Disjecti membra poeta. Lat. HORACE.—“The scattered remains of the poet.”—Distort a poetical passage as you will, there will still be found a remainder of poetic spirit.

Disponendo me, non mutando me. Lat.—“By disposing of me, not by changing me.”—Motto of the Duke of MANCHESTER.

Distrahit animum librorum multitudo. Lat.—SENECA.—“A multitude of books distracts the mind.”—But little of solid acquirement is to be expected from promiscuous reading.

Distringas. Law Phrase.—“You may distrain.”—A writ to empower the sheriff to that effect.

Dives agris, dives positus in fœnore nummis, Lat. HORACE.

“A person rich in lands, and money placed at usury.”—Used to describe a man of immense property.

——— Dives fieri qui vult

Et cito vult fieri.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“A man who wishes to become rich, and to acquire riches soon.”—A desperate adventurer.

Divide & impera. Lat.—“Divide and govern.”—This is the Machiavelian policy of almost all governments. By dividing a nation into parties, and pitting them against each other, the people are deprived of their intrinsic weight, and their rulers incline the scale as suits their caprice or discretion.

Divitiarum & formæ gloria fluxa atque fragilis; virtus clara, æternaque habetur. Lat. SALLUST.—“The praise of riches and of beauty is frail and transitory: virtue alone is clear and eternal.”

——— Dociles

Dociles imitandisTurpibus & pravis omnes sumus. Lat. JUVENAL.

“We are all easily taught to imitate that which is base and depraved.”—To be virtuous requires an effort. Our nature, if inert or unassisted, will slide towards depravity.

Doctrina sed vim promovet insitam. Lat. HORACE.

—“Learning but serves to bring forward the natural force of the mind.”—If the mind be devoid of that force, then learning is like “a lump of marle on a barren soil, encumbering what it cannot fertilize.”

Dolce cose a vedere, e dolci inganni. Ital. ARIOSTO.

—“Things sweet to see, and sweet deceptions.”—A phrase very frequently applied to specious, but deceitful appearances.

Dolus an virtus quis in hoste requirat? Lat. VIRG.

—“Who shall ask of an enemy whether he succeeded by stratagem or by valour?”—Either mode is to be adopted in cases of avowed hostility. The only question is, which is most likely to ensure success?

Dolus versatur in generalibus. Lat. Law Maxim.—

“Fraud lurks in loose generalities.”—It is in its nature, to deal in broad and general statements, without coming to close and proveable assertions.

Domini pudet non servitutis. Lat. SENECA.—

“I am ashamed of my master, and not of my servitude.”—There is no disgrace in obeying those who are worthy of command.

Dominium a possessione cepisse dicitur. Lat. Law

Maxim.—“Right is said to have its beginning from possession.”—This Maxim goes to prevent the disturbance of titles to estates. But if there there be proof of record established, it outweighs the memory of man, which by the statute 32 Henry VIII. is fixed at sixty years.

DO———DR

Dominus providebit. Lat.—“The Lord will provide.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl GLASGOW.

Donec eris felix, multos numerabis amicos. Lat. OVID.—“Whilst you are prosperous, you may count on having many friends.”—You will have at least many persons about you, who will take to themselves that appellation.

Dormitur aliquando Jus, moritur nunquam. Lat. Law Maxim.—“A right sometimes sleeps, but never dies.”—A right to land, for instance, is understood cannot die. If a man releases his right, it is extinguished for the time; but this is to be understood only of the right of the person making the release.

Dos d'ane. Fr.—“The ass's back.”—A military phrase used to describe a shelving ridge.

Das est magna parentum virtus. Lat.—“The virtue of parents is in itself a great portion.”—No inheritance can be more valuable than that of a fair fame transmitted from our ancestors.

Double entendre. Fr.—“A double meaning.”—It is generally used to mark an obscene allusion in disguise, or, as the phrase is, wrapt up in clean linen.

Doux yeux. Fr.—“Soft glances.”—To make the doux yeux—to interchange tender looks.

Droit d'aubaine. Fr.—“The right of escheat.”—By this law, which expired with the French monarchy, the personal property of every foreigner, dying within the king's dominions, escheated to the crown.

Droit

DR———DU

Droit des gens. Fr.—“The law of nations.”

Droit & avant. Fr.—“Right and forward.”—The motto of Visc. SYDNEY.

Dubiam salutem qui dat afflictis, negat. Lat. SENECA.—“He who holds out a doubtful safety to the afflicted, denies all hope.”

——— *Ducis ingenium, res
Adversa nudare solent, celare secunda.*

Lat. HORACE.

“Misfortunes lay open the skill of a general. Prosperous circumstances conceal his weakness.”

—It is less difficult, for instance, to gain a battle, than to conduct a retreat.

——— Ducimus autem

*Hes quoque felices, qui ferre incommoda vita,
Nec jactare jugum vitâ didicere magistra.*

Lat. JUVENAL.

“We are also to deem those happy, who, from the experience of life, have learned to bear its ills, and without descanting on their weight.”—

That experience which leads to resignation and composure, leads at the same time to comparative happiness.

Ducit amor patriæ. Lat.—“The love of my country leads me.”—Motto of the Ir. Baron MILFORD.

Du fort au faible. Fr.—“From the strong to the weak.”—One with another.

Dulce est desipere in loco. Lat. HOR.—“It is pleasant to play the fool in a proper place.”—There are seasons when it is permitted that wisdom may take the garb of frivolity, and without incurring any reproach.

Dulce

DU———DU

Dulce & decorum est pro patria mori. Lat. HOR.—

“It is pleasing and honourable to die for one’s country.”—This is an apophthegm cited in all wars, and in all ages. But sound philosophy will confine its application to the single case of our country’s being attacked. It is certainly honourable to die in repelling such an aggression.

Dulcis inexpertis cultura potentis amici

Expertus metuit.

Lat. HORACE.—

“Those who are unacquainted with the world take pleasure in the intimacy of a great man; those who are wiser dread its consequences.”—They know the jealousy and the hazards which await on such a connection.

Dum in dubio est animus, paulo momento huc illuc impellitur. Lat. TERENCE.—“Whilst the mind is in a state of uncertainty, the smallest impulse directs it to either side.”

Dum lego; assentior. Lat.—“Whilst I read, I assent.”—I yield implicitly to the writer’s opinions. This was used emphatically by Cicero, on reading Plato’s arguments on the immortality of the soul.

Dum spiro spero. Lat.—“Whilst I breathe, I hope.” Taken as their motto by the Irish Viscounts DILLON.

Dum vires annique sinunt tolerate laborem

Jam veniet tacito curva senecta pede.

Lat. OVID.—

“Whilst your strength and years permit, you should endure and encounter labour; remember that crooked age, with silent steps, will soon arrive.”

Dum vivimus vivamus. Lat.—“Whilst we live, let us live.”—We only live whilst we enjoy life; let us therefore enjoy it as long as we can.

Dum

Dum vitant stulti vitia, in contraria currunt. Lat.
HORACE.—“When fools seek to avoid one error, they fall into its opposite.”—They are ever in extremes.

—*D'un devot souvent au chrétien véritable,
La distance est deux fois plus longue; à mon avis,
Que du pôle antarctique au detroit de Davis.*

FR. BOILEAU.

“The distance between a devotee and a true christian, is often twice as great as that from the Southern Pole to Davis's Streights.”—The difference between hypocrisy and true devotion is almost immeasurable.

Duos qui sequitur lepores, neutrum capit. Lat. Prov.
“He who follows two hares is sure to catch neither.”—When the attention of a man is divided between many objects, he rarely attains any of them. He has, according to the English proverb, “too many irons in the fire.”

Durante bene placito. Lat.—“During our good pleasure.”—By this tenure the judges of this country once held their seats, at the will of the sovereign. They are now held more properly, “Quamdiu se bene gesserint.—As long as they shall conduct themselves well;” that is to say, during life, unless a criminal charge shall be made and proved against them.

Durante vita. Lat.—“During life.”—A clause in letters patent.

Durate & vosmet rebus servate secundis. Lat. VIRG.
—“Hold out and preserve yourselves for better circumstances.”—The hope of better times is the strongest argument which can be used to inspire the drooping resolution.

Durum!

DU———ER

Durum! sed levius fit patientia

Quicquid corrigere est nefas.

Lat. HORACE.

“It is harsh!—But that which it is impossible to correct becomes more light by patience.”

“’Tis hard, but patience must endure,

“And soothe the woes it cannot cure.”

FRANCIS.

Durum telum necessitas. Lat. Prov.—“Necessity is a hard weapon.”—It is dangerous to oppose those whom necessity has driven to extremes.

Dux femina facti. Lat. VIRG.—“A woman was the leader of the deed.”—This is a quotation often used, because it often happens that female spirit takes the lead in the greatest enterprises.

E.

Ea sub oculis posita negligimus; proximorum incuriosum, longinqua sectamur. Lat. PLINY.—“We neglect the things which are placed before our eyes, and regardless of what is within our reach, we pursue whatever is remote.”—This is frequently and properly applied to the rage for visiting foreign countries, in those who are absolutely unacquainted with their own;

“Abroad to see wonders the traveller goes,

“And neglects the fine things which lie under his nose.”

Eau bénite de cour. Fr.—“The holy water of the court.”—i. e. Court promises.

Ecce homo. Lat.—“Behold the man.”—The French say, Il a l'air d'un ecce homo.—He appears to be in a deplorable condition.

E flamma cibum petere. Lat. TERENCE.—“To get one’s bread out of the fire.”—To obtain a livelihood by the most desperate means.

Elyva,

EG———EH

Eÿou, wapa d'arn. Gr. Eggua para d'ate.—"Promise, and mischief is near."—This was the saying of THALES, one of the seven Sages of Greece. Nothing can lead into greater hazard than promises hastily and incautiously made.

Ego & Rex meus. Lat.—"I and my king."—This insolent transposition is attributed to Cardinal WOLSEY. It is sometimes quoted to mark an extraordinary instance of impertinent assumption.

Ego si risi quod ineptus Pastillos Rufillus olet—lividus & mordax videar.
Lat. HORACE.

"If I smile at the perfumes with which Rufillus is scented, must I be therefore regarded as envious or ill-natured?"—If, as a Satyrist, I lash the knave or coxcomb, shall my honest indignation be set down to the score of malice.

Ego spem pretio non emo. Lat. TERENCE.—"I do not buy hope with money."—I do not purchase expectation at so dear a rate.

*Eheu fugaces, Posthume, Posthume Labuntur anni, nec pietas moram
Rugis & instanti senectæ Afferet, indomitæ Morti.*

"Alas! Posthumus, our years are few and fleeting, nor can even piety delay the wrinkles of approaching age, or the progress of resistless death."

Eheu! quam brevibus pereunt ingentia causis. Lat. CLAUDIAN.—"Alas! by what slight means are great affairs brought to destruction."—What great events are sometimes brought about from little causes.

Elegit.

Elegit. Law Lat.—“He has chosen.”—A judicial writ directed to the Sheriff, empowering him to seize for damages recovered.

Elige eum, cujus tibi placuit & Vita & Oratio. Lat. SENECA.—“Choose that man of whose life, as well as whose eloquence, you can approve.”—Do not be misled by a specious harangue, but consider whether the conduct of the speaker through life has been such as to attach weight and respect to his opinions.

En barbette. Fr. Mil. Term.—“Said of a battery when the cannon are higher than the breast wall.”

En Dieu est ma fiance. Fr.—“In God is my trust.”—Motto of the Ir. Earl CARHAMPTON.

En Dieu est tout. Fr.—“In God is every thing.”—Motto of Earl STRAFFORD.

Enfans perdus. Fr.—“Lost children.”—Those troops which are stationed at the advanced or dangerous posts; in English termed the forlorn hope of the army.

Enfant gatè. Fr.—“A spoiled child.”

Enfant trouvé. Fr.—“A Foundling.”

Enfermer la loup dans la bergerie. Fr. Prov.—“To shut up the wolf in the sheep fold.”—Metaphorically, to patch up a disease.

Enfilade. Fr. Mil. Term.—“A row.”—Where a battery is placed so that it can fire along a pass; it is said to enfilade that pass. The troops within its range are enfiladed.

En flute. Fr.—“A large vessel is said to be en flute when she carries only her upper tier of guns; her hold being filled with stores.”—She is then only a transport of greater force.

En

EN——EO

En habiles gens. Fr.—“Like able men.”

En la rose je fleurie. Fr.—“I flourish in the rose.”
—Motto of the Duke of RICHMOND.

En masse. Fr.—“In a body.”—En foule.—“In a croud.”

En plein jour. Fr.—“In open day.”

En parole je vis. Fr.—“I live in the word.”—
Motto of Lord STAWELL.

En revanche. Fr.—“In return”—To make amends or requital.

En suivant la vérité. Fr.—“In following truth.”—
Motto of the Earl of PORTSMOUTH.

Entre les deux vins. Fr.—“Between the two wines.”—Neither absolutely drunk or sober, Entre nous. Fr.—“Between ourselves.”

En vieillissant on devient plus fou & plus sage. Fr.
ROUCHEFOUCAULT.—“When men grow old, they become more foolish and more wise.”
—At that period of life, some obstinate follies are found to have stricken deeper root, whilst others have been stunted by the lapse of time and by experience.

Eodem collyrio mederi omnibus. Lat.—“To cure all by the same salve.”—To play the quack, and vend a panacea for the cure of all disorders.

Eo instanti. Lat.—“At that instant.”

Eo magis præfulgebat quod non videbatur. Lat. TACITUS.—“He shone with the greater splendor, because he was not seen.”—This expression is used by the historian when speaking of the statue of a great man, which was invidiously removed.

moved from the view of a popular procession.—
It is not improperly employed in speaking of a retired statesman, who may live in the endeared recollection of the people, though withdrawn from their immediate notice.

Eo nomine. Lat.—“By that name.”—Under that description.

Eripuit cœlo fulmen, sceptrumque tyrannis. Lat.—
“He snatched the thunder from Heaven, and the sceptre from tyrants.”—This was the device made for the late Dr. BENJAMIN FRANK-LIN, when ambassador from the United States to France. The allusion is to his discovery, that the electrical fire and that of lightning are absolutely the same, and to the eminent share which he had in establishing the independence of America, his native country.

E se finxit velut araneus. Lat.—“He spun from himself like a spider.”—He had nothing to depend on but his own resources.

Espérance et Dieu. Fr.—“Hope and God.”—The motto of Lord LOVAINE.

Espérance en Dieu. Fr.—“Hope in God.”—The motto of the Duke of NORTHUMBERLAND.

Esprit de Corps. Fr.—“The spirit of the body.”— That zeal for their mutual honour which pervades every collective body, such as the gentlemen of the army, the bar, &c.

Esse quam videri malim. Lat.—“I should wish to be rather than to seem.”—I should prefer to be in fact estimable, than merely to be regarded as such by the world.—Motto of the Ir. Earl WINTERTON.

E/S

*Est modus in rebus sunt certi demique fines,
Quos ultra citraque nequit consistere rectum.*

Lat. HORACE.—

“There is a medium in all things. There are certain limits, beyond or at this side of which propriety cannot exist.”—This is a very popular quotation; it is used to illustrate the position, that every virtue consists in the middle. Thus generosity is the middle virtue, of which avarice and prodigality constitute the two extremes.

Est-ne Dei sedes nisi terra & pontus & aer Et cælum & virtus. Superos quod quærimus ultra Jupiter est, quodcunque vides, quocunque moveris.

Lat. LUCAN.

“Is there any other seat of the Divinity than the earth, the sea, and air, the heavens, and virtue; why do we seek the God beyond? He is whatever you see; he is wherever you move.”—This passage is often quoted as containing a sublime idea of the Deity, though falling from the pen of a heathen.

Esto perpetua. Lat.—“Be thou perpetual.”—May this institution be permanent.

Esto quod esse videris. Lat.—“Be what you seem to be.”—Motto of Lord SONDES.

Esto ut nunc multi, dives tibi, pauper amicis. Lat. JUVEN.—“Be, as many in the world now are; rich to yourself, and poor to your friends.”

*Est profecto Deus, qui quæ nos gerimus auditque & videt;
Neque id verum existimo, quod vulgo dicitur
Fortuna, humana finget artatque, ut lubet.*

Lat. TERENCE.

“There is certainly a GOD who sees and hears all that we do; I cannot believe that which is ordinarily said, that Fortune makes and un-G 2 makes makes all human affairs at pleasure.”—This is one of the numerous testimonies borne by the heathen writers to the existence of a First Cause. Their own mythology they considered, of course, as merely allegorical.

Est proprium stultitiæ aliorum cernere vitia, oblivisci suorum. Lat. CICERO.—“It is the peculiar faculty of fools, to discern the faults of others at the same time that they forget their own.”

—Est quoddam flere voluptas.
Explentur lacrymis, egeriturque dolor.

Lat. OVID.

“There is a certain pleasure in weeping: grief finds in tears both a satisfaction and a cure.”—There is, as SHAKESPEARE has it, “a luxury in grief;” and those know not the workings of the human heart, who attempt the task of consolation, before the first bursts of anguish shall have found free vent.

Est quoddam prodire tenus si non datur ultra. Lat. HORACE.—“It is something to proceed thus far, if it is not permitted to go further.”—That industry is to be approved which advances in a certain degree, though it fails of its proposed object.

Esurienti ne occurras. Lat.—“Do not encounter a hungry man.”—Risque not a contest with desperate necessity.

Et cætera. Lat.—“And the rest.”

Et credis cineres curare sepultos? Lat. VIRG.—“Do you think that the ashes of the dead are to be affected by the affairs or passions of the living?”

Et

Et decus et pretium recti. Lat.—“The ornament and the reward of virtue.”—Motto of the Duke of GRAFTON and Lord SOUTHAMPTON.

Etenim omnes artes, quæ ad humani tatem pertinent, habent quoddam commune vinculum, & quasi cognatione quodam inter se continentur. Lat. CIC. pro ARCHIA.—“All the arts which belong to polished life are held together by some common tie, and connected, as it were, by some intimate relationship.”—Such, for instance, is the relation between Painting, Poetry, and Music.

*Et errat longe mea quidem sententia
Qui imperium credit gravius esse aut stabilius,
Vi quod fit, quam illud quod amicitia adjungitur.*
Lat. TERENCE.

“It is a great error, according to my opinion, in those who believe that a government is more firm, or more assured, when it is supported by force, than when it exists by kindness and voluntary obedience.”—In governments, which exist by the mere effect of force and violence, there can be no certainty of duration.

Et genus & formam regina pecunia donat. Lat. HORACE.—“All powerful money gives both birth and beauty.”

*Et genus & proavos, et quæ non fecimus ipsi
Vix ea nostra voco.* Lat. OVID.

“For birth and ancestry, and what we have not ourselves achieved, we can scarcely call our own.”—This is frequently employed as being a just satire on the pride of birth, when not sustained by personal honour.

Et genus & virtus nisi cum re, vilior alga est. Lat. HORACE.—“Both virtue and birth, unless sustained by riches, are held more cheap than the seaweed.”—This and the preceding maxim, have equally been consecrated by time and truth.

Etiam fortes viros subitis terreri. Lat. TACITUS.
—“ Even bold men are to be shaken by sudden events.”—Events that are unforeseen will sometimes ruffle the most even temper, and disturb the firmest mind. The strongest mind is not proof against influence of surprise.

Et male tornatos incudi reddere versus. Lat. HORACE.—“ And to return verses which have been ill-formed to the anvil.”—Such is the wise recommendation of this great poet. Modern writers in general are too indolent to have recourse to this species of forgery!

Et meæ, si quid loquar audiendum
Vocis accedet bona pars. Lat. HORACE,
“ And if any opinion of mine is worthy of attention, it shall be given freely in his favour.”

Et mihi res, non me rebus, submittere conor. Lat. HORACE.—“ I endeavour to make circumstances submit to me, not to submit myself to circumstances.”—This line describes very strongly a mind where firmness and vigour are united.

Et minimæ vires frangere quassa valent. Lat. OVID de Tristibus.—“ A little force will break that which has been cracked before.”—When a man's spirits are once broken, he is afterwards easily subdued by the slightest occurrence.

Et nati natorum, & qui nascentur ab illis. Lat. HORACE.
“ And the children of our children, and those who shall be born of them.”—These things we shall feel and remember, and our nati natorum, &c.”—our posterity to the latest period.

Et vos quoque tela sparsimus. Lat.—“ And we too have flung our weapons.”—Motto of Lord RAWDON.

————— Et

——— *Et Phœbo dignâ locuti,
Quique suorum memores alios fecere merendo,
Omnibus his niveâ cinguntur tempora vittâ.*
Lat. VIRG.

“Those who spoke things worthy of Phœbus (the inspiring God), and those who made men recollect them for their deserts,—all have their temples bound with a snow-white ribbon.”—The poet is describing Elysium, and he assigns this as a distinctive mark to the poetic instructors, and to the benefactors of mankind.

——— *Et quæ sibi quisque timebat
Unius in miseri exitium conversa tulere.*
Lat. VIRG.

“And what each man feared for himself was easily borne, when it was turned to the destruction of a single wretch!”—The circumstance to which the poet alludes is this—one man out of an army was to be sacrificed, the lot being drawn, each man cheerfully submitted to the decision which removed his individual apprehensions. Such is human nature.

Et quiescenti agendum est, & agenti quiescendum est.
Lat. SENECA.—“The active should occasionally rest, and the inactive should apply to labour.”—The mind as well as the body requires alternate action and repose.

Et qui nolunt occidere quenquam Posse volunt.
Lat. JUVENAL.

“Even those who do not wish to kill a man, are willing to have that power.”—Such is the spirit of ambition in the human mind, that even those wish for a controul over their equals, who are least likely to abuse their power.

Etre pauvre sans être libre, c'est le pire état, où l'homme puisse tomber. Fr. ROUSSEAU.—“To be poor without being free, is the worst state into which man can fall.”—Poverty and slavery united, certainly form the worst condition of human existence.

Et sic de similibus. Lat.—“And so of the like.”—What is said of this will apply to every thing similar.

Ex abusu non arguitur ad usum. Lat. Law Maxim.—“No argument can be drawn from the abuse of a thing against its use.”—If a principle or practice be perverted from its right meaning or end, no solid argument against either can be drawn from such perversion. We have heard of debtors made the victims of personal spleen by their creditors; but it would not be fair to argue, on this ground alone, against the practice of imprisonment for debt.

Ex cathedra. Lat.—“From the chair.”—An ordinance, ex cathedra, pronounced from high authority.

Excessus in jure reprobatur. Lat. Law Maxim.—“All excess is condemned by the law.”—Whatever the law ordains must be within the rules of reason. Thus the law awards liberal, but it by no means allows excessive damages.

Ex curia. Lat.—“Out of court.”

Ex debito justitiæ. Lat.—“From what is due to justice.”

Ex delicto. Lat.—“From the crime.”

Exceptio probat regulam. Lat. Law Maxim.—“The exception proves the existence of the rule.”

Excerpta.

EX———EX

Excerpta. Lat.—“Extra^{ts}.”—Abridged notices taken from a work.

Excitari non hebescere. Lat.—“Spirited, not inactive.”—Motto of Lord WALSINGHAM.

Ex concessio. Lat.—“From what has been granted.”—Arguments, ex concessio, from admissions made by an adversary.

Exeat aulâ qui vult esse pius. Lat. LUCRET.—“Let him who will be good retire from the Court.”—The satirists of very early days have noticed Courts as hot-beds of immorality.

Exemplo plus quam ratione vivimus. Lat.—“We live more by example than by reason.”—Most men act rather upon the precedents set by others, in like cases, than on their individual judgment. Those who are high in place and authority, should therefore be cautious as to the nature of the example which they hold forth to others.

Exempla quodcumque malo committitur, ipsi displicet auctori. Lat. JUVENAL.—“Whatever is committed from a bad example is displeasing even to its author.”—We hate those faults in others, of which we have ourselves set the example.

Exegi monumentum ære perennius. Lat. HORACE.—“I have completed a monument more lasting than brass.”—This phrase is justly applied by the poet to his own works. It is now generally used in an ironical sense.

Exigui numero sed bello vivida virtus. Lat. VIRG.—“Small in number, but of tried and war-proof valour.”—A quotation not seldom resorted to, for the purpose of encouraging the lesser to resist the greater force.

Ex

EX——EX

Ex mero motu. Lat.—“From a mere motion.”—
From a man's own free will, without suggestion or constraint.

Ex necessitate rei. Lat.—“From the necessity of the case.”—Arising from the urgency of circumstances.

Ex nihilo nihil fit. Lat.—“Nothing can come of nothing.”

Ex officio. Lat.—“By virtue of his office.”—As a matter of duty.

Ex parte. Lat.—“On one side.”—Ex parte evidence,—that testimony which, as before a grand jury, is delivered in only on the side of the prosecution.

Ex pede Herculem. Lat.—“Judge of the size of the statue of Hercules from that of the foot.”—Decide upon the whole from the specimen which is furnished.

Experto crede. Lat. VIRG.—“Believe one who has experience to justify his opinion.”

Expertus metuit. Lat. HORACE.—“The man who has experience dreads it.”—The original application was to the friendship of the great. The phrase however is often and variously applied.

Explorant adversa viros, Perque aspera dura Nititur ad laudem virtus interrita clivo.

Lat. SILIUS ITALICUS.

“Adversity tries men; but virtue struggles after fame regardless of the adverse heights.”—The first part of this quotation refers to an axiom which is universally admitted.

Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. Lat. Law Maxim.—“The naming of one man is the exclusion of the other.”

Expressum

EX ——— FA

Expressum facit cessare tacitum. Lat. Law Maxim.—“A matter expressed, causes that to cease which otherwise, by intendment of law, would have been implied.”—An express covenant qualifies the generality of the law, and restrains it from going further than is warranted by the agreement of the parties.

Ex quovis ligno non fit Mercurius. Lat. Proverb.—“A Mercury is not to be carved out of every wood.”—This corresponds with the homely proverb—“You cannot make a silk purse, &c.”

Extinctus amabitur idem. Lat. HORACE.—“The same man when dead shall be beloved.”—Envy pursues the living. No man can expect to share the honours which are due to merit, until after his decease.

Ex tempore. Lat.—“Out of hand—without delay, or loss of time.”

Ex uno disce omnes. Lat.—“From one you may learn all.”—From this specimen you may judge of the remainder.

F.

Faber suæ fortunæ. Lat.—“The architect of his own fortune.”

Facietiarum apud præpotentes in longum memoria est.—Lat. TACITUS.—“The powerful hold in deep remembrance an ill-timed pleasantry.”—It is dangerous to sport with the feelings of the great. An unlucky jest has often been construed into a crime, by a despotic sovereign, or an arbitrary government,

———Facie

— Facies non omnibus una

Non diversa tamen, qualem debet esse fororum.

Lat. OVID.

"The face was not the same with all. It is not however materially different; the resemblance was such as should appear between sisters."—These lines which were originally used to express a family-likeness, are now employed to mark those political circumstances, which from their similitude bespeak the same political parent.

Facile est inventis addere. Lat.—"It is easy to add to things already invented."—This is a maxim frequently quoted abroad, in order to vilify the English genius. But leaving our original inventions out of the question, every unprejudiced man will allow, that the improvements which this country has made, have incalculably out-valued the hints which, in some particular cases, we have borrowed.

Facile omnes cum valeamus recta consilia

Aggritis damus. Tu si hic sis aliter sentias.

Lat. TERENCE.

"We can all, when we are well, give good counsel to the sick. Were you in my place, you would feel otherwise."—We think and feel for others differently from what we should do for ourselves were we in a similar situation.

Facile princeps. Lat.—"The admitted chief."—
The first man without dispute.

— Facilis descensus Averni.

*Sed revocare gradum, superasque evadere ad auras,
Hic labor hoc opus est.*

Lat. VIRGIL.

"The descent into hell is easy, but to recal your steps, and re-ascend to the upper skies, forms the difficulty and the labour."—The poet speaks speaks of the descent of Æneas into the infernal regions. In its general application, it means that it is much easier for a man to get into, than to extricate himself from any difficulty, or danger.

——— Facilius crescit quam inchoatur dignitas. Lat.

LABERIUS. —“It is more easy to obtain an accession of dignity, than to acquire it in the first instance.” —It is with respect, as with opulence; the first beginnings of both are difficult, but each is afterwards easily increased.

Facinus quos inquinat æquat.

Lat. LUCAN.

“Those whom guilt stains, it equals.” —The expression is nervous and happy. Nothing can be so great a leveller as the mutual consciousness of criminality.

Facit indignatio versum. Lat. —“The verses flow from indignation.” —My strong feelings impel me to write.

Façon de parler. Fr. —“A manner of speaking.” —C'est ma façon de parler. —“It is the mode in which I chuse to express myself.”

Fac simile. Lat. —“Do the like.” —A close imitation. —An engraved resemblance of a man's hand-writing, &c.

Faire sans dire. Fr. —“To act without ostentation.” —The motto of Lord HOLLAND and of the Earl of ILCHESTER.

Faire son devoir. Fr. —“To do my duty.” —Motto of the Ir. Earl of RODEN.

Fallacia alia aliam trudit. Lat. TERENCE. —“One imposture or fallacy produces another.” —Any one falsehood or deceit is naturally the parent of many others.

Fallentis

F A ——— F A

Fallentis semita vitæ. Lat. HORACE.—“The deceitful path of life.”

*Fallit enim vitium, specie virtutis & umbra;
Cum triste sit habitu—vultu & veste severum.*

Lat. JUVENAL.

“Vice can deceive under the shape and shadow of Virtue, when sad and severe in its dress and countenance.”—Such is the garb and appearance which is generally worn by profound hypocritify.

*Fallitur egregio quisquis sub principe credet
Servitium. Nunquam libertas gratior extat Quam sub rege pio.*

Lat. CLAUDIAN.

“That man is deceived who thinks it slavery to live under an excellent prince.—Never did liberty appear in a more gracious form, than under a pious King.”—This once was poetic incense offered to an Emperor. It is now quoted as an axiom by the advocates for absolute monarchy.

Falsus honor juvat & mendax infamia terret Quem nisi mendosum & mendacem?

Lat. HORACE.

“False honour aids, and calumny deters, none but the vicious and the liar.”—The man of spirit and integrity will equally despise the encomium and the aspersion which are founded upon falsehood.

Famæ damna majora, quam quæ estimari possint. Lat. LIVY.—“The injury done to character is so great, that it cannot possibly be estimated”—He who “robs me of my good name—makes me so poor indeed,” that I never can have a full measure of reparation.

Fare—fac. Lat.—“Speak—do.”—Motto of the Sc. Baron FAIRFAX.

Fari quæ sentiat. Lat.—“To speak what he thinks.”—The motto of the Earl of OXFORD, and of Lord WALPOLE.

Fas est et ab hoste doceri. Lat.—“It is fair to derive instruction even from an enemy.”—He who notices the mistakes of a foe, gains from thence a lesson of advantage.

Fastidientis est stomachi multa degustare. Lat. SENECA.—“It proves a squeamish stomach to taste of many things.”—A weak appetite, taken in any sense, is only to be allured by variety.

Fata obstant. Lat.—“The fates oppose it.”—It is in the destiny of things that the matters should be otherwise settled.

Fatetur facinus is qui judicium fugit. Lat. LAW MAXIM.—“He confesses his crime who flies from judgment.”—His flight is a tacit admission of his guilt.

Favete linguis. Lat.—“Favour by your tongues.”—Give attention whilst the business proceeds. A solemn admonition repeatedly given whilst the superstitious rites of the Romans were in the act of being performed.

Fax mentis, incendium gloriæ. Lat.—“The torch of the mind is the flame of glory.”—Motto of the Ir. Earl of GRANARD.

Fax populi. Lat.—“The dregs of the people.”—The Canaille.

Felices ter & amplius

Quos irrupta tenet copula, nec malis

Divulsus querimoniis,

Suprema citius solvet amor die.

Lat. HORACE.

“Happy and thrice happy are those, who enjoy an uninterrupted union, and whose love, unbroken broken by any four complaints, shall not dissolve until the last day."—There is no happiness on earth exceeding that of reciprocal satisfaction in a conjugal state.

Felicitas multos habet amicos. Lat.—“Happiness has many friends.”—All men court the intercourse of the prosperous.

Felicitas nutrix est iracundia. Lat. Proverb.—“Prosperity is the nurse of anger.”—It leads men to indulge their passions and forget themselves.

Felix quem faciunt aliena pericula cautum. Lat.—“Happy are they who can learn prudence from the danger of others;”—As they do not purchase it by personal suffering.

Felix qui nihil debet. Lat.—“Happy is the man who owes nothing.”

Felix qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Happy is the man who is skilled in tracing effects up to their causes.”

Felo de se. Law Term.—“A felon of himself.”—A person of sound mind who voluntarily puts an end to his existence.

Femme couverte. Fr.—“A covered or married woman.”

Femme sole. Fr.—“A spinster—a woman unmarried.”

Fera natura. Lat.—“Of a wild nature.”—This phrase is generally used to describe those animals which, being of a wild and savage nature, are the common property of all. Tame animals, on the other hand, which are the absolute property of man, are called Mansueta, from manui assueta, “accustomed to the hand,” or domita natura, “of a tamed and subdued nature.”

Ferme ornée. Fr.—“A decorated farm.”—A farm in which, though ornament be introduced; its useful purposes are not overlooked.

*Fertilior segetes æst alienis semper in agris
Vicinumque pecus grandius æbet habet.*

Lat. OVID.

“The crop is always greater in the lands of another, and the cattle of our neighbour are deemed more productive than our own.”—Such is the nature of man; most persons are of opinion, that they have not their proper share in the goods of Fortune.

Festina lente. Lat. AUGUSTUS CÆSAR.—“Hasten slowly.”—Do not let impetuosity betray you into imprudence. This, by a miserable pun, is taken as the motto of the ON-SLOW family; and also of the Irish Baron DUNSANY.

*Festinare nocet; nocet & cunctatio sæpe;
Tempore quæque suo qui facit, ille sapit.*

Lat. OVID.

“It is injurious to hasten, and delay is also frequently injurious.—That man is wise, who does every thing in its proper time.”—The prudent man will equally avoid the extremes of tardiness and of precipitation:

*Festinat rapido cursu decurrere velox
Flosculus augustæ, miseræque brevissima vitæ
Portio: dum ferta, unguenta, puellas
Pescimus, obrepit non intellecta senectus.*

Lat. JUVENAL.

“The flower of our short-lived existence fades rapidly into decline; its course is speedily terminated:—whilst we call for garlands, for perfumes, and for girls, old age steals upon us by surprise.”—No other explanation of this serious monition is necessary, than to say that the Romans wore wreaths of roses, and were perfumed at their banquets.

Fête champêtre. Fr.—“A rural feast.”—An entertainment, with rustic sports, given in the open air.

Fiat. Lat.—“Let it be done.”—A word used to signify a peremptory and decisive order.

Fiat justitia ruat cælum. Lat.—“Let justice be done though the heavens should fall.”—Though ruin should ensue, let justice take its course.

Fiat lux. Lat.—“Let there be light.”

Ficte voluptatis causa sunt proximæ veris.

Lat. HORACE.

“Let the feigned sources of pleasure be as near as possible to the true.”—This is a judicious advice to poets. In indulging the imagination, let not the departure be too great from probability.

Fide & fortitudine. Lat.—“By faith and fortitude.”—Motto of the Earl of ESSEX.

Fidélité est de Dieu. Fr.—“Fidelity is of God.”—Motto of the Ir. Visc. POWERSCOURT.

Fide & fiducia. Lat.—“By faith and courage.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl of ROSEBERRY.

Fidei coticula crux. Lat.—“The cross is the touchstone of faith.”—Motto of Earl CLARENDON, Earl JERSEY, and of the Ir. Earl GRANDISON.

Fideli certa merces. Lat.—“The faithful are certain of their reward.”—Motto of Earl BORINGDON.

Fidelis ad urnam. Lat.—“Faithful to the ashes.”—Motto of the Irish Baron SUNDERLIN.

Fideliter. Lat.—“Faithfully.”—Motto of the Sc. Baron BANFF.

Fides probata coronat. Lat.—“Approved faith crowns.”—Motto of the Scotch Earl MARCHMONT.

Fide

FI———FL

Fide & amore. Lat.—“By faith and love.”—Motto of the Earl of HERTFORD.

Fidus & audax. Lat.—“Faithful and intrepid.”—Motto of the Irish Baron LISMORE.

Fieri facias. Law Lat.—“Cause it to be done.”—A judicial writ addressed to the sheriff, empowering him to levy the amount of a debt, or damages recovered.

Fille de joie. Fr.—“A daughter of pleasure.”—A prostitute.

Filius nullius. Lat.—“The son of nobody.”—A bastard, so called because, by common law, he cannot have an inheritance.

Finem respice. Lat.—“Look to the end.”—Motto of Lord CLIFTON.

Finis coronat opus. Lat.—“The end crowns the work.”—It is impossible to decide on the merits of an affair, until it is completely terminated.

Flagrante bello. Lat.—“Whilst the war is raging.”—During hostilities.

Flagranti delicto. Lat.—“In the commission of the crime.”—A person apprehended flagranti delicto, with full evidence of his guilt.

Flamma per incensas citius sedetur aristas. Lat.—“The flames are sooner to be extinguished, when once spread amongst the standing corn.”—This is figuratively applied to the rapid propagation of any destructive opinion, whether political or religious.

Flebile iudicium. Lat.—“A sad mockery.”—A derision to be lamented of something highly just and respectable.

Flebit & insignis tota cantabitur urbe.

Lat. HORACE.

"He shall regret it, and become the sad burden of some merry song."—Spoken of any one who shall provoke the indignation of the poet.

Flectere si nequeo superos, Acheronta movebo.

Lat. VIRGIL.

"If I cannot influence the gods, I shall move all hell."—Acheron, a river of the infernal regions, in the Pagan mythology, is here put figuratively for the whole. This language is frequently put into the mouth of a political opponent, of whom it is supposed, that if he cannot effect his purposes by laudable means, he will still endeavour to effect them by resorting to the worst and lowest agency.

Flecti non frangi. Lat.—"To bend not to break."
—Motto of the Irish Viscount PALMERSTON.

Fleche. Fr. mil. term.—"An arrow."—A small fort open to your army, but with a ditch and breast-work towards the enemy. It is so called from its resemblance to the point of that weapon.

Floriferis ut apes in saltibus omnia limant.

Lat. LUCRET.

"As bees taste of every thing in flowery lawns." They collect the most precious juices of every flower.—The motto is generally chosen by selectors, who either cull, or affect to cull the beauties of many authors.

Fœcunda culpæ sæcula nuptias

Primum inquinavere & genus & dentas.

Lat. HORACE.

"This age, fertile of guilt, has first polluted the marriage bed, and with it our houses and our race."—The poet seems to have calculated this quotation for the meridian of London at the close of the 18th century.

Fœcundi

Fœcundi calices quem non fecere disertum. Lat. HOR.
—"Whom has not the inspiring bowl made eloquent!"—Every man can converse with fluency when his spirits have been raised by wine.

Fœnum habet in cornu. Lat. Prov.—"He carries hay upon his horn." It was the custom of the ancients to put a wisp of hay about the horns of a mad bull. He bears evident signs of madness.

Formidabilior cervorum exercitus, duce leone, quam leonum cervo. Lat. Prov.—"An army of stags is more to be feared under the command of a lion, than an army of lions led by a stag."—A proverb which intimates that less depends on the discipline or valour of an army than on the skill and ability of its general.

Formosa facies muta commendatio est. Lat. LABER.
—"A pleasing countenance is a silent recommendation."

——— Forsan & hæc olim meminisse juvabit:
Durate & rebus vosmet servate secundis.

Lat. VIRG.

"Perhaps the remembrance of these events may prove a source of future pleasure. Endure them therefore, and reserve yourselves for more prosperous circumstances."—A most powerful appeal to companions in adversity.

Forsan miseros meliora sequentur. Lat. VIRG.

"Perhaps a better fate awaits on the afflicted."—
A topic of consolation similar to the preceding.

Forte scutum salus ducum. Lat.—"A strong shield is the safety of commanders."—Motto of the Irish Earl of CLERMONT. The three first syllables form a pun on the family name, Fortescue.

Fortem pectus animam. Lat.—“With for a strong mind.”—Motto of Lord SAY and SEE.

Fortes fortuna juvat. Lat.—“Fortune assists the bold.”—Vigorous enterprize is commonly successful.

Forti & fidei nil difficile. Lat.—“Nothing is difficult to the brave and faithful.”—Motto of the Irish Baron MUSKERRY.

Fortis sub forte fatiscet. Lat.—“A brave man will yield to a braver man.”—Motto of the Irish Earl of UPPER OSSORY.

Fortis cadere, cedere non potest. Lat.—“The brave man may fall, but cannot yield.”—Motto of the Irish Earl of DROGHEDA.

Fortiter & recte. Lat.—“Courageously and honourably.”—Motto of Lord HEATHFIELD.

Fortiter geret crucem. Lat.—“He will bravely support the cross.”—Motto of the Irish Baron DONAGHMORE.

Fortior & potentior est dispositio legis quam hominis. Lat. Law Max.—“The disposition of the law is of greater force and potency than the disposition of man.”—Thus a man, having granted a lease for years, cannot overthrow this grant by any surrender of his interests.

Fortitudine & prudentia. Lat.—“By fortitude and prudence.”—Motto of Earl POWIS.

Fortune cetera mando. Lat.—“I commit the rest to fortune.”—I have made the wisest arrangements in my power, but I still know that I am not beyond the reach of accident.

Fortuna filius. Lat. HORACE.—“A son of Fortune.”—A person highly favoured by that blind Deity.

Fortuna

Fortunæ majoris bonis, erectus & acer.

Lat. CLAUDIAN.

“A man who reflects honour on his distinguished situation: of an erect and bold spirit.”

Fortuna multis dat nimium, nulli satis. Lat. MART.

—“Fortune gives too much to many, but to none enough.”—No man, be his possessions ever so great, is content with that which he actually possesses.

Fortuna, nimium quem fovet, stultum facit. Lat. Prov.

—“Fortune, when she caresses a man too much, makes him a fool.”—Even the wisest may be intoxicated by a long succession of prosperity.

Fortuna vitrea est, tum cum splendet frangitur. Lat.

SYRUS.—“Fortune is made of glass, when she shines she is broken.”—She has all its splendour and all its brittleness.

Fortuna opes auferre, non animum, potest. Lat. SE-

NECA.—“Fortune can take away riches, but cannot deprive of courage.”—A man of strong mind rises superior to all the vicissitudes of fortune.

Fortuna sequatur. Lat.—“Let fortune follow.”—

Motto of the Earl of ABERDEEN.

Foy pour devoir. Fr.—“Faith for duty.”—Motto of the Duke of SOMERSET.

Foy en tout. Fr.—“Faith in every thing.”—Motto of the Earl of SUSSEX.

———Fragili quærens illidere dentem

Offendet solido.

Lat. HORACE.

“He (my adversary) in seeking to fasten on a weak part, shall find a firm resistance.”—If his malice be directed towards me, he shall meet with an unlooked-for and plenary punishment.

Fraises. Fr.—Pointed stakes used in fortification.

Frangas non flectas. Lat.—“You may break, but not bend me.”—Motto of the Marquis of STAFFORD.

Fraus est celare fraudem. Lat. Law Maxim.—“It is a fraud to conceal a fraud.”—On such a concealment devolves a share in the guilt.

Fronti nulla fides. Lat.—“There is no trusting to the countenance.”—We cannot judge by appearances.

Fruges consumere nati. Lat.—“Men who are only born to devour provisions.”—The worthless who live and die without having rendered a service to society.

Frustra fit per plura, quod fieri potest per pauciora. Lat.—“That is idly done by many, which may be done by a few.”—This maxim, though it may be variously applied, is generally used to enforce the position—that it is better to proceed by negotiation than by warfare.

Frustra laborat qui omnibus placere studet. Lat. Prov.—“He labours vainly who endeavours to please every person.”—Exemplified in the popular fable of the old Man, his son, and the ass.

Fugam fecit. Lat. Law phrase.—“He has taken to flight.”—Used when it is found by inquisition, that a person has fled for felony, &c.

*Fuge magna, licet sub paupere tecto,
Reges & regum vitâ præcurrere amicos.*

Lat. HORACE.

“Avoid greatness; in a cottage there may be found more real happiness than kings or their favourites enjoy in palaces.”

Fugiendo

FU———FU

Fugiendo in media sæpe ruitur fata. Lat. LIVY.—

“By flying, men often meet the very fate which they wish to avoid.”—Prudence is sometimes defeated by chance, and produces the same consequences with rashness.

Fuimus. Lat.—“We have been.”—Motto of the Earl of AYLESBURY, and of the Scotch Earl ELGIN.

Fuit Ilium. Lat. VIRG.—“Troy has been.”—That which was the object of contention exists no more.

Functus officio. Lat.—“Discharged of duty.”—He is functus officio—his official power no longer exists.

———Fungar vice cotis acutum

Reddere quæ ferrum valeat, exors ipsa secundi.

“I shall perform the office of a whet-stone, which can make other things sharp, though it is itself incapable of cutting.”—A didactic writer may instruct others to do that well, which he is himself wholly incapable of performing.

Furiosus furore suo punitur. Lat. Law Maxim.—

“A madman or lunatic is punished by his own madness.”—If a madman kill any person, he shall not suffer for the act, because being deprived of memory and understanding, by the hand of God, he is regarded as having broken the mere words of the law, but not the law itself.

Furor. Lat.—“A rage.”—Furor loquendi, an eagerness for speaking.—Furor scribendi, an itch for writing.—Vide Cacoethes.

———Furor arma ministrat. Lat. VIRG.—“Their rage supplies them with weapons.”

Furor

FU——GE

Furor fit besa sepius patientia. Lat. Prov.—“Patience when too often outraged is converted into madness.”—There is a certain degree of irritation which is beyond all endurance.

Fuyez les procès sur toutes choses : la conscience s’y intéresse, la santé y altère, les biens s’y dissipent.
Fr. LA BRUYERE.—“Avoid law-suits beyond all things : they influence your conscience, impair your health, and dissipate your property.”

G.

Gaiété de cœur. Fr.—“Gaiety of heart.”—Sportiveness. High animal spirits.

Gardez bien. Fr.—“Take care.”—Motto of the Scotch Earl of EGLINTON.

Gardez la foy. Fr.—“Keep faith.”—Motto of Earl POWLETT.

Gardez la foi. Fr.—“Guard the faith.”—Motto of the Irish Baron KENSINGTON.

Gaudetque viam fecisse ruinâ. Lat. LUCAN.—“He rejoices to have made his way by ruin.”—This is the character given by the poet to Cæsar. It will equally suit any other ambitious despot, who, in the pursuit of his object, is regardless of the havock, which he may occasion amongst the human race.

Gaudet tentamine virtus. Lat.—“Virtue rejoices in temptation.”—Motto of Earl DARTMOUTH.

Gaulois. Fr.—“Old French.”

Gens d’église. Fr.—“Churchmen.”

— de guerre. Fr.—“Military men.”

— de condition. Fr.—“People of rank.”

— de peu. Fr.—“The meaner sort of people.”

Gibier de potence. Fr.—“Game for the gallows.”— Anglice, Newgate birds.

Gladiator in arena consilium capit. Lat.—“The gladiator takes counsel on the stage where he is to fight.”—The man asks for that advice in the very hour of danger, which he should previously and in a cooler moment have solicited.

Gloria virtutis umbra. Lat.—“Glory is the shadow (i. e. the companion) of virtue.”—Motto of the Irish Baron LONGFORD.

Γνοθι σεαυτον. Gnothi seauton. Gr.—“Know thyself.”—The saying of SOLON, one of the seven wise men of Greece. A precept at once the most necessary and the most difficult to be obeyed.

Gorge. Fr. Military Term.—“A strait or narrow pass.”

Goutte a goutte. Fr.—“Drop by drop.”

Graculus esuriens ad cælum jussus ibit.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“A poor hungry Greek, if you order him, will even go to heaven.”—That is, will attempt the thing the most difficult.—This was the reproach of Imperial Rome to the natives of the Greek provinces who resorted to that metropolis. It has latterly been applied to those supple Frenchmen, who swarm in every capital, as in the following lines:

“For every art a starving Frenchman knows,
“And bid him go to hell, to hell he goes.”

Gram. loquitur, Dia. vera docet, Rhet. verba colorat, Mu. canit, Ar. numerat, Geo. ponderat, As. docet astra. Lat.—This is a definition given by the schoolmen in verse, to assist the memory, of what are called the seven liberal sciences.—

“Grammar

"Grammar speaks, Dialectics teach the truth, Rhetoric gives colouring to our speech, Music sings, Arithmetic numbers, Geometry weighs, and Astronomy teaches the knowledge of the stars."

Grata superveniet quæ non sperabitur hora. Lat.—
"The hour of happiness shall come, more gratifying when it is not expected."—This is a general topic of consolation to the unfortunate. The Quotation may intimate also that blessings anticipated, are not by any means so well relished as those which come upon us by surprise.

Gratis. Lat.—"For nothing."—Free of cost.

Gratis anhelans, multa agendo nil agens. Lat. PETER DRUS.—"Panting without a cause, and in affecting to do much, really doing nothing."—The description of a busy, pompous blockhead.

Gratis dictum. Lat.—"Said for nothing."—Spoken of a transitory observation, which makes nothing to the argument.

Gratior ac pulchro veniens in corpore virtus.

Lat. VIRGIL.

"Even virtue is more fair, when it appears in a beautiful person."—Beauty lends a grace even to intrinsic worth. This corresponds in some degree with the aphorism of Queen Elizabeth, "that a good face is the best letter of recommendation."

Grave virus munditias pepulit. Lat. HORACE.—
"The virulence of the poison has destroyed all that was sound and healthy."—This phrase is often used to mark some spreading cancer in the political world.

Graviora quædam sunt remedia periculis. Lat. Prov.—
"Some remedies are worse than the disease."

Gravis

GR—————HA

Gravis ira regum semper. Lat. SENECA.—“The anger of kings is always severe.”—Those who possess unlimited power are vindictive from habit.

Grossièreté. Fr.—“Grossness.”—Rudeness in conversation.

Guerre à mort. Fr.—“War till death.”

Guerre à l'outrance. Fr.—“War to the uttermost.”—Two phrases which it is to be hoped posterity will remember only as having disgraced the close of the 18th century.

Gutta cavat lapidem non vi sed sæpe cadendo. Lat. Prov.—“The drop hollows the stone not by its force but by the frequency of its falling.”—That may be done by gradual effort, which is not to be accomplished by sudden violence.

H.

Habeas corpus. Law Lat.—“You may have the body.”—This is the great writ of English liberty. It lies where a person, being indicted and imprisoned, has offered sufficient bail, which has been refused, though the case beailable; in this case he may have an habeas corpus out of the King's Bench, in order to remove himself thither, and to answer the cause at the bar of that court.

Habeas corpus ad prosequendum. Law Lat.—“You may have the body, in order to prosecute.”—A writ for the removal of a person for the purpose of prosecution and trial in the proper county.

Habeas corpus ad respondendum. Law Lat.—“You may have the body to answer.”—A writ to remove a person confined in any other prison, to answer to an action in the King's Bench.

Habeas corpus ad satisfaciendum. Law Lat.—“You may have the body to satisfy.”—A writ which lies against a person in the Fleet prison, &c. to charge him in execution.

Habemus confitentem reum. Lat. CICERO.—“We have before us a criminal who confesses his guilt.”

Habemus luxuriam atque avaritiam, publice egestatem, privatim opulentiam. Lat. SALLUST.—“We have luxury and avarice, public debt and private opulence.”—This is the description of Rome, put by the historian in the mouth of CATO. It will bear a modern application.

Habere facias possessionem. Lat. Law Term.—“You shall cause to take possession.”—This is a writ which lies where a man has recovered a term for years in an action of ejectment, and it is directed to the sheriff in order to put the plaintiff into possession.

Habere facias visum. Law Lat.—“You shall cause a view to be taken.”—This is a writ which lies in several cases, as in Dower, Formedon, &c. where a view is to be taken of the lands or tenements in question.

Habet aliquid ex iniquo omne magnum exemplum, quod contra singulos, utilitate publica rependitur. Lat. TACITUS.—“Every great example of punishment has in it some tincture of injustice, but the sufferings of individuals are compensated by the promotion of the public good.”

Hæc generi incrementa fides. Lat.—“This faith will furnish new increase to our race.”—This faith will be of service to our descendants.—Motto of Marquis TOWNSHEND.

Hæc

Hæc olim meminisse juvabit. Lat. VIRG.—“It will be pleasing to recollect these things hereafter.”
—There is a melancholy pleasure in the recollection of past misfortunes.

Hæc studia adolescentiam alunt, senectutem oblectant, secundas res ornant, adversis solatium & perfugium præbent, delectant domi, non impediunt foris, pernoctant nobiscum, peregrinantur, rusticantur. Lat. CICERO.—“These (literary) studies are the food of youth, and the consolation of age: they adorn prosperity, and are the comfort and refuge of adversity: they are pleasant at home, and are of no incumbrance abroad: they accompany us at night, in our travels, and in our rural retreats.”

Hæc nugæ in seria ducent mala. Lat.—“These trifles will lead into serious mischief.”—That which is considered as mere sport, may have a ruinous tendency.

Hæredis fletus sub persona risus est. Lat. Prov.—“The weeping of an heir is laughter under a mask.”—He affects to mourn in order to conceal his secret joy.

Hæres jure representationis. Lat.—“An heir by the right of representation.”—This is spoken of a grandson, who shall inherit from his grandfather, because in such case he represents and stands in place of his father.

Hæres legitimus est quem nuptiæ demonstrant. Lat. Law Max.—“He is the lawful heir whom marriage points out to be such.”—A child born within wedlock, be it ever so soon after, is in law legitimate, and heir to the husband of his mother.

Hæret

Hæret lateri lethælls arundo. Lat. VIRGIL.—“The deadly arrow still sticks in his side.”—Applied to persons continually pursued by their passions or remorse.

Hæ tibi erunt artes. Lat. VIRG.—“These shall be thy arts.”—These are the pursuits to which you should direct your attention.

*Hæ tibi erunt artes, pacisque imponere morem
Parcere subjectis & debellare superbos.*

Lat. VIRGIL.

“These shall be thy arts, to impose the conditions of peace, to spare the lowly, and pull down the proud.”—This is the character of a beneficent conqueror.

Hanc veniam petimus damusque vicissim. Lat. HORACE.—“We give this privilege and receive it in turn.”—This line is applied and is particularly applicable to authors who, as none of their works can attain perfection, should be mutually indulgent. It is scarcely necessary to remark how much the reverse of this precept prevails in practice!

Hæro. Fr.—“Hue and cry.”

*Haud facile emergunt quorum virtutibus obstat
Res angusta domi.*

Lat. JUVENAL.

—“Those rise with difficulty whose virtues or talents are incumbered or depressed by poverty.”
—This is a maxim which cannot be rendered more clear by any periphrase.

Haud inscia ac non incauta futuri.

Lat. VIRGIL.

“Neither ignorant nor incautious with respect to the future.”—A motto not unfairly taken by a person informed on the subject in controversy, and who has well weighed its consequences.

Haud

Haud passim equis. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Not with equal steps.”—This, which was used literally by the poet to mark the unequal paces with which Aeneas and his infant son Iulus issued from burning Troy, is now metaphorically applied to two men who pursue the same object, but with powers of attainment altogether different.

Hauteur. Fr.—“Height.”—Metaphorically used, “Haughtiness.”

Haut et bon. Fr.—“Great and good.”—Motto of the Irish Viscount DONERAILE.

Haut goût. Fr.—“High flavour.”—As in venison, &c. long kept. By the vulgar it is used to denote a near approach to putrescency.

Heu! quam difficile est crimen non prodere vultu! Lat. OVID.—“Alas! how difficult it is to prevent the countenance from betraying guilt.”

Heu! quam difficilis gloriæ custodia est. Lat. SYRUS.—“How difficult, alas! is the custody of glory?”—How much more easy it is, in many cases, to attain, than to preserve a high reputation!

Eureka. Gr. Heureka.—“I have found it.”—This was the exclamation of Archimedes, the Syracusan, when on immersing his body in the bath, he discovered the means of ascertaining the purity of the golden crown made for Hiero, from the space which it would occupy in water.—It is now used mostly in ridicule, to mark an affected importance annexed to an insignificant discovery.

Heu! totum triduum. Lat. TERENCE.—“What! three whole days.”—Can you be absent from your mistress for such a term?—A satire on the impatience of lovers.

Hiatus maxime deflendus. Lat.—“A chasm (or deficiency) very much to be lamented.”—This phrase is often to be found in the editions of the ancient classics, to mark some loss sustained through the ravages of time. It is now sometimes used in ridicule, to mark some passage omitted through design.

Hic est aut nusquam quod quærimus. Lat.—“What we seek is either here or no where.”—In our search after happiness we miss the good which is immediately before us, and direct our enquiries to that which either does not exist, or is unattainable.

Hic et ubique. Lat.—“Here and there and every where.”—Used to mark a perpetual change of place.

——*Hic murus abeneus esto,
Nil conscire sibi, nulla pallescere culpa.*

Lat. HORACE.

“Let this be thy brazen wall of defence, to be conscious of no guilt, and not to turn pale on any charge.”—These often-quoted lines import in substance—that the consciousness of innocence forms our best security.

Hic finis fandi. Lat.—“Here was an end to the discourse,”—or—here let the conversation terminate.

Hic niger est; bunc tu Romane caveto. Lat. HOR.—“That man is of a black character, do you, Roman, beware of him.”—The word “black” was used by the Latins, to mark every thing which they deemed either wicked or unfortunate. The quotation is frequently used as a conclusion after summing up a man’s bad qualities.

——Hic

—Hic vivimus ambitiosa

Paupertate omnes.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“We all live here in a state of ostentatious poverty.”—With most men it is the business of their life to conceal their wants.

ἱερὰ πικρά. biera picra. Greek.—“The sacred bitter.”—A medicine well known.

Hi motus animarum atque hæc certamina tanta,

Pulveris exigui jactu compressa quiescent.

Lat. VIRGIL.

“These movements of their souls, and these violent contests, will cease and be repressed only by throwing a little dust.”—This is used by the poet, when speaking of a conflict between two swarms of bees. It is applied in a different sense to the contests of the ambitious.

Hinc illæ lacrymæ. Lat.—“From hence proceed those tears.”—This is the secret or remote cause of the discontents which have been expressed.

Hinc subita mortes, atque intestata senectus. Lat.

JUVENAL.—“Hence proceeds the number of sudden deaths, and of old men dying without a will.”—The poet is speaking of luxury, which abridges the life of man, and most frequently takes off the hoary epicure by surprise.

His nunc præmium est, qui recta prava faciunt.

Lat. TERENCE.

“There is a recompense in these days, for those who can make a right conduct appear in a wrong point of view.”—There are to be found in all ages unprincipled men, whose bills of misrepresentation, to borrow a mercantile phrase, are accepted and paid by persons as unprincipled as themselves.

Hoc age. Lat.—“Do or mind this.”—Attend without distraction to the object immediately before you.

Hoc erat in votis. Lat. HORACE.—“This was in my wishes.”—This was the chief or immediate object of my desire.

—Hoc est vivere bis

Vita posse priore frui.

Lat. MARTIAL.

“It is to live twice when you can enjoy the recollection of your former life.”

“When years no more of active life retain,

“’Tis youth renewed to laugh them o’er again.”

—Hoc fonte derivata clades

In patriam, populumque fluxit. Lat. HORACE.—

“From this source has the destruction flowed, which has overwhelmed the country and the people.”—Used to mark the person who has originated, or the circumstance which has occasioned any great political mischief.

Hodie mihi, cras tibi. Lat.—“To-day to me, to-morrow it belongs to you.”—A phrase very happily descriptive of the vicissitude of human affairs.

Homine imperito nunquam quidquid injustius

Qui, nisi quod ipse facit, nihil rectum putat.

Lat. TERENCE.

“Nothing can be more unjust than the ignorant man, who thinks that nothing can be done rightly or perfectly, but that which is executed by himself.”—In the habits and usages of common life, it will always be found that a practised man will concede, and make allowance for those difficulties, which the supercilious blockhead fancies that he can overleap, and therefore is reluctant to admit.

Hominem

Hominem pagina nostra sapit. Lat. MARTIAL.—
 “Our page relates to man.”—Our themes are drawn from observation, and are intended for the practical use of mankind.

Homines ad Deos nullâ rês propius accedunt, quam salutem hominibus dando. Lat. CICERO.—“Men in no particular approach so nearly to the gods, as by giving health (or safety) to men.”—We can in no way assimilate ourselves so much with the benign dispositions of the Creator of all, as by contributing to the health, comfort, and happiness of our fellow-creatures.

Homines amplius oculis quam auribus credunt. Longum iter est per precepta breve & efficace per exempla. Lat. SENECA.—“Men trust rather to their eyes than their ears: the effect of precepts is therefore slow and tedious, whilst that of example is summary and effectual.”

Homines nihil agendo discunt male agere. Lat. CATO.—“Men by doing nothing, learn to do ill.”—Idleness is the parent of almost every vice.

Homini est errare, insipientis vero perseverare. Lat.—“It is common to man to err, but it is the characteristic of a fool to persevere.”—A casual lapse will happen to the wisest, but the indelible stamp of folly must be affixed to those, who obstinately shut their eyes against conviction.

Homo homini lupus. Lat. ERASMUS.—“Man is a wolf to man.”—The human race have been preying on each other, ever since the creation.

Homo homini aut Deus aut lupus. Lat. ERASMUS.—“Man is to man either a god or a wolf.”—Nothing can be more contrasted than the human character. The benevolence of some consoles and relieves, whilst the persecution of others destroys their fellow-men.

H O ——— H O

Homo multarum literarum. Lat.—“A man of many letters.”—A person endowed with various learning.

Homo solus aut Deus aut Dæmon. Lat.—“Man alone is either a God or a Devil.”—There is no other being in existence which is capable of such violent extremes.

Homo sum, & humani a me nil alienum puto. Lat. TERENCE.—“I am a man, and nothing which relates to man can be foreign to my bosom.”—This is the strong phrase of a philanthropist, which, it is to be feared, is less frequently felt than it is quoted.

Honestæ mors turpi vitâ potior. Lat. TACITUS.—“An honourable death is preferable to a degraded life.”—Our revealed religion forbids the act of suicide; but amongst the ancients, it was a prevalent maxim, that a self-inflicted death was preferable to a life of disgrace.

Honestæ quædam scelera successus facit. Lat. SENECA.—“Success makes some species of wickedness appear honourable.”—This cannot be better illustrated than by the English epigram, “Treason does never prosper, what’s the reason?
“That if it prospers none dare call it treason.”

Honestæ quam splendida. Lat.—“How splendid are things honourably obtained.”—Motto of the Irish Viscount, BARRINGTON.

Honi soit qui mal y pense. Old French.—“Evil be to him that evil thinks.”—The motto of the kings of Great Britain.

Honor virtutis præmium. Lat.—“Honour is the reward of virtue.”—This is an adage not always verified. It forms the motto of Lord BOSTON, and Earl FERRERS.

Homo

Honos alit artes. Lat.—“Honour supports the arts.”

—The liberal arts have never thriven in any state, where the professors did not receive, in addition to the mere recompense of their labour, the honorary marks of attention and distinction.

Hora e sempre. Ital.—“It is always time.”—The motto of Earl POMFRET.

———Horæ

Momento, cita Mors venit aut Victoria læta.

Lat. HORACE.

“In one short hour comes either death or joyful victory.”—Spoken of a military life in which the suspense, however painful, is seldom protracted.

*Horrea formicæ tendunt ad inania nunquam;
Nullus ad amissas ibit amicus opes.*

Lat. OVID.

“As the ant does not bend its way to empty barns, so no friend will be found to haunt the place of departed wealth.”—This maxim is explained by the kindred proverb; “ubi mel, ibi apes.” Where the honey is, there the bees will be.

Hortus ficcus. Lat. Literally.—“A dry garden.”—A collection of the leaves of different plants preserved in a dried state. “The Hortus ficcus of dissent,” BURKE. The opinions of Dissenters in all their varieties.

Hotel Dieu. Fr.—“The house of God.”—A common name in France for an hospital.

Huic maxime putamus malo fuisse nimiam opinionem ingenii atque virtutis. Lat. CORN. NEP. de Themistocle.—“What led in our opinion to his greatest misfortunes, was, that he entertained too high an opinion of his own valour and talents.”— tests."—It has occurred in every age, and in every department of life, that men of the greatest ability have sunk and failed, merely from the over-rated opinion, which they have held of their own qualifications.

Huic versatile ingenium sic pariter ad omnia fuit, ut natum ad id unum diceret, quodcumque ageret. Lat. LIVY.—“This man’s parts were so convertible to all uses, that you would pronounce him to be born for that, whatever he was doing.”—This is the character of the elder CATO.

Humani nihil aliënum. Lat.—“Nothing is foreign to me, which relates to man.”—Motto of Earl TALBOT.

Humanum est errare. Lat.—“It is the lot of humanity to err.”—This phrase was happily seized by the poet, when he at the same time availed himself of the contrast.

“To err is human, to forgive divine.”

Ὑστέρων προτέρων. Gr. Hysteron proteron.—“The last put first.”—The positions or arguments inverted from their natural order: or, as we familiarly say, “The cart put before the horse.”

I.

Ibidem.—Ibid. Lat.—“In the same place.”—A note of reference.

Ibit vobis vis, qui notam perdidit. Lat. HORACE.
“He will go where you will, who has lost his purse.”—Poverty incites men to the most desperate actions.

ID——ID

Id cinerem, aut Manes credis curare sepultos?

Lat. VIRGIL.

“Do you think that this can affect the shade or ashes of the buried dead?”—Do you suppose that mortal cares can disturb the tranquillity of the grave?

——Idem velle & idem nolle, ea demum firma amicitia est. Lat. SALLUST.—“To wish for and reject things with similar feelings is the only foundation of friendship.”—True friendship can only spring from perfect sympathy.

——Idemens! & sævâs curre per Alpes
Ut pueris placeas & declamatio fias. Lat. JUV.
“Go mad man! rush over the wildest Alps, that you may please children, and be made the subject of declamation.”—Go, desperate man, and encounter the severest hazards, to be rewarded only by the most trivial consolations.

Id facere laus est quod decet, non quod licet. Lat. SENECA.—“The man is deserving of praise who considers, not what he may do, but what it is becoming him to do.

Id genus omne.—Lat. HORACE.—“All the persons of that description.”—A phrase of contempt, as loan-jobbers, contractors, and id genus omne,—the rest of that rabble.

Id maximè quemque decet, quod est cujusque suum maxime. Lat. CICERO.—“That best becomes every man, which is more particularly his own,” or in other and coarser words, which he is “best at.”

Idoneus homo. Lat.—“A fit man.”—A man of known ability.

Idoneus

Idoneus quidem mea sententia, præsertim quum & ipse eum audiverit, & scribat de mortuo; ex quo nulla suspicio est amicitiae causa eum esse mentitum. Lat.

CICERO.—“A competent person in my opinion (to write of the deceased) as he was accustomed often to hear him, and published his sentiments after the subject of them was no more; there is no reason therefore to suppose that his partiality has misled him from the truth,” Ignavissimus quisque, & ut res docuit, in periculo non ausurus, nimio verbis & linguâ feroces. Lat. TA-

CITUS.—“Every recreant who proved his timidity in the hour of danger, was afterwards the most talkative and bold in his discourse.”—The greatest coward in the field is generally found to be the loudest boaster after the battle.

Ignis fatuus. Lat.—“A foolish fire.”—The meteor, or ignited vapour, commonly known by the name of “Will o’ the Wisp.”—It is applied metaphorically to a discourse or treatise, which, whilst it affects to enlighten, tends only to confound and mislead.

Ignoramus. Lat.—“We are ignorant.”—This is the term used when the grand jury, empaneled on the inquisition of criminal causes, reject the evidence as too weak, to make good the presentment or indictment brought against a person, so as to bring him on his trial by a petty jury. This word, in that case, is endorsed on the back of the indictment, and all further proceedings against the party are stopped.—An ignoramus sometimes implies an uninformed block-head.

Ignorantia

IG——IL

Ignorantia facti excusat. Lat. Law Maxim.—“Ignorance of the fact excuses.”—As if an illiterate man seals a deed, which is read to him falsely, the same shall be void.

Ignorantia non excusat legem. Law Lat.—“The ignorance of the individual does not prevent the operation of the law.”—Every man in these kingdoms is subject to the penalty of laws, which perhaps have never been duly promulgated.

Ignorant populi si non in morte probâris

An scieris adversa pati.

Lat. LUCAN.

“Future ages may be ignorant, if you had not proved in death, that you knew how to bear up against adverse circumstances.”—This praise applied to POMPEY, has successively been given to others, who deeming themselves engaged in a good cause, have known how to suffer death itself with equanimity.

Ignoscito sæpe alteri nunquam tibi. Lat.—Of the same purport with the following quotation.

Ignoscas aliis multa, nil tibi. Lat. AUSON.—“You should forgive many things in others, but nothing in yourself.”

Ignotum per ignotius. Lat.—“That which is unknown by something more unknown.”—He has explained the matter—ignotum per ignotius—he has offered as an illustration, that which tends to involve the matter in deeper obscurity.

Il aboye tout le monde. Fr. Prov.—“He snarls at every body.”

Il a de l'esprit comme quatre. Fr. Prov.—“He has as much wit as four men.”—A vulgar mode of describing a superior genius.

Il a la mer a boire. Fr.—“He has to drink up the sea.”—He has entered on a prodigious enterprise.

Il a le vin mauvais. Fr.—“He is quarrelsome when in his cups.”

Il a semé des fleurs sur un terrain aride. Fr.—“He has planted flowers on a barren soil.”—He has bestowed literary decoration on a work, where the nature of the subject rendered it almost impossible.

Il conduit bien sa barque. French Proverb.—“He steers his boat well.”—He knows how to make his way through the world.

Il coûte peu à amasser beaucoup de richesses, & beaucoup à en amasser peu. Fr.—“It requires but little effort to amass a great deal of riches, but it requires much effort to collect a little.”—The man of property can easily enlarge his wealth; but the man who has nothing, is to maintain a hard struggle in his weak beginnings.—The first thousand, it has been elsewhere said, is more difficult of acquisition than the last million.

Il en est d'un homme qui aime, comme d'un moineau prie a la glu; plus il se debat, plus il s'embarrasse. Fr.—“It is with a man in love, as with a sparrow caught in bird-lime; the more he strives, the more he is entangled.”

Il en fait ses choux gras. Fr. Prov.—“He thereby makes his cabbage fat.”—He feathers his nest by it.

Il est comme l'oiseau sur la branche. Fr. Proverb.—“He is like the bird on the branch.”—His disposition is too wavering.

Il est plus aisé d'être sage pour les autres, que pour soi-même. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“It is more easy to be wise for other persons than for ourselves.”—We can judge with more coolness where our own feelings are not immediately concerned.

Il est plus honteux de se desher de ses amis, que d'en être trompé. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“It is more disgraceful to suspect our friends, than to be deceived by them.”

Il faut attendre le boiteux. French Proverb.—“It is necessary to wait for the lame man.”—This news is doubtful, we must wait for the truth, which comes haltingly behind.

Il faut être réservé même avec son meilleur ami, lorsque cet ami témoigne trop de curiosité pour pénétrer votre secret. Fr. LA BRUYÈRE.—“It is prudent to be on the reserve, even with your best friend, when he shews himself over-anxious to develope your secret.”—In love affairs particularly, the confidence which you repose in your most intimate friend, is not wholly divested of danger.

Il faut des plus grands vertus pour soutenir la bonne fortune que la mauvaise. Fr.—“It requires a greater share of virtue to sustain a situation of prosperity, than to support one of adversity.”—Good fortune is apt to intoxicate the mind, which, on the contrary, is subdued and ameliorated in an adverse situation.

Iliacos intra muros peccatur & extra. Lat. HORACE.—“They sin both within, and without the walls of Troy.”—There are faults to be found on both sides.

Ille dolet vere quæ sine teste dolet. LAT. MART.

"She grieves sincerely, who grieves unseen."—
Before company her grief may partake of affectation.

Ille crucem sceleris pretium tulit, hic diadema. Lat.

JUVENAL.—"One man meets an infamous punishment for that crime, which confers a diadem upon another."—One murderer, for instance, ascends a throne, whilst another mounts a scaffold.

Ille fuit vitæ Mario modus, omnia passo

Quæ pejor fortuna potest; omnibus uso

Quæ melior.

Lat. LUCAN.

"Such was the complexion of the life of Marius, that he had suffered the worst inflictions of Fortune, and enjoyed her choicest blessings."—He had led that life of vicissitude which alone can prepare a man equally to meet prosperity or adversity.

Ille igitur nunquam direxit brachia contra

Torrentem, nec civis erat qui liberâ posset

Verba animi proferre & vitam impendere vero.

Lat. JUVENAL.

"He never was that citizen who would attempt to swim against the torrent, who would freely deliver his opinion and devote his life for the truth."—This is an admirable description, though in negative terms, of the qualities of a good patriot.

—Ille potens sui

Lætusque degit, cui in diem

Dixisse VIXI; cras vel atrâ

Nube polum pater occupato

Vel sole puro non tamen irritum

Quodcunque retro est efficiet.

Lat. HORACE.

"That

"That man lives happy and in command of himself, who from day to day can say I have lived. Whether clouds obscure, or the sun illumine the following day, that which is past is beyond recal."—That man who has lived for beneficent purposes, and laid up a store of good actions, has little to fear from any change, whilst "all is peace within."

Ille sinistrorsum, hic dextrorsum, unus utrique Error, sed variis illudit partibus omnes.

Lat. HORACE.

"One deviates to the right, another to the left; the error is the same with all, but it deceives them in different ways."

"One reels to this, another to that wall,

"'Tis the same error that deludes them all."

Ille mors gravis incubat, qui notus nimis omnibus, ignotus moritur sibi. Lat. SENECA.—"Death must press heavily on that man, who being but too well known to others, dies at last in ignorance of himself."—The blackest horrors belong to him, who has passed a life of unreflecting wickedness.

Illæso lumine solem. Lat.—"With sight unhurt to view the sun."—This is the quality ascribed to the eagle.—It has been assumed as the motto of Lord LOUGHBOROUGH.

Illud amicitie sanctum ac venerabile nomen Nunc tibi pro vili, sub pedibusq. jacet.

Lat. OVID.

"The sacred and venerable name of friendship is now by you trodden upon and despised."—You have perfidiously burst those bonds of friendship by which we were united.

Il n'a pas inventé la poudre. Fr. Prov.—"He was not the inventor of gun-powder."—He is no conjuror.

Il n'appartient qu'aux grands hommes d'avoir des grands défauts. FR. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“It belongs only to great men, to possess great defects.”—Such defects are palliated at least, where great qualities can be pleaded as a set-off.

Il n'a ni bouche ni éperon. FR. PROV.—“He has neither mouth nor spur.”—He has neither wit nor courage.

Il ne faut pas éveiller le chat qui dort. FR. PROVERB.—“It is not right to waken the cat that sleeps.”—You should not bring into question a dormant secret, or stir a sleeping mischief.

Il n'est sauce que d'appétit. FR. PROV.—“Hunger is the best sauce.”

Il ne sait sur quel pied danser. FR. PROV.—“He knows not on which leg to dance.”—He is at his wit's end.

Il n'y a point au monde un si pénible métier que celui de se faire un grand nom; la vie s'achève avant que l'on a, à peine ébauche son ouvrage. FR. LA BRUYÈRE.—“There is not in the world so difficult an employ as that of getting a great name.—Life is closed, when the task has scarcely been begun.”

Il n'y a point des gens, qui sont plus méprisés, que les petits beaux esprits, & les grands sans probité. FR. MONTESQUIEU.—“There is no description of men so much despised, as your minor wits, and men of rank without probity.”

Il n'y a point d'homme vertueux qui n'ait quelque vice, & de méchant qui n'ait quelque vertu. FR.—“There is no virtuous man without some vice or weakness, or any wicked man who may not boast of some virtue.”

Il sent de fagot. Fr. Prov.—“He smells of the faggot”—which is to burn him as an heretic.

Il vaut mieux tâcher d'oublier ses malheurs, que d'en parler. Fr.—“It is much better for a man to forget his misfortunes, than to talk of them.”—He who is too querulous, not only feeds his own regret, but excites disgust in others.

Il volto sciolto, gli pensieri stretti. Ital. Prov.—“The countenance open, but the thought strictly confined.”—This is the difficult maxim so strongly recommended by Lord CHESTERFIELD. It is certain that the man who can assume an apparent frankness, and keep his opinion at the same time in sullen reserve, is fit for a politician,—or any thing else.

Il y a anguille sous roche. Fr. Prov.—“There is an eel under the rock.”—There is a mystery in the affair.

Il y a bien des gens qu'on estime, parceque on ne les connoit point. Fr.—“There are many persons who are esteemed, only because they are not known.” There are many who mask their real dispositions so successfully, as to be esteemed for qualities which they never possessed.

Il y a des gens qui ressemblent aux vaudevilles, qu'on ne chante qu'un certain temps. Fr. ROCHE-FOUCAULT.—“There are certain men whose fame is like that of a popular ballad, which is sung for a certain time, and then forgotten.”

Il y a des gens a qui la vertu sied presque aussi mal que la vice. Fr. BOUHOURS.—“There are some persons on whom virtue sits almost as ungraciously as vice.”—There are those who detract from the intrinsic dignity of virtue, by their arrogance or austeritv.

Il y a des gens dégoûtans avec du mérite, & d'autres qui plaisent avec des défauts. Fr. —“ There are people of merit who are disgusting, and there are others who please with all their defects.” — So much depends upon manner, suavity, and conciliation.

Il y a des reproches qui louent, & les louanges qui médifent. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT. —“ There are some reproaches which form a commendation, and some praises which are in fact a slander.” — There are some persons whose censure is praise, and whose praise is infamy.

Il y a encore de quoi glaner. Fr. Prov. —“ There is something yet to be gleaned.” — The subject is not wholly exhausted.

Imitatores! servum pecus. Lat. HORACE. —“ Ye imitators! a vile herd.” — Addressed to servile copyists, who shew at once their meanness and their weakness by living on the borrowed spoils of others.

Imperat aut servit collecta pecunia cuique. Lat. HORACE. —“ Riches either serve or govern the possessor.” — They are advantageous or hurtful, according to the uses to which they are turned.

Imperium facile iis artibus retinetur, quibus initio partum est. Lat. SALLUST. —“ Power is easily retained by those means by which it was acquired.” — It is generally gained by conciliation, and kept whilst that is continued. It is lost by oppression and intolerance.

Imperium flagitio acquisitum, nemo unquam bonis artibus exercuit. Lat. TACITUS. —“ The power which was acquired by guilt has never been directed to any good end, or any useful purpose.” — When command is obtained by crime, the power which is thus usurped is most generally abused.

Imperium

Imperium in imperia. Lat.—“A government existing in another government.”—An establishment existing under, but wholly independent of a superior establishment. An arrangement where the clashing interests must inevitably lead to confusion.

Impotentia excusat Legem. Lat. Law Max.—“Impotency does away the Law.”—This maxim relates to the infirmity of certain persons whom the law excuses from doing certain acts, as men in prison, idiots and lunatics, persons blind and dumb, &c.

Imprimatur. Lat.—“Let it be printed.”—The phrase of permission to print in countries where the press is under a vexatious controul.—The word is figuratively used to denote that sort of authority.

Improbe amar, quid non martialia pectora cogis? Lat. VIRGIL.—“Oh, wretched love! to what do you not impel the human breast?”—To what excesses do you not drive that heart, of which you have once taken the possession?

Improbe Neptunum accusat qui naufragium iterum facit. Lat. Prov.—“The man improperly blames the sea who is a second time shipwrecked.”—He should have learned prudence from his first misfortune.

Improbis aliena virtus semper formidolosa est. Lat. SALLUST.—“To the wicked the virtue of other men is ever formidable.”—They dread that which lowers them by comparison, and hate the excellence to which they cannot aspire.

Impromptu.—“In readiness.”—A witticism made out of hand.

IN———IN

In amore hæc omnia insunt vitia; injuriæ Suspiciones, inimiciæ, induciæ.

Bellum, pax rursus.

Lat. TERENCE.

“In love there are all those evils,—wrongs, suspicions, enmities, treaties, and alternate war and peace.”

In causa facili, cuius licet esse diserto.

Lat. OVID.

“In an easy cause, any man may be eloquent.”
—The most indifferent orator may assume a triumphant air when he occupies “the ’vantage ground.”

———Incedimus per ignes

Suppositos cineri dolo.

Lat. HORACE.

“We tread on fires which are merely covered by deceitful ashes.”—We have subdued the obvious peril, but not the lurking danger.

Incidit in Scyllam qui vult vitare Charybdim. Lat.

Prov.—“He falls into Scylla in struggling to escape Charybdis.”—The one was a rock, and the other a whirlpool, in the sea which divides Italy from Sicily.—When endeavouring to avoid one danger or mistake, we too frequently fall into another.

Inclusio unius est exclusio alterius. Lat. Law maxim.

—“The name of one being included supposes an exclusion of the other.”—This is a maxim frequently used in arguments on testamentary devises. If of two persons of equal affinity, one is especially mentioned, it is supposed that the other was out of the intention of the testator.

In cælo quies. Lat.—“There is rest in heaven.”—

A motto usually found on funeral escutcheons, commonly called hatchments.

In

IN———IN

In commendam.—This phrase of modern Latin is used to denote a person "commended," or recommended, to the care of a living whilst the church is vacant. It is used by a fiction to permit a bishop to retain the profits of a living within or without his own diocese.

In curia. Lat.—"In the court."

Inde irā. Lat.—"Hence proceed those resentments."

Index expurgatorius. Lat.—"A purging or purifying index."—A list formerly published under the authority of the Roman Pontiffs, specifying the books which ought not to be read. This was continued until it was found, that the wayward wishes of those who could read, were almost uniformly directed to the treatises thus forbidden.

Indignante invidia florebit justus. Lat.—"The just man will flourish in despite of envy."—Motto of Ir. E. GLENDORF.

Indocti discant, ament meminisse periti. Lat.—"Let the unskilful learn, and let the learned improve their recollection."—This is a motto frequently prefixed to works of a general and useful tendency.

Inerat Vitellio simplicitas ac liberalitas, quæ, nisi adsit modus, in exitium vertuntur. Lat. TACITUS.—"There was in Vitellius a simplicity and a liberality, qualities which, unless taken in the degree, are generally ruinous to the possessor."—There are virtues the most amiable in private life, which exercised by a public man, beyond their due bounds, will ever be found dangerous in the extreme.

IN———IN

In esse. Lat.—“In being.”

Inest sua gratia parvis. Lat.—“Even little things have their peculiar grace.”

In ferrum pro libertate ruebant. Lat.—“For freedom they rushed upon the sword.”—Motto of Earl LEICESTER.

Infinita est velocitas temporis, quæ magis apparet respicientibus. Lat. SENECA.—“The swiftness of time is infinite, as is most evident to those who look back.”—It is only by a retrospect to the days which have passed and been mis-spent, that we can discern and regret the velocity, with which they have escaped us.

In forma pauperis. Lat.—“In the form of a poor man.”—According to the statute 11 Henry VII. any man who is too poor to meet the expences of suing at law or in equity, making oath that he is not worth more than 5l. after his debts are paid, and producing a certificate from a lawyer that he has just cause of suit, the judge in this case is to admit him to sue in forma pauperis; that is, without paying any fees to the counsel, attorney, or clerks.

In flagranti delicto. Lat.—“In the apparent guilt.”
—Taken in the very commission of the crime.

In foro conscientie. Lat.—“Before the tribunal of conscience.”—In a man’s own conviction of what is equitable.

Ingenii largitor venter. Lat. PERSIUS.—“The belly is the giver of genius.”—Ironically spoken of those whose only stimulus to authorship is their poverty; but who, thus impelled, ——“Still, in despite
Of nature and their stars, will write.”

Ingenia

IN——IN

Ingenio stat sine morte decus. Lat. PROPERT.—“The honours of genius are eternal.”—This is the boast of many a poet. We know when it has been realized, as in the Æneid Monumentum, &c. of Horace; but most probably, in a myriad of instances, it has been made in vain.

Ingenium rei adversæ nudare solent, celare secundæ.
Lat. HOR.—“In adversity those talents are called forth, which are concealed by prosperity.”

———Ingenuas didicisse fideliter artes
Emollit mores, nec sinit esse feros. Lat. OVID.
“To have studied carefully the liberal arts is the surest mode of refining the grossness, and subduing the harshness of the human mind.”

Ingens telum necessitas. Lat. SENECA.—“Necessity is a powerful weapon.”—To provoke a needy man is to encounter with desperation.

Ingratum si dixeris omnia dicis. Lat.—“If you pronounce a man ungrateful, you say all that can be urged against him.”—Ingratitude is the Aaron's rod, which swallows up and comprizes in itself all the smaller vices.

Ingratus unus miseris omnibus nocet. Lat. SYRUS.
—“One ungrateful man does an injury to all who are wretched.”—He by his baseness has perhaps steeled the heart, which might otherwise have relieved their distresses.

In hoc signo vinces. Lat.—“In this sign thou shalt conquer.”—This was the motto assumed by the Emperor CONSTANTINE after having seen a Cross in the air which he considered as the preface of victory. Motto of Lord ANNALY and of the Ir. Earl of ARRAN.

IN ——— IN

In hoc signo spes mea. Lat.—“ In this sign is my hope.”—Motto of the Ir. Viscount TAAFFE.

Iniqua nunquam regna perpetua manent. Lat. SENECA.—“ Authority founded on, or maintained by injustice, is never of long duration.”

Iniquissimam pacem justissimo bello antefero. Lat.—“ I prefer the most unjust peace to the justest war.”—The horrors of war are so numerous and so afflicting, that peace should, at all times, be purchased at any price, short of national dishonour.

Initia magistratuum nostrorum meliora ferme, finis inclinat. Lat. TACITUS.—“ The discharge of our public offices is generally more exemplary in their commencement; its vigour declines towards the conclusion.”—When men first enter into office they are alert and punctual, but towards the close of their functions they become relaxed and indifferent.—Our proverb of “ New brooms,” gives of this an apt, though a homely illustration.

In loco. Latin.—“ In the place.”—In the proper place. Upon the spot.

In medias res. Lat. HORACE.—“ Into the midst of things.”—Spoken generally of an author who rushes abruptly and without preparation into his subject.

In nova fert animus. Lat.—“ My mind leads me to new matters, or to discuss new topics.”—This is an hemistich; the following is the complete line.

In nova fert animus mutatas dicere formas. Lat. OVID.—“ I am inclined to speak of bodies changed into new forms.”—I am now to dwell on transformations or changes of a most singular nature.

I

Innuenda,

IN——IN

Innuendo. Lat. Law Term.—“By signifying.”—Thereby intimating.—A word much used in declarations of slander and libel to ascertain the application to a person or thing which was previously named. An oblique hint.

In nullum avarus bonus est, in se pessimus. Lat. Prov.—“The avaricious man is kind to no person, but he is most unkind to himself.”

In nullum reipublicæ usum ambitiosâ loquelâ inclaruit. Lat. TACITUS.—“He became celebrated for an affected and ambitious verbosity, attended with no advantage whatever to the state.”

In omnibus fere minori ætati succurritur. Lat. Law Maxim.—“In all cases relief is afforded to persons under age.”—The law is so careful of persons of this description, that it will not suffer them to alienate, sell, or bind themselves by deed, unless it be for eating, drinking, schooling, physic, or such other matters as are absolutely necessary.

In omnibus quidem, maxime tamen in Jure, Æquitas est. Lat. Law Maxim.—“In all things, but particularly in the law, there is equity.”—Equity is said to be a corrective of the law, where the latter is deficient on account of its generality.

Inopem copia fecit. Lat.—“His plenty made him poor.”—His copiousness of ideas retarded and embarrassed his language.

In pace leones, in prælio cervi.—“In peace they are lions, in the battle deer.”—They are blusterers and cowards.

In perpetuam rei memoriam. Lat.—“To perpetuate the memory of the thing.”—An inscription generally found upon pillars, &c. raised to commemorate any particular incident.

In

IN———IN

In pertusum ingerimus dicta dollum. Lat. PLAUTUS.
 —“We fling our sayings into a cask bored through.”—Our advice is wholly thrown away in that quarter.

In petto. Ital.—“Kept back.”—Held in reserve.

In propria persona, Lat.—“In his own person.”—
 In personal attendance.

In puris naturalibus. Lat.—“In a purely natural state.”—i. e. Stark naked.

Inquinat egregios adjuncta superbia mores. Latin. CLAUDIAN.—“The best manners are stained by the addition of pride.”—Even virtue itself is disgusting in a severe and haughty garb.

Insanire paret certo ratione modoque. Lat. HORACE.
 —“He appears to be mad according to a certain mode and manner.”—He has much method in his madness.

Insanus omnis furere credit cæteros. Lat. Prov.—
 “Every madman thinks that all the rest of the world is mad.”

In se magna ruunt. Lat. LUCAN.—“Great things are apt to rush against each other.”—Two great powers are naturally inclined to jealousy, and thence to hostility.

In se totus teres atque rotundus. Lat. HORACE.—
 “Smooth, round, and collected in himself.”—This is a brief but excellent description of a man of the world. The metaphor is taken from a bowl, which, launched from a firm hand, is not to be diverted from its course by slight obstacles.

Insta

IN———IN

Instita hominibus libidine cendi de industria rumores.

Lat.—“Men having in them a natural desire to propagate reports.”—All are eager to circulate the reports which have reached them, and, it may be stated also, to give something of their own.

Instita hominibus natura violentiæ resistere. Lat. TA-

CITUS.—“To resist violence is implanted in the nature of man.”—The most degraded people will be aroused to action, when oppression has reached to a certain degree.

Inspicere tanquam in speculum in vitas omnium fabeo, atque ex aliis sumere exemplum sibi. Lat.

TERENCE.—“The lives of other men should be regarded as a mirror, from which we may take an example and a rule of conduct for ourselves.”—The accurate observer of human life, in witnessing the follies of others, will thence derive to himself so many lessons of caution and correctness.

Instar omnium. Lat.—“One example may suffice for all.”

In te Domine speravi. Lat.—“In thee, O Lord, have I put my trust.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl of STRATHMORE.

Integer vitæ scelerisque purus

Non eget Mauri jaculis nec arcu. Lat. HORACE.

—“The man who is pure of life, and unconscious of guilt, wants not the aid of Moorish bows and darts.”—In most situations of life, the consciousness of innocence is our best shield and our firmest security.

Integra

IN———IN

Integra mens augustissima possessio. Lat.—“A mind fraught with integrity is the most august possession.”—Motto of the Ir. Lord BLAYNEY.

In tenui labor, sed tenuis non gloria. Lat. VIRG.—“The labour was bestowed on a small object, but the fame of the achievement was not the less.”—To do little things well, is in some cases highly honourable.

Inter arma leges silent. Lat.—“The laws are silent in the midst of arms.”—During the violence of hostility but little attention is paid to the precepts of justice.

Interdum lacrymæ pondera vocis habent. Lat. OVID.—“Tears are sometimes equal in weight to words.”—The poet might have said that they are in general of more effect.

Interdum populus recte videt. Lat.—“The people sometimes see aright.”—They are occasionally deceived and misled; but they as often can judge, and with sound discretion.

Interdum stultus bene loquitur. Lat.—“Sometimes a fool speaks well.”—Every man is entitled to attention, as a wise remark may occasionally drop from a person, whose previous discourse had offered no ground of expectation.

Intererit multum Davusne loquatur an Heros. Lat. HORACE.—“There is a great difference when Davus is speaking, and when a Hero.”—The former is a servant: the rule is addressed to dramatic writers, who should always make their characters speak an appropriate language.

Inter nos. Lat.—“Between ourselves.”

In terrorem. Lat.—“In terror.”—As a warning.

Inter

IN——IN

Inter utrumque tene. Lat. Prov.—“Keep between both.”—Steer through life a safe and middle course, avoiding equally all extremes.

Intra fortunam quisque debet manere suam.

Lat. OVID.

“Every man should confine himself within the bounds of his own fortune.”

In transitu. Lat.—“On the passage.”—Goods in transitu are goods consigned by one person to another, and which have not yet reached the consignee.

In turbas & discordias pessimo cuique plurima vis: pax & quies bonis artibus indigent. Lat. TACITUS.—“In seasons of tumult and discord, bad men have most power; genius and goodness are only fostered by repose.”—In times of revolution and disorder the dregs are forced upward, and talent and virtue are depressed. This, however, is only for a season, and that which is the scum will soon become the sediment.

Intus & in cute novi hominem. Lat. PERSIUS.—“I know the man internally and externally.”—I have a thorough knowledge of his character.

Intuta quæ indecora. Lat. TACITUS.—“Those things that are unseemly are unsafe.”—Men in certain situations should remember, that as much danger frequently arises from forfeiting the respect, as from incurring the resentment of those who are beneath them.

In utroque fidelis. Lat.—“Faithful in both.”—The motto of the Sc. Visc. FALKLAND.

Invidia

Invidia Siculi non invenerunt tyranni

Tormentum majus.

Lat. JUVENAL.

"The Sicilian tyrants never devised a greater punishment than envy."—The bull of Perillus, or the dungeon of Disaustus, the author means to say, were comparatively slight inflictions.

Invidus alterius macrescit rebus opimis. Lat. HOR.

"The envious man grows lean at the success of his neighbour."—Nothing can exceed the pining of envy, under the supposition that a rival may possibly succeed.

In vino veritas. Lat.—"There is truth in wine."

—It extracts secrets from the reserved, and puts the habitual liar off his guard.

Invisa potentia, atq. miseranda vita eorum, qui se metui quam amari malunt. Lat. CORN. NEP.—

"The power is hateful, and the life is miserable, of those who wish to be feared rather than beloved."—Every government must be odious which takes for its basis the terrors instead of the good wishes of the people.

Invitat culpam qui peccatum præterit. Lat. SYRUS.

—"He who overlooks one crime invites the commission of another."

Invitum sequitur honor. Lat.—"Honour follows him against his inclination."—Motto of the Ir. Marquis of DONÉGALL.

Invita Minerva. Lat.—"Minerva (the goddess of wisdom) being unwilling."—The work was brought forth, invita Minerva, without any aid from genius, or from taste.

In

In vitium ducet culpæ fuga. Lat. HORACE.—“The avoiding of one fault sometimes leads into another.”—Thus a writer, in avoiding dull prolixity, often flies into the opposite extreme of obscure brevity.

Ipse dixit. Lat.—“He said it himself.”—On his ipse dixit—on his sole assertion.

Ipso facto. Lat.—“In the fact itself.”—By the fact when it shall appear.

Ipso jure. Lat.—“By the law itself.”—By the law when it shall be pronounced.

Ira furor brevis est. Lat. HORACE.—“Anger is a short madness.”—All the mischiefs of madness may be produced by a momentary passion.

Iram qui vincit hostem superat maximum. Lat.—“He who subdues his anger conquers his greatest enemy.”

———*Ira quæ tegitur nocet ;
Professa perdunt odia vindictæ locum.*

Lat. SENECA.

“Concealed resentment alone is dangerous.—Hatred, when declared, loses its opportunity of revenge.”

Iras & verba locant. Lat. MARTIAL.—“They let out for hire their passions and their words.”—This is the severest sarcasm ever uttered against the gentlemen of the long robe, who, it intimates, not only hire out their eloquence, but can also feign a degree of passion proportioned to the magnitude of the fee.

Is maxime divitiis utitur, qui minime divitiis indiget. Lat. SENECA.—“He makes the best use of riches, who has the smallest share of personal wants.”—By his self-denial, he has a larger disposable share to relieve the distresses of others.

Is ordo vitio careto, ceteris specimen esto. Latin.—

“Let that order be free from vice, and afford an example to all others.”—This was an ordinance contained in the Roman laws of the Twelve Tables, and addressed to the senatorial or patrician order. The best example should come from the highest place.

Isthuc est sapere non quod ante pedes modo est

Videre sed etiam illa, quæ futura sunt

Prospicere.

Lat. TERENCE.

“True wisdom consists not in seeing that which is immediately before our eyes, but in the foresight of that which is to arrive.”—The ordinary politician judges of events only as they pass before him in review; but the exalted statesman, by combining the present with other probable circumstances, will form something like an insight into futurity.

Ita comparatam esse naturam omnium, aliena ut melius videant & dijudicent, quam sua. Lat. TERENCE.

—“The nature of all men is so formed, that they see and discriminate in the affairs of others, much better than in their own.”—In the latter instance we are blinded by our feelings and prejudices:—in the former there is nothing to impede our natural perspicacity.

Ita finitima sunt falsa veris, ut in præcipitem locum non debeat se sapiens committere. Lat. CICERO.

“Falshood borders often so nearly on the truth, that a wise man should not trust himself on the precipice.”—He should be cautious of being deceived by appearances.

Ita lex scripta est. Lat.—“Thus the law is written.”

—A phrase used in polemics, to refer the adversary to the letter of the text in question.

Ita

IT——JA

Ite me Dii ament, ast ubi finm escio. Lat. TERENCE.
 —“As God shall judge me, I know not where I am.”—I am so confounded, that I know not what to do or say.

J.

Facta est alia. Lat.—“The die is cast.”—I have put every thing to venture, and I now must stand the hazard.

Jactitatio. Lat.—“A boasting.”—Jactitation of marriage is cognizable in the ecclesiastical court.

J'ai bonne cause. Fr.—“I have a good cause.”—Motto of the Marquis of BATH.

J'ai eu toujours pour principe de ne faire jamais par autrui, ce que je pouvois faire par moi-même. Fr. MONTESQUIEU.—“I have ever held it as a maxim, never to do that through another, which it was possible for me to execute myself.”—It is unnecessary to comment on this excellent principle, further than by remarking, how many men are ruined merely by their indolence in delegating to others the management of their affairs.

Jamais arrière. Fr.—“Never behind.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl of SELKIRK.

*Jamque opus exegi quod nec Jovis ira, nec ignes
 Nec poterit ferrum, nec edax abolere vetustas.*

Lat. OVID.

“I have now completed a work which neither the wrath of Jove, nor fire, nor the sword, nor the corroding tooth of time, shall be able to destroy.”—This triumphant boast of the poet with respect to his own productions, has certainly been realised. But at present this passage, as well as the Exegi monumentum, &c. of HORACE, are chiefly used in an ironical sense, and for the purpose of holding some proud boaster up to ridicule.

L

are

JA———JE

Januis clausis. Lat.—“The doors being shut.”—The matter was debated januis clausis—in a secret committee.

Jejunus raro stomachus vulgaria temnit. Lat. HORACE.—“The hungry stomach seldom despises vulgar fare.”—Or, as it may be differently translated, “The stomach which is seldom hungry, holds vulgar fare in contempt.”—It is more generally quoted in the former acceptation.

Je le tiens. Fr.—“I hold it.”—Motto of Lord AUDLEY.

Je ne cherche qu'un. Fr.—“I seek but for one.”—Motto of the Earl of NORTHAMPTON.

Je n'oublierai jamais. Fr.—“I shall never forget.”—The motto of the Earl of BRISTOL.

Je pense. Fr.—“I think.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl of WEMYSS.

Je suis prêt. Fr.—“I am ready.”—Motto of the Ir. Earl of FARNHAM.

Jeu de main, jeu de vilain. Fr.—“Practical tricks belong only to the lowest classes.”—No gentleman should deal in horse play, or vulgar roughness.

Jeu de mots. Fr.—“A play on words.”

Jeu d'esprit. Fr.—“A play of wit.”—A witticism.

Jeu de théâtre. Fr.—“Stage trick, attitude,” &c.

Jeune

JE——JU

Jeune on conserve pour la vieillesse : vieux on s'pargne pour la mort. Fr. LA BRUYERE.—“When young, men lay up for old age; when aged, they board for death.”—It is in the nature of parsimony to confirm itself and to increase.

Joco di mano, joco villano. Prov. Ital.—This is precisely in its meaning similar to the French proverb quoted above.—“Jeu de main,” &c.

Jour de ma vie. Fr.—“The day of my life.”—Motto of Earl DELAWARE.

Jucunda atque idonea dicere vitæ. Lat. HORACE.
“To describe whatever is pleasant and proper in life.”—This line well describes the duty of the didactic poet.

Jucundi alti labores. Lat. CICERO.—“The labours and difficulties through which we have passed are pleasing to the recollection.”

Jucundum & carum sterilis facit uxor amicum. Lat. JUVENAL.—“A barren wife will always produce a pleasant and engaging friend.”—This is spoken in derision of the legacy-hunters; a race every where common and despicable; and who pay their court more assiduously, where there is no expectation of an heir.

Judex damnatur cum nocens absolvitur. Lat.—“The Judge is found guilty when a criminal is acquitted.”—This is to be understood as applying only where prejudice or corruption has dictated the sentence.

Judicium Dei. Lat.—“The judgment of God.”—This was the name given by our ancestors to the ordeal, i. e. walking blindfold over red-hot plough-shares, &c. which has been long since disused.

J U ——— J U

Judicium parium, aut leges terræ. Lat.—“ The judgment of our peers, or the law of the land.”
—It is only by these, according to magna charta, that an Englishman can be condemned. This quotation from the Great Charter was adopted as his motto by the first Lord CAMDEN.

Fugulare mortuos. Lat.—“ To stab the dead.”—
To exercise superfluous cruelty.

Juncta juvant. Lat.—“ These things, when conjoined, mutually aid each other.”—Individually considered, they are of little avail; but, taken conjunctively, they form a strong body of evidence.

Jure humano. Lat.—“ By human law.”—By that law which is founded on the assent of men. It is generally used in opposition to the following:

Jure divino. Lat.—“ By divine law.”—This is the tenure by which, according to the high flying theories, the Kings of Great Britain hold their Crowns, without any reference to the will of the people.

Jus civile. Lat.—“ The civil law.”—The law of many European nations, and of some of our courts, particularly the Ecclesiastical, founded on the Code of JUSTINIAN.

Jus gentium. Lat.—“ The law of nations.”

Jus sanguinis, quod in legitimis successiombus spectatur, ipso natiuitatis tempore quæsitum est. Lat. Law Maxim.—“ The right of blood, which is regarded in all lawful inheritances, is found in the very time of nativity.”—It is the Jus primogenitura, or right of eldership, that is principally respected, the maxim being, that the next of worthiest blood should always inherit.

Jus

JU——KA

Ius summum sæpe summa est malitia. Lat. TERENCE.—“Law enforced to strictness sometimes becomes the severest injustice,” Iustitiæ soror fides. Lat.—“Faith is the sister of Justice.”—Motto of Lord THURLOW.

*Iustum & tenacem propositi virum
Non civium ardor prava iubentium,
Non vultus instantis tyranni,
Mente quatit solidâ.* Lat. HORACE.

“The man who is just and firm to his purpose will not be shaken from his fixed resolution, either by the mis-directing ardor of his fellow-citizens, or by the threats of an imperious tyrant.”—This passage is often and properly quoted. It offers the finest picture of a statesman whose calmness and perseverance can equally resist the excesses of popular tumult, or the menaces of an arbitrary sovereign, Iustus propositi tenax. Lat.—“The just man is steady to his purpose.”—The motto of Lord CHEDWORTH.

Juvenile vitium regere non posse impetum. Lat. SENECA.—“It is the fault of youth that it cannot govern its own violence.”—It either knows not, or will not consider, where the danger lies.

K.

Kairon gnothi. Kairon gnothi. Gr.—“Know your opportunity.”—This was the advice of PITATACUS, one of the seven Grecian sages. To let slip an occasion is the greatest proof of imbecility.

Kat' exochen. Kat' exochen. Gr.—“By way of excellence,” or “of peculiar distinction.”

L.

La beauté de l'esprit donne de l'admiration, celle de l'ame donne de l'estime, & celle du corps de l'amour. Fr.—“The charms of wit excite admiration, those of the heart impress esteem, and those of the body provoke to love.”

La beauté sans vertu est une fleur sans parfum. Fr. Prov.—“Beauty without virtue is like a flower without perfume.”—It may retain its colour, but has lost its essence.

Labitur & labetur in omne volubilis ævum. Lat. HORACE.—“The stream still flows, and will continue to flow for every age.”

La bonne fortune, & la mauvaise sont nécessaires à l'homme, pour le rendre habile. Fr.—“Good and bad fortune are necessary to a man, in order to make him adroit and capable.”—Few men are equal to the emergencies of life who have not experienced some of its vicissitudes.

Labor ipse voluptas. Lat.—“The labour itself is a pleasure.”—Motto of Lord KING.

Labor omnia vincit. Lat. VIRGIL. — “Labour conquers every thing.”—There are few difficulties which will not yield to perseverance.

Laborum dulce lenimen. Lat. HOR.—“The sweet solace of our labours.”—The appellation is given by the poet to his favourite study.

La clemence des princes n'est souvent qu'une politique pour gagner l'affection des peuples. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“The clemency of princes appears frequently to be nothing more than a measure of policy, calculated to gain the affections of the people.”

La

La confiance fournit plus à la conversation que l'esprit.

Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“ Confidence is, in general, found to furnish more to conversation than wit or talent.”

La cour ne rend pas content ; mais elle empêche qu'on ne le soit ailleurs. Fr. LA BRUYERE.—“ The court does not make a man happy ; but its habits prevent a man from enjoying happiness elsewhere.”—He who has long been busied in ambitious pursuits, can find little pleasure in quiet and retirement.

La crierie ordinaire fait qu'on s'y accoutume, & que chacun la méprise. Fr.—“ A clamorous abuse too often repeated, becomes so familiar to the ear as to lose its effect.”—If you scold your servant inordinately for not rinsing a glass, he will scarcely feel your rebuke when you charge him with a robbery.

La decence est le teint naturel de la vertu, & le fard du vice. Fr. Prov.—“ Decency is the genuine teint of virtue, and the false colouring of vice.”

*La dette antiquité fut toujours vénérable
Je ne la trouve pas, cependant adorable.*

Fr. BOILEAU.

“ To the learning of antiquity I pay all due respect and veneration, but I do not therefore hold it as sacred.”—Some deference is due to that which the lapse of time has rendered venerable, but a gem dug from a modern is equally valuable with one which is taken from an ancient mine.

La durée de notre passions ne dépend pas plus de nous, que la durée de notre vie. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“ The duration of men's passions depends no more upon themselves, than the duration of their life.”

La faim chasse le loup du bois. Fr. Prov.—“Famine drives the wolf from the wood.”—According to the English Proverb—Hunger breaks through stone walls.

La faveur met l'homme au dessus de ses égaux, & sa chute au dessous. Fr. La BRUYERE.—“Favour places a man above his equals, and his fall or disgrace beneath them.”

L'Affair s'achemine. Fr.—“The business is going forward.”

La faiblesse de l'ennemi fait notre propre force. Fr.—“The weakness of the enemy forms a part of our own strength.”—This is a maxim in war, where all advantages are fairly to be taken. There is a similar sentiment in another language:

Dolus an virtus quis in hoste requirat?

“What matters it, whether the enemy has been defeated by stratagem or by valour?”

La grande sagesse de l'homme consiste à connoître ses folies. Fr.—“The great wisdom of man consists in the knowledge of his follies.”—To be convinced of our false steps is in some degree an advance towards wisdom.

L'Éagle d'une maison est un sot dans une autre. Fr. GRESSSET.—“The eagle of one house is but a fool in another.”

Laisser dire le monde, & toujours bien faire, c'est une maxime, qui étant bien observée assure notre repos, & établit enfin notre réputation. Fr.—“To let the world talk, and always to act well, is a principle of action, which, well observed, will secure our repose, and in the end establish our reputation.”

La langue des femmes est leur épée, & elles ne la laissent pas rouiller. Fr. Prov.—“The tongue of a woman is her sword, which she seldom suffers to rust.”—A sarcasm sufficiently severe on the proverbial loquacity of the sex in general.

La libéralité consiste moins à donner beaucoup, qu'à donner à propos. Fr. LA BRUYERE.—“Liberality does not consist so much in giving a great deal, as in giving seasonably.”

La maladie sans maladie. Fr.—“The disease without a disease.”—The hypochondriac distemper.

La marque d'un mérite extraordinaire c'est de voir que ceux que l'on vient le plus, sont contraints de le louer. Fr.—“The proof of extraordinary merit is to see that it extorts praise, even from those with whom it is an object of envy.”

L'ame n'a point de secret que la conduite ne révèle. Chin. Prov.—“The soul has no secret which the conduct does not reveal.”—The most practised hypocrite cannot at all times conceal his secret feelings.

La moitié du monde prend plaisir à médire, & l'autre moitié à croire les médisances. Fr. Prov.—“One half the world takes a pleasure in detracting, and the other half in believing all that detraction utters.”

La moquerie est souvent une indigence d'esprit. Fr. LA BRUYERE.—“Jesting, in some cases, only proves a want of understanding.”

La morale trop austère se fait moins aimer, qu'elle ne se fait craindre : & qui veut qu'on profite de ses leçons, donne envie de les entendre. Fr.—
“Morality, when too austere, is less beloved than than feared: and he who wishes that others should profit from his lessons, should make those persons desirous of listening to them."

La mort est plus aisée à supporter sans y penser, que la pensée de la mort sans peril. Fr. PASCAL.—
"Death is itself more easy when it comes without previous reflection, than the thought of death even without the danger."

L'Amour de la justice n'est en la plupart des hommes, que la crainte de souffrir l'injustice. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—"The love of justice is in most men nothing more, than the fear of suffering injustice."—Our anxiety on this subject may be traced to a motive of selfishness.

L'Amour est une passion qui vient souvent sans savoir comment, & qui s'en va aussi de même. Fr.—
"Love is a passion which frequently comes we know not how, and which quits us exactly in the same manner."

L'Amour & la fumée ne peuvent se cacher. Fr. Prov.—
"Love and smoke are two things which cannot be concealed."—Of the passion of love the faintest glimmerings give a strong light, as the smallest crevice will suffer a volume of smoke to escape.

L'Amour-propre est le plus grand de tous les flatteurs. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—"Self-love is the greatest of all flatterers."—It is the lot of almost every man to flatter himself into an higher self-opinion, than can possibly be effected by the adulation of others.

*L'Amour soumet la terre, assujettit les cieux—
Les rois sont à ses pieds, il gouverne les dieux.*

Fr. CORNEILLE.
"Love rules o'er the earth and controuls the heavens—kings are at his feet, and gods are his subjects."

subjects."—This extravagant flight, as it may be supposed, is seldom quoted but in the way of ridicule.

Language des halles. Fr.—“The language of the markets.”—Billingsgate.

La parfait valeur est de faire sans témoins, ce qu'en seroit capable de faire devant tout le monde. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“True courage is shewn by doing, without witnesses, that which a man is capable of doing in the face of the world.”—In the former case it is certain that ostentation has no share in the effort.

La Passion fait souvent un fou du plus habile homme, & rend souvent habiles les plus fots. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Love often makes a fool of the cleverest man, and as often gives cleverness to the most foolish.”

La Patience est amère, mais son fruit est doux. Fr. J. J. ROUSSEAU.—“Patience is bitter, but its fruit is sweet.”—Men are generally meliorated by suffering.

La Patience est la remède la plus sûr contre les calomnies : le tems tôt ou tarde decouvre la vérité. Fr.—“Patience is the surest antidote against calumny. Time, sooner or later, will discover the truth.”

La Philosophie, qui nous promet de nous rendre heureux, nous trompe. Fr.—“Philosophy, which promises to render us happy, deceives us.”

La Philosophie triomphe aisement des maux passés & de maux à venir ; mais les maux présents triomphent d'elle. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Philosophy can hold an easy triumph over the misfortunes misfortunes which are past and to come; but those which are present triumph over her.”—By philosophy we are taught to dismiss our regrets for the past and our apprehensions of future evils; but the immediate sense of suffering she cannot teach us to subdue.

La plupart des hommes n'ont pas le courage de corriger les autres, parcequ'ils n'ont pas le courage de souffrir qu'on les corrige. Fr.—“The generality of mankind have not sufficient courage to correct others, because they themselves are wanting in fortitude to suffer correction.”—An adviser should not only have wisdom to admonish, but be also fortified, in conscious innocence, to bear the retort which his advice may possibly provoke.

Lapsus linguæ. Lat.—“A slip of the tongue.”

La reputation d'un homme est comme son ombre, qui tantôt le suit, & tantôt le precede; quelquefois elle est plus longue, & quelquefois plus courte que lui. Fr. Prov.—“The reputation of a man is like his shadow; it sometimes follows, and sometimes precedes him; it is sometimes longer, and sometimes shorter than his natural size.”—As our shadows vary in their length and direction, according to our relative position with the sun, so the reputation of many men is either magnified or diminished, from relative situations and circumstances.

L'argent est un bon serviteur & un méchant maître. Fr. BOUHOUS.—“Money is a good servant, but a bad master.”—It is useful when well employed—it is mischievous when men devote themselves wholly to its acquisition.

L'Art

LA———LA

L'Art de vaincre est celui de mépriser la mort. Fr. M. de SIVRY.—“The art of conquering is that of despising death.”

La science du gouvernement n'est qu'une science de combinaisons, d'applications, & d'exceptions, selon les tems, les lieux, les circonstances. Fr. ROUSSEAU.—“The science of government is only a science of combinations, of applications, and of exceptions, according to the times, places, and circumstances.”

La silence est la vertu de ceux qui ne sont pas sages. Fr. BOUHOURS.—“Silence is the virtue, or the best quality of the foolish.”—If it does not remove, it at least conceals their deficiency.

Lateat scintilla forsan. Lat.—“A small spark may lurk unseen.”—This hemistich, alluding to the vital spark, is very happily adopted as the motto of the Humane Society.

Latet anguis in herba. Lat.—“There is a snake concealed in the grass.”—There is a lurking danger before you, which you do not immediately perceive.

Latitat. Law. Lat.—“He lurks.”—A writ of summons issuing from the King's Bench, which by a fiction states the defendant to be in a state of concealment.

Laudari a viro laudato. Lat.—“To be praised by a man, himself deserving of praise.”—This is certainly the most valuable species of commendation.

Laudato

LA——LE

Laudate ingentia rura—exiguum colite. Lat. VIRG.

—"Bestow your praise upon large domains, but your preference on a small estate."—The latter, to a contented mind, is likely to produce the greater share of happiness.

Laudator temporis acti. Lat. HOR.—"A praiser of the times which are past."—An old man who commends nothing but what he has seen in his early days.

La verité ne fait pas autant de bien dans le monde, que ses apparences y font de mal. Fr.—"Truth does not so much good in the world, as its appearances do of mischief."—The deceit and hypocrisy of men are the prime sources of evil in the moral world.

La vertu dans l'indigence est comme un voyageur, que le vent & la pluie contraignent de s'envelopper de son manteau. Fr. Prov.—"Virtue in indigence is like a traveller who is compelled, by the wind and rain, to wrap himself up in his cloak."—In this situation the virtuous man is overlooked, and the passing world is heedless of his proportions and qualifications.

La vertu n'iroit pas si loin, si la vanité ne lui tenoit compagnie. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—"Virtue would not go so far, if vanity did not bear it company."—We are forwarded in our best actions by a secret wish to gain the good opinion of others.

Laus Deo. Lat.—"Praise be to God."—Motto of Sc. Viscount ARBUTHNOT.

Le beau monde. Fr.—"The gay or fashionable world."

Le

Le bien ne se fait jamais mieux, que lors qu'il s'opère lentement. Fr. DE MOY.—“Good is never effected more happily than when it is produced slowly.”—Sudden revolutions, either in the affairs of Empires or of individuals, are seldom productive of beneficial consequences.

Le bonheur ou le malheur des hommes ne dépend pas moins de leur humeur, que de la fortune. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“The good or bad fortune of men depends as much on their own disposition, as on chance.”

Le bonheur ou le malheur vont d'ordinaire a ceux qui ont le plus de l'un ou de l'autre. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Good and bad fortune are found severally to visit those who have the most of the one or the other.”—The prosperous man has in general nothing but lucky additions; whilst those in adversity, find only new visitations of misfortune.

Le bonheur de l'homme en cette vie ne consiste pas a être sans passions : il consiste a en être le maître. Fr.—“The happiness of man in this life does not consist in the absence, but in the mastery of his passions.”

Le bon temps viendra. Fr.—“The good time will come.”—Motto of Earl HARCOURT.

Le cœur d'une femme est un vrai miroir qui reçoit toutes sortes d'objets sans s'attacher a pas un. Fr.—“The heart of a woman is a real mirror, which reflects every object without attaching itself to any.”—This image conveys a strong, though we must hope not always, a just reflection on the caprice and mutability of the fairer sex.

Le contrat de gouvernement est tellement déssous par le despotisme, que le despote est le maitre qu'aussi long-temps qu'il est le plus fort; & que sitot qu'on peut l'expulser il n'a point a reclamer contre la violence.

FR. ROUSSEAU.—“The contract of government is so far dissolved by despotism, that the despot only retains his mastery whilst he continues the more strong; and when it is found possible to expel him, he has no right to protest against the violence of the measure.”

Le déssous des cartes. Fr.—“The lower side of the cards.”—Il est au déssous des cartes—he sees the faces of the cards.—He is in the secret.

Le diable est aux vaches. Fr.—“The devil is in the cows.”—There is the devil to pay.

Legis constructio non facit injuriam. Lat. Law Max.—“The interpretative construction of the law shall wrong no person.”—If a person, for instance, grants away all his goods and chattels, those of which he is possessed as an executor shall not pass, for that would be a wrong to the estate of the testator.

Le grand œuvre. Fr.—“The great work.”—That is, the philosopher's stone.

Le jeu est le fils d'avarice, & le père du desespoir. Fr. Prov.—“Gaming is the son of avarice, and the father of despair.”

Le jeu n'en vaut pas la chandelle. Fr. Prov.—“The game is not worth the candles.”—The object which you aim at is not worthy of your expence or labour.

L'Elevation

L'Elevation est au merite, ce que la parure est aux belles personnes. Fr.—“Elevation is to merit, what dress is to handsome persons.”—It adorns and sets off that excellence, of which it forms no constituent part.

Le merite est souvent un obstacle à la fortune, & la raison de cela s'est qu'il produit toujours deux mauvais effets, l'envie & la crainte. French.—“Merit is often an obstacle to success, and the reason is, that it ever produces two bad effects, envy and fear;”—envy from those who cannot reach the same effort, and fear from those whom it may possibly supplant.

Le mieux est l'ennemi du bien. Fr.—“The best, is the enemy of well.”—We lose our present advantages, in seeking after those which are unattainable.

Le moineau en la main vaut mieux que l'oie qui vole. Fr. Proverb.—“A sparrow in the hand is better than a goose on the wing.”—A bird in the hand, &c.

Le monde est le livre des femmes. Fr. ROUSSEAU.—“The world is the book of women.”—They generally profit more from observation than from reading.

Le mot d'enigme. Fr.—“The word of the enigma.”—The key of the mystery.

Le moyen le plus sûr de se consoler de tout ce qui peut arriver, c'est d'attendre toujours au pire. Fr.—“The most certain consolation against all that can happen, is always to expect the worst.”—Those, whose hopes are too much buoyed up, have always to meet the severest mortification.

L'empire des lettres. Fr.—“The republic of letters.”

LE———LE

*Leniter, ex merito quidquid patiare ferendum est,
Quæ venit indignè pœna dolenda venit.*

Lat. OVID.

"That which is deservedly suffered may be borne with calmness, but when the pain is unmerited, the grief is resistless."—The poet is justifying his own strong feelings on having been banished, as he states, without having deserved that punishment.

L'ennui du beau amène le gout du singulier. Fr. Prov.

"A disgust of that which is proper, leads to a taste for singularity."—Men who are tired of conforming to established modes and habits, take up new ones of their own, and since they cannot otherwise distinguish themselves, claim a notice from their affected peculiarities.

Leonina societas. Latin.—"A lion's company."—That dangerous association where the whole of the prey is monopolized by the strongest and most powerful.

Le pays du mariage a cela de particulier que les étrangers ont envie de l'habiter, & les habitans naturels voudroient en être exiles. Fr. MONTAIGNE.—"The land of marriage has this peculiarity, that strangers are desirous of inhabiting it, whilst its natural inhabitants would willingly be banished from thence."—This is a sarcasm upon matrimony, which unfortunately, in many cases, is not more biting than just.

Le plus lent à promettre est toujours le plus fidèle à tenir. Fr. ROUSSEAU.—"The man who is most slow in promising, is most sure to keep his word."

Le

Le plus sage est celui qui ne pense point l'être. Fr. BOILEAU.—“The wisest man, in general, is he who does not think that he is so.”—The truly wise bear with them a consciousness of their own failings.

Le présent est pour ceux qui jouissent; l'avenir pour ceux qui souffrent. Fr.—“The present is for those who enjoy, the future for those who suffer.”

Le refus des louanges est souvent un desir d'être loué deux fois. Fr.—“The refusal of praise often intimates nothing more than that the praise is regarded as insufficient;”—and of course that a double portion would be more acceptable.—An honest mind will fairly take the eulogy which is due: a vain one will inhale the incense of flattery almost to suffocation.

Le Roi le veut. Fr.—“The King wills it.”—Motto of Lord CLIFFORD.

Le Roi s'avisera. Fr.—“The King will consider.”—These are phrases derived from the Normans, by which the King either gives his sanction to an act, or postpones his assent.—The latter is disused in practice.

Le Roi & l'état. Fr.—“The King and the State.”—Motto of E. ASHBURNHAM.

Les amertumes sont en morale ce que sont les amers en médecine. Fr.—“Misfortunes are in morals what bitters are in medicine.”—They are equally disagreeable in the first instance, but act in the same manner as corroborants.

Les cartes sont brouillées. Fr.—“The cards are mixed.”—There is a violent misunderstanding.

Les consolations indiscrettes ne font qu'aigrir les violentes afflictions. Fr. ROUSSEAU.—“Consolation, when improperly administered, does but irritate the affliction.”

Les esprits mediocres condamnent d'ordinaire tout ce qui passe leur portée. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Men of confined understandings, in general, find fault with every thing which is beyond their comprehension.”

Les grands hommes ne se bornent jamais dans leur desseins. Fr. BOUHOURS.—“Great men never limit themselves in their plans.”—They extend them beyond the reach of ordinary capacities.

Le sage entend a demi mot. Fr.—“The sensible man understands half a word.”—He can take a brief intimation.

Le sage songe avant que de parler a ce qu'il doit dire ; le fou parle, & ensuite songe a ce qu'il a dit. Fr. PROV.—“A wise man thinks before he speaks ; but a fool speaks, and then thinks of what he has been saying.”

Le sçavoir faire. Fr.—“The knowledge how to act.”—Address, subtlety.

Le sçavoir vivre. Fr.—“The knowledge how to live.”—An acquaintance with life and manners.

Les doux yeux. Fr.—“Soft or amorous glances.”

Le secret d'ennuyer est celui de tout dire. Fr. VOLTAIRE.—“The secret of tiring and disgusting is to say all that can be said.”—Applied to those dull plodding writers, who think it necessary to exhaust their subject, without leaving any thing to be supplied by the judgment or imagination of their readers.

Les

Les eaux sont basses chez lui. Fr.—“The waters are low with him.”—His resources are exhausted.

Les femmes peuvent tout, parcequ'elles gouvernent les personnes qui gouvernent tous. Fr. Prov.—“Women can do every thing, because they rule those who command every thing.”

Les femmes sont extrêmes ; elles sont meilleurs ou pires que les hommes. Fr. LA BRUYÈRE.—“The character of women is in the extremes. They are always better or worse than men.”

Les fous font des festins, & les sages les mangent. Fr. Prov.—“Fools make feasts, and wise men eat them.”

Les gens qui ont peu d'affaires sont de très grand parleurs. Moins on pense, plus on parle. Fr. MONTESQUIEU.—“Men who have little business are great talkers. The more one thinks, the less one speaks.”—Thus it is observed, that women, who have little to do with business, are most flippant in their discourse.

Les grands noms abaissent, au lieu d'élever, ceux qui ne les savent pas soutenir. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Great names debase, instead of raising, those who know not how to sustain them.”—A title stained by vice, or degraded by ignorance, is but a higher claim to infamy.

*Les hommes sont égaux, ce n'est point la naissance
C'est la seule vertu qui fait la différence.*

Fr. VOLTAIRE.

—“All men are equal ; it is not birth, it is virtue alone that makes the difference.”—This is the only proper ground on which the much-contested contested doctrine of equality can be founded; including, however, the principle of equal rights.

Les hommes sont la cause que les femmes ne s'aiment point. Fr. LA BRUYERE.—“It is the men that cause the women to dislike each other.”

Le silence est le parti le plus sûr de celui, qui se desfe de soi-même. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“To be silent is the safest choice for the man who distrusts his own powers.”—He will in that case be ensured against incurring disgrace.

Les jeunes gens disent ce qui font, les viellards ce qu'ils ont fait, & le sots ce qu'ils ont envie de faire. Fr.—“Young folks tell what they do, old ones what they have done, and fools what they wish to do.”

Les malheureux, qui ont de l'esprit, trouvent des ressources en eux-mêmes. Fr. BOUHOURS.—“The unfortunate men of genius find resources in themselves.”—They have that within, which tends to console them for the neglect of the world.

Les Mœurs. Fr.—“Manners or morals.”—Neither of these English words, however, convey the idea of the original, “Manners” comprehending too little, and “Morals” too much. The ingenious author of the World defines it thus: “A general exterior, decency, fitness, and propriety of conduct, in the common intercourse of life.”

Les murailles ont des oreilles. Fr.—“Walls have ears.”—Be cautious how you speak.

Le

Le soleil ni la mort ne peuvent se regarder fixement.

Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Neither the sun or death can be looked upon with fixed attention.”—The same effect is produced by different causes: the brilliancy of the former dazzles the eye, and the horrors of the latter distract the contemplation.

Les passions sont les vents qui font aller notre vaisseau, & la raison est le pilote qui le conduit; le vaisseau n'iroit point sans les vents, & se perdrait sans le pilote. Fr.—“The passions are the winds which urge our vessel forward, and reason is the pilot which steers it; the vessel could not advance without the winds, and without the pilot it would be lost.”

L'Esperance est le songe d'un homme éveillé. Fr. Prov.—“Hope is the dream of a man awake.”—It is properly called a dream, because it is allied, not with the judgment, but with the imagination, L'Esprit a son ordre qui est par principes & demonstrations: le cœur en a un autre. Fr. PASCAL.—“The mind has its arrangement; it proceeds from principles to demonstrations. The heart has a different mode of proceeding.”—Lovers conclude first, and reason afterwards.

L'Esprit est toujours la dupe du cœur. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“The understanding is ever the dupe of the heart.”—Our feelings are in general sure to get the better of our reason.

L'Esprit ressemble aux coquettes; ceux qui courent après lui sont ceux qu'il favorise le moins. Fr.—“Wit is like a coquette. Those who run after it, are those the least favoured.”—Those who laboriously hunt after wit, generally find themselves deluded in the pursuit; it is an electric flash, which comes unbidden by any previous solicitation.

Les querelles ne dureroient pas longtems, si le tort n'étoit que d'un côté. FR. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Disputes would not continue so long, if the wrong lay but on one side.”—As both parties, generally speaking, are in fault, the dispute is prolonged by their mutual recriminations.

Les tems présent est grès de l'avenir. FR. LEIBNITZ.—“The present time is big with the future.”—Great events are in the womb of time.

Le travail éloigne de nous trois grands maux, l'ennui, le vice, & le besoin. FR. VOLTAIRE.—“Labour rids us of three great evils—irksomeness, vice, and poverty.”

Le travail du corps délivre des peines de l'esprit; & c'est ce que rend les pauvres heureux. FR. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“The labour of the body relieves us from the fatigues of the mind, and this it is which forms the happiness of the poor.”

Les vertus se perdent dans l'intérêt, comme les fleuves se perdent dans la mer. FR. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Our virtues lose themselves in our interests, as the rivers lose themselves in the ocean.”

———Levius fit patientia
Quicquid corrigere est nefas. Lat. HORACE.—“Patience makes that more tolerable, which it is impossible to prevent or remove.”—In the homely language of our proverb—“What can't be cured, must be endured.”

Le

L E ——— L E

Le vent du bureau est bon. Fr.—“The official wind is good.”—Things takes a favourable turn.

———— Levia perpeffi finus

Si flenda patimur.

Lat. SENECA.

“We have suffered but lightly, if we have suffered that which we should only weep for.”
We have been so deeply injured that not our tears but our acts must speak for us.

Love fit quod bene fertur onus. Lat. OVID.—

“That load becomes light, which is cheerfully borne.”—If the spirits are buoyant, they diminish in a great degree the weight of suffering.

Levis est dolor qui capere concilium potest. Lat. SENECA.—

“That grief is light which can take counsel.”—On excessive grief all advice is thrown away.

Levis solet timere qui propius timet. Lat. SENECA.

“He fears less who fears more nearly.”—Our apprehensions in general diminish with the approach of the object.

Le vrai mérite ne dépend point du tems ni de la mode.

Fr. Prov.—“True merit depends not on the time or on the fashion.”—It avails itself not of modes or opinions, but rests securely on its intrinsic strength.

Le vrai moyen d'être trompé, c'est de se croire plus fin que les autres. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—

“The sure mode of being deceived, is to believe ourselves to be more cunning than the rest of the world.”

Lex neminem cogit ad impossibilia. Lat. LAW MAX.

“The law compels no man to impossibilities.”
—Thus the condition of a bond to go to Vienna or Constantinople in a few hours, would be void from its impossibility.

Lex

L E ——— L I

Lex talionis. Lat.—“The law of retaliation.”—
The law of requital in kind—as alluded to in the scriptures of “an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth,” &c.

Lex terræ. Lat.—“The law of the land.”—Taken generally in contradistinction to the civil law, or code of JUSTINIAN.

L'Homme est toujours Pensant, & Pensant toujours l'homme. Fr. Prov.—“The man is always the child, and the child is always the man.”—The youth in general bespeaks what the man will be, and the man retraces to our mind what he had promised in his early years.

L'Homme n'est jamais moins misérable que quand il paroît depourvu de tout. Fr. ROUSSEAU.—“Man is never less miserable than when he appears to be deprived of every thing.”

L'Honneur acquis est un caution de celui qu'on doit acquérir. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“The honour which a man has acquired is a pledge for that which he is afterwards to acquire.”—When a person has obtained a certain degree of repute, he is less likely to mingle any thing unworthy in his subsequent pursuits.

L'Hypocrisie est un hommage que le vice rend à la vertu. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Hypocrisy is an homage, which vice renders to virtue.”—Vicious men put on a mask, as being ashamed of appearing to the world in the features of their own consciousness.

Libertas. Lat.—“Liberty.”—Motto of the Irish Baron CARBERY.

Libertas

Libertas & natale solum. Lat.—“Liberty and my native soil.”—This was the motto, which, when assumed by a new-made Irish Peer, gave birth to the rhyming line of SWIFT,

“Fine words, I wonder where he stole ‘em.”

Libertas est potestas faciendi id quod jure liceat. Lat.

CICERO.—“Liberty consists in the power of doing that which is permitted by the law.”—This is certainly a just definition. There cannot be rational freedom, where there are arbitrary restraints.

———Libertas ultima Mundi

Quo steterit ferienda loco.

Lat. LUCAN.

“The remaining liberty of the world, in that precise place, was to be smitten and destroyed.”—This is the sentiment attributed by the poet to Cæsar. It has been used in many a subsequent struggle for freedom, which it has been said, “if there subdued, could never revive.” Factions, however, are temporary, but principles are everlasting.

Liberté toute entière. Fr.—“Liberty complete.”—

Motto of the Irish Earl of LANESBOROUGH.

Licet superbus ambules pecuniæ

Fortuna non mutat genus.

Lat. HORACE.

“Though you strut proud of your money, yet fortune has not changed your birth.”—Addressed to a wealthy upstart.

———Licuit semperque licebit

Parcere personis, dicere de vitiis.

Lat.

“It has been, and ever will be, lawful to attack vice, sparing at the same time the individual.”

—Or as thus translated,

“The best and surest method of advice
Should spare the person, tho’ it brands the vice.”

Burton’s Anat. of Melancholy.

Lima

Lima labor ac mora. Lat.—“The labour and delay of the file.”—The slow process of polishing a literary production. This is a process now nearly forgotten. “Most men write now,” Lord ORFORD says, “as if they expected that their works should live no more than a month.”

L'Imagination gallope, le jugement ne va que le pas. Fr.—“The imagination gallops, the judgment only goes a foot-pace.”—The former anticipates the conclusion which the latter awaits in sober leisure.

L'Industrie des Hommes s'épuise à briguer les charges ; il ne leur en reste plus pour en remplir les devoirs. Fr. D'ALEMBERT.—“The industry of men is now so far exhausted in canvassing for places, that none is left for fulfilling the duties of them.”—This maxim is so self-evident with respect to the majority of courtiers, that we apprehend it may pass without a comment.

Lingua mali pars pessima servi. Lat. JUVENAL.—“The tongue is the worst part of a bad servant.”—Their calumny surpasses all their other faults.

Litera scripta manet. Lat.—“The written letter remains.”—Words may pass away and be forgotten, but that which is committed to writing, will remain as evidence.

Littus ama, altum alii teneant. Lat. VIRG.—“Do you keep close to the shore, let others venture on the deep.”—Consult your own safety, and let others indulge in the spirit of adventure.

Livre rouge. Fr.—“The red book.”—The encreased and encreasing history of places and pensions.

Locum tenens. Lat.—One who holds the place of another.”—A deputy; a substitute.

Locus sigilli. Lat.—“The place of the seal.”—Denoted by L.S. on all diplomatic papers.

L'on espère de vieillir, & l'on craint la vieillesse: c'est à dire on aime la vie, & on fuit la mort. Fr. LA BRUYERE.—“We hope to get old, and yet are afraid of age:—in other words, we are in love with life, and wish to fly from the thoughts of mortality.”

—— Longa est injuria, longæ

Ambages.

Lat. VIRGIL.

“The account of this injury is rather long, and the particulars tedious.”—Used as an apology in recounting one's own wrongs.

Longum iter est per præcepta, breve & efficax per exempla. Lat. SENECA.—“Even the wisest counsels make their way but slowly: the effect of good example is more summary and effectual.”

L'on ne vaut dans ce monde que ce que l'on veut valoir.

Fr. LA BRUYERE.—“Every man is valued in this world as he shews by his conduct that he wishes to be valued.”

L'orgueil ne veut pas devoir, & l'amour-propre ne veut pas payer. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—

“Pride wishes not to owe, and self-love is unwilling to pay.”

Louer

L O ——— L U

Louer les Princes des vertus qu'ils n'ont pas, c'est leur dire impunément des injures. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“To praise Princes for virtues which they have not, is to reproach them with impunity.”

Loyal devoir. Fr.—“Loyal duty.”—Motto of Lord CARTERET.

Loyal je serai durant ma vie. Fr.—“I shall be loyal during my life.”—Motto of Lord STOURT.

Loyauté n'a honte. Fr.—“Loyalty has no shame.”—Motto of the Duke of NEWCASTLE.

Loyauté m'oblige. Fr.—“Loyalty binds me.”—Motto of the Duke of ANCASTER.

Lubricum linguae non facile in paenam est trahendum. Lat. Law Max.—“A light expression, (or as it is familiarly called ‘a slip of the tongue,’) is not easily punishable.”—Words of heat, as to call a man rogue, knave, &c. will bear no action at law, unless they are specifically applied as—in such an affair—to a certain person, &c.

Lucina sine concubitu. Lat.—“Child-birth from a woman who has had no intercourse with man.” The possibility of such an occurrence was at one time stoutly but absurdly maintained. The phrase is now used only in a ludicrous sense, to mark the birth of a child, unprefaced by the rites of matrimony.

Lucri bonus odor ex re qualibet. Lat.—“The smell of gain is good, from whatever it proceeds.”—This was the answer of VESPASIAN to his son TITUS, when the latter reproached him with having laid a tax on urine.

LU———LU

Lucus a non lucendo. Lat.—The word “lucus,” a grove, is derived from, “lucere,” to shine, because the rays of the sun are supposed rarely to penetrate through its foliage. The phrase is generally used to mark an absurd or discordant etymology.

Ludere cum sacris. Lat.—“To trifle with sacred things.”—To jest profanely on consecrated matters.

*Ludit in humanis divina potentia rebus,
Et certam præsens vix habet hora fidem.*

Lat. OVID.

“The powers above seem to sport with human affairs, so that we can scarcely be assured of the hour which is passing.”

Lugete Veneres Cupidinesque. Lat. CATULLUS.—“Weep all ye Venuses and Cupids.”—Mourn all ye Loves and Graces. This quotation is generally used in an ironical sense.

L'une des marques de la médiocrité de l'esprit est de toujours conter. Fr. LA BRUYERE.—“One of the marks of mediocrity of understanding, is to be fond of telling long stories.”

Lupus pilum mutat non mentem. Lat. Prov.—“The wolf changes his coat, but not his disposition.”—No change of appearance can alter that which is radically perverse.

L'Usage fréquent des finesses est toujours l'effet d'une grande incapacité, & la marque d'un petit esprit. Fr.—“The frequent use of artifices and cunning is ever the effect of incapacity, and the mark of a narrow mind.”—A man of talent takes in the whole of a business at a single view, and proceeds directly to his end: those in general advance circuitously who are not certain either of their end, or of their means.

Maître

M.

Macte virtute. Lat. VIRG.—“Proceed in virtue.”
—In general used ironically, as we sneeringly say, “Go on and prosper.”

Magister artis ingentique largitor Venter.

Lat. PERSIUS.

“The belly is the teacher of arts, and the be-flower of genius.”—Hunger or necessity is the mother of invention.

Magistratus indicat virum. Lat.—“The magistrate shews the man.”—Motto of the Earl of LONS-DALE.

Magna Charta. Lat.—“The great Charter.”—
The charter of our liberties obtained from King JOHN, by the Barons of England—
Ann. 1215.

Magna est veritas & prævalebit. Lat.—“The truth is most powerful, and will ultimately prevail.

Magna servitus est magna fortuna. Lat. SENECA.
“A great fortune is a great slavery.”—It brings with it many peculiar burdens and inconveniences.

Magnas inter opes inops. Lat. HORACE.—“Poor in the midst of the greatest wealth.”—A just description of a rich miser.

Magni est ingenii revocare mentem a sensibus, & cogitationem a consuetudine abducere. CICERO.
Tusc. disp.—“It is a proof of great talents to be able to recal the mind from the senses, and to separate thought from habit.”—There is much much difficulty in leading men to reason abstractedly with respect to objects, which have been rendered familiar by long usage.

Magni nominis umbræ. Lat. LUCAN.—“The shadow of a mighty name.”—Applied to a man who inherits the name or title of a great ancestor, but without any indication of greatness in himself.

Magni refert quibuscum vixeris. Lat. Prov.—“It is matter of importance to know with whom you live.”—This corresponds with the Spanish proverb—“Tell me what company you keep, and I will tell you who you are.”

Magno conatu magnas nugæ. Lat. TERENCE.—“By great efforts to obtain great trifles.”—To waste much labour on inadequate objects.

Magnos homines virtute metimur non fortunâ. Lat. CORN. NEP.—“We estimate great men by their virtue (or valour) and not by their success.”—This is unhappily the philosophic but not the worldly admeasurement. Men now look less to the means than to the end, and it is the absolute result which, generally speaking, stamps the character.

Magnum est argumentum in utroque fuisse moderatum. Lat.—“It is a great argument in favour of a man, that when placed in different situations, he displayed in each the same spirit of moderation.”

Magnum est vestigial parsimonia. Lat. CICERO.—“Economy is of itself a great revenue.”—Many men get rich by their savings, rather than by their gains.

MA———MA

Maintien le droit. Fr.—“Maintain the right.”—
The motto of Lord CHANDOS.

Maison de ville. Fr.—“The town-house.”—The place where municipal justice is distributed.

Maitre des hautes œuvres. Fr.—“The master of the high works.”—The hangman.

Maitres des basses œuvres. Fr.—“The master of the low works.”—The nightman.

Major e longinquo reverentia. Lat.—“Respect is greater when coming from a distance.”—The persons and objects with which we are familiar, seldom excite a high degree of reverence. No man, it has been well observed, was ever a hero in the view of his valet de chambre.

——— Major famæ sitis est quam

Virtutis ; quis enim virtutem amplectitur ipsam

Præmia si tollas.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“The thirst of fame is greater than that of virtue ; for who would embrace virtue itself, if you take away its rewards ?”—More are in love with the character of virtue, than with virtue itself.

Major hæreditas venit unicuique nostrum a jure & legibus, quam a parentibus. Lat. CICERO.—

“A greater inheritance comes to each of us from our rights and laws, than from our parents.”—
The security which we enjoy from the protection of the laws when well administered, is the most valuable possession we derive from our ancestors.

Mala grammatica non vitiat chartam. Lat. LAW.

Maxim.—“Bad grammar does not vitiate the deed.”—An error in the language is not to be regarded, if it does not involve some ambiguity.

Male

Male cuncta ministrat

Impetus.

Lat.

“Anger manages every thing badly.”—We seldom act rightly when under the dominion of passion.

Maledicus a malefico non distat nisi occasione. Lat.

QUINTILIAN.—“An evil sayer differs only from an evil-doer in the want of opportunity.”

—The difference is but slight between a calumniator and an assassin.

Male imperando summum imperium amittitur. Lat.

SYRUS.—“The greatest empire may be lost by the misrule of its governors.”—A political maxim, the truth of which has been proved in every age and country.

Male parta male dilabuntur. Lat. PLAUTUS.—

“Things ill-acquired, are as badly expended.”
What’s got over the devil’s back, &c.

Male verum examinat omnis

Corruptus iudex.

Lat. HORACE:

“A corrupt judge is not qualified to enquire into the truth.”—This truism is often directed against an adversary who is supposed to be under undue influence.

Malim inquietam libertatem quam quietum servitium.

Lat.—“I would rather have a disturbed liberty, than a quiet slavery.”—The ferment of a free, is preferable to the torpor of a despotic government.

Malo indiseratam prudentiam, quam loquacem stultitiam. Lat. CICERO.—

“I prefer silent prudence to loquacious folly.”—That sober sense, which neither wants nor cultivates the flowers of speech, is infinitely preferable to all the coarse fluency of ignorance.

Malo mihi male quam mollior esse. Lat. SANCTA.—

"I would rather be sick than idle."—The evil of a slight indisposition is transient: the mischiefs of idleness, once rooted, are incurable.

Malo mori quam fœdari. Lat.—"I had rather die than be debased."—The motto of the Irish Earl of ATHLONE and of Viscount KINGSLAND.

Malorum facinorum ministri quasi exprobantes aspi-ciuntur. Lat. TACITUS.—"The agents in evil actions are in every instance regarded as reproaching the deed."—There is a jealousy between the principals and the agents on such occasions, which is productive, and that in a very early stage, of mutual contempt and of mutual distrust.

Malum in se. Lat.—"A thing evil in itself."—Malum prohibitum.—"A thing evil because forbidden."—To illustrate the legal distinction between these two species of evil, it is only necessary to observe that murder is "an evil in itself."—The exportation of wool, commonly called "owling," was not punishable as an evil until it was prohibited by the law.

Malum vas non frangitur. Lat. Prov.—"A bad vessel is seldom broken."—Things which are held most cheaply, are in general the most secured from danger.

Mandamus. Law Lat.—"We order."—A writ which issues out of the King's Bench, sent to a Corporation, commanding them to restore or admit a person to an office, &c.

Manebant

Manebant uestigia marientis libertatis. Lat. TACITUS.—“There still remained the traces of expiring liberty.”—Though the people was oppressed, the spirit of freedom was not utterly extinguished.

~~Manet~~ Manet alta mente repositum. Lat. VIRGIL.—“It remains deeply fixed in the mind.”—This phrase, by which the poet describes the inveterate resentment of Juno, is now frequently used to denote a long embosomed sense of injury.

Manibus pedibusque. Lat.—“With hands and feet.”—It was a struggle manibus pedibusque, or, as we should express it in English, “With tooth and nail.”

Manu forte. Lat.—“With a brave arm.”—Motto of the Scotch Baron REAY.

Manus hæc inimica tyrannis. Lat.—“This hand is hostile to tyrants.”—The motto of Lord CARRYSFORT.

Manus justa nardus. Lat.—“The just hand is as precious ointment.”—The motto of the Irish Viscount MAYNARD.

Manus manum fricat. Lat. Prov.—“One hand rubs the other.”—Applied to two persons who gratify the vanity, or forward the views of each other by mutual adulation. The sense is much the same as that of the homely English proverb, “Do you tickle me, and I’ll tickle you.”

Marchandise qui plait est à demi vendue. Fr. Prov.—“The goods which please are already half-sold.”—We have a corresponding proverb in English—“Please the eye and pick the purse.”

MA——MA

Marie ton fils quand tu voudra, mais ta fille quand tu pourra. Fr. Prov.—“Marry your son when you will, and your daughter when you can.”—Get rid of the latter precarious charge as soon as possible.

Marquè du bon coin. Fr.—“Marked with a good stamp.”—Possessed of superior qualities.

Mars gravior sub pace latet. Lat. CLAUDIAN.—“A severer war lurks under the shew of peace.”

Mater familiàs. Lat.—“The mother of a family.”

Materiam superabat opus. Lat. OVID.—“The workmanship surpassed the materials.”—This is applied either to great genius employed on a slight subject, or to that mechanical ingenuity which, when employed upon, can heighten the value even of the most precious materials.

Mature fias senex. Lat.—“May you early prove an old man.”—May you learn the wisdom of age long before you are depressed with its infirmities.

Mauvaise honte. Fr.—“False shame.”—Excessive bashfulness or timidity.

Maxima illecebra est peccandi impunitatis spes. Lat. CICERO.—“The greatest incitement to guilt is the hope of sinning with impunity.”—In order to deter men from crimes, it is not so necessary that the punishment should be severe, as that it should be certain.

Maximus in minimis. Lat.—“Very great in very little things.”—A studious attention to petty objects is the sure sign of a narrow mind. When Cardinal CHIGI told another member of the corps

corps diplomatique that the same pen had served him for three years, he was instantly and properly set down, as a man whose mind was not framed for any enlarged or liberal discussion.

Medio tutissimus ibis. Lat. OVID.—“ You will advance most safely in the middle.”—To consult your safety, you should through life avoid all extremes.

Mediocria firma. Lat.—“ The middle station is the safest.”—Motto of the Ir. Visc. GRIMSTON.

—— Mediocribus esse poetis

Non Dii, non homines, non concessere columnæ.

Lat. HORACE.

“ Mediocrity is not allowed to poets, either by the gods, or men, or the pillars which sustain the bookfellers’ shops.”—By this whimsical periphrase, the poet means simply to say, that mediocrity, which in other pursuits is respectable, in that of poetry is generally disregarded.

Meglio è un negro accordo, che un grassa sentenza.
Prov. Ital.—“ A lean assent is better than a fat sentence.”—A simple grant of the favour requested, is better than an eloquent refusal.

Μελετη το παν. Gr. Melete to pan.—“ Care and industry do every thing.”—This was the saying of Perizander, one of the seven sages of Greece. To unceasing industry nothing is impracticable, that is not physically impossible.

Mel in ore, verba lactis,

Fel in corde, fraus in factis.

Lat.

“ Honey in his mouth, words of milk,

“ Gall in his heart, and fraud in his acts.”

These are monkish rhymes, in which a mischievous hypocrite is not ill-described.

Melius est cavere semper quam patiri semel. Lat. Proverb.—“It is better to be always on our guard, than to suffer once.”—A life of caution is overpaid by the avoidance of one serious misfortune.

Melius non tangere clamo. Lat. HORACE.—“I cry out, ‘it is better not to touch me.’”—This is the language of the Satyrist, who has his quiver full of defence.

Memento mori. Lat.—“Remember Death.”—He is a mere memento mori—he serves for nothing but to remind us of our mortality.

Memento omnia amantes. Lat. OVID.—“Lovers remember every thing.”—Nothing escapes their view or recollection.

Memorabilia. Lat.—“Things to be remembered.” Matters deserving of record.

Memoria in eternâ. Lat.—“In eternal remembrance.”—Motto of the Ir. Visc. TRACEY.

Mendici, mimi, balatrones. Lat. HOR.—“Beggars, players, and varlets,” of every description.—A croud or groupe of contemptible persons.

*Mene salis placidi vultum, fluctusque quietos
Ignorare jubes? mene huic confidere monstro?*

Lat. VIRGIL.

“Do you desire that I should not distrust the appearance of the placid sea, and of the waves which are now quiet? do you wish that I should confide in such a monster?”—Do you think that I am not on my guard against those deceitful appearances which are the sure fore-runners of danger?

Mmm

ME———ME

Meno and thea. Gr. Meno acide thea,—"Sing goddess the anger,"—The first words of Homer's Iliad, which are sometimes quoted to ridicule the affectation of scholarship.

Mens conscia recti. Lat.—"A mind conscious of rectitude."—Motto of the Ir. Viscount ASHBROOK and of Lord MACARTNEY.

Mens invicta manet. Lat.—"The mind remains unconquered."—The body may sink under its sufferings, but the mind of a brave man will hold itself aloof, and despise the afflictions of adversity, and even the aggravations of torture.

Mensque pati durum sustinet ægra nihil. Lat. OVID,—"The sick mind cannot bear any thing which is harsh."—The mind of affliction is so sensitive, as to shrink from the slightest touch of offence.

Mens sana in corpore sano. Lat. HORACE,—"A sound mind in a healthy body."—The first and best wish which can present itself to a rational mind.

Mens sibi conscia recti. Lat. HORACE.—"A mind which is conscious to itself of rectitude."—The best support under suffering, and the best armour against calumny.

———Mensuraque juris

Vis erat.

Lat. LUCAN.

"And power was the only measure of right."
—This well describes a state of anarchy, where every man feels that what he can do, he may do.

Meo sum pauper in ære. Lat. HORACE.—"I am poor, but only in debt to myself."—If I have abridged my own comforts, my consolation is that I owe nothing to others, Meum & tuum. Lat.—“ Mine and yours.”—It is a question of—meum & tuum—The dispute is respecting the distinct rights of property.

• Meus mihi, suus cuique carus. Lat. PLAUTUS.—
“ Mine is dear to me, and dear is his to every man.”—Every one has his own prepossessions and predilections.

Mezzo termine. Ital.—“ A middle line or middle course of conduct.”

Mieux vaut un “ tenez” que deux “ tu Pauras.”
Fr. Prov.—One “ take this” is better than two “ thou shalt have.”—This saying cannot be better explained than by our own proverb—“ A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.”

Mibi cura futuri. Lat.—“ My care is for the future life.”—Motto of the Ir. Baron ONGLEY.

*Mille hominum species & rerum discolor usus
Velle suum cuique est nec voto vivitur uno.*

Lat. PERSIUS.

“ There are a thousand descriptions of men; and their sense of things is various; each has his own inclination, and the wishes of all cannot be the same.”—Providence has ordained this diversity; were the choice of every individual the same, our contests must be perpetual.

Minor est quam servus dominus, qui servos timet.
Lat. Prov.—“ That master is lower than a servant, who is in dread of his servants.

*Minus in parvos fortuna furit,
Leviusque ferit leviora Deus.* Lat. SENECA.
“ The rage of fortune is less directed against the humble, and Providence strikes more lightly on the low.”—Those of humble condition are exempt from the violent reverses which frequently afflict their superiors.

Minuti

Semper & infirmi est animi exiguae voluptas

Ultio.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“Revenge is always the pleasure of a little, weak, and narrow mind.”—No man of an enlarged understanding indulges in so dark a passion.

Minutiae. Lat.—“Trifles.”—To enter into minutiae—To discuss the most minute and trifling parts of the business.

Mirabile dictu. Lat.—“Wonderful to tell.”

Miramur ex intervallo fallentia. Lat.—“We admire at a distance the things that deceive us.”—Our sight is apt to misrepresent remote objects, but the deception vanishes on a nearer approach.

Mirantur taciti, & dubio pro fulmine pendent. Lat. STATIUS.—“They stand in silent astonishment, and wait for the fall of the yet doubtful thunder-bolt.”—Used to describe a general apprehension and consternation.

Mirum. Lat.—“Wonderful.”

Misce stultitiam consiliis brevem. Lat. HORACE.—“Mix short follies with wise counsels.”—Let your moments of dissipation bear no proportion to those of sober reflection.

Misera est magni custodia census. Lat. JUVENAL.—“The care of a large estate is an unpleasant thing.”—Even wealth itself brings with it its cares and inconveniences.

Misera est servitus ubi jus est aut vagum aut incognitum. Lat. Law Maxim.—“The servitude is there miserable, where the law is either vague or unknown.”—In every good government, the laws should be precisely defined and generally promulgated.

Miserrima

Miserissima fortuna est quæ inimico caret. “That is a most wretched fortune which is without an enemy.”—His condition must be low indeed, who possesses not any thing for which he can be envied.

Miseris succurrere disco, Lat. VIRG.—“I learn to relieve the wretched,”—having borne myself the scourge of affliction.

Miseram pacem vel bello bene mutari. Lat. TACIT.—“A peace may be so wretched as not to be ill-exchanged for war.”—This can only apply to a war of self-defence, the calamities of which ought to be borne, in preference to the inflictions of an hostile neighbour.

Miserum est aliorum incumbere famæ. Lat. JUVENAL.—“It is a wretched thing to live on the fame of others.”—Nothing can be more pitiable than authors, who, without proper resources, assume a borrowed splendour from the talents of others.

Mittimus. Law Lat.—“We send.”—The writ by which a magistrate commits an offender to prison.

Mobilitate viget, & vires acquirit eundo. Lat. VIRGIL.—“It flourishes in its quickness of motion, and gains new strength in its progress.”—The poet speaks of Fame or common Report, which gathers strength as it proceeds, and swells, like the snow-ball, as it rolls along.

Moderata durant. Lat. SENECA.—“Moderate things last or continue.”—Power, health, and faculties are all exhausted by excess.

Modeste

Modeste tamen & circumspetto iudicio de tantis viris pronunciandum est, ne quod plerisque accedit, damnum quæ non intelligunt. Lat. QUINTILIAN.

—"We should speak modestly and with a circumspcct judgment of such great men, lest we should fall into the fault of many, who condemn that which they do not understand."—This is often used in reprobation of a shallow class of politicians, who, not being able to sound the depths of statesmen, condemn their measures, merely because they cannot fathom either their ends or means.

Modeste fama neque summis mortalibus spernenda est.

Lat. TACITUS.—"Fame modestly courted is not to be despised by the highest characters."—They will not descend to low means in its pursuit, but when fairly earned it must be considered a most gratifying attainment.

Modo me Thebis, modo ponit Athenis. Lat. HORACE.

—"He now places me at Thebes, and now at Athens."—This is used as a compliment to a great dramatic poet who can change his scene, and lose sight of the unities of time and place, without diminishing the interest which he has once excited.

Mollia tempora fandi. Lat. HORACE.—"The favourable occasions for speaking."—These the poet intimates are to be sought for with great men. That request may succeed at one time, which at another may be considered as an opportunity.

Molliter manus imposuit. Lat. Law Term.—"He but gently laid hands."—This phrase is used in a defence set up against an action or indictment for an assault. "He but gently laid hands" on the prosecutor, for the purpose of expelling him, as he had a right to do, from the premises.

————Memento

*Memento mare vertitur,
Eodem die ubi luserunt, navigia forbentur.*

Lat. JUVENAL.

"In a moment the sea is convulsed, and on the same day vessels are swallowed up where they lately sported on the waves."—This is not confined in its application to the perils of the sea.—It is equally applicable to the general vicissitude of human affairs.

Moniti meliori sequamur. Lat. VIRG.—"Being admonished, let us follow better things."—Having had the lessons of experience, let our future prudence attest their effects.

Monstrum horrendum, informe, ingens, cui lumen ademptum.

Lat. VIRG.

"An horrid monster, gross and shapeless, and who had lost his sight."—This is the description given by Virgil of the Giant POLYPHEMUS, when his one eye had been bored out by Ulysses.—It is sometimes applied to an absurd proposition, conceived in ignorance, and brought forth by presumption.

Moribus antiquis stat Roma. Lat.—"Rome stands by her ancient morals."—She has preserved her stability by refusing to give way to innovation.

Mors omnibus communis. Lat.—"Death is common to all men."

Mors sola fatetur, Quantula sint hominum corpuscula.

Lat. JUVENAL.

"Death alone confesses how weak and feeble is the body of man."—It rests with death, to shew the weakness of ambition and the inanity of pride.

Mors

MO———MU

Mors ultima linea rerum est. Lat. HORACE.—

“Death is the last boundary of human affairs.”

—The speculations of wealth and ambition are all bounded by the grave.

Mortuo leoni & lepores insultant. Lat.—“Even hares can insult a dead lion.”—The mightiest of the dead may be insulted by the weakest of the living.

Mot du guet. Fr.—“A watch word.”

Mots d'usage. Fr.—“Words of usage.”—Phrases in common use.

Moveo & propitior. Lat.—“I rise and am appeased.”—Motto of the Ir. Baron WELLES.

———Movet cornicula risum

Furtivis nudata coloribus.

Lat. HORACE.

“The crow, when stripped of her borrowed plumes, provokes our laughter.”—No object is more ridiculous than the plagiarist, when deprived of his stolen ornaments.

Mugitus labyrinthi. Lat.—“The bellowing of the labyrinth.”—This was a favourite topic with the Roman Poetasters.—It is therefore put for any common-place topic of ordinary poets or writers.

———Mulier cupido quod dicit amanti

In vento, & rapidâ scribere oportet aquâ.

Lat. CATULLUS.

“Whatever a woman says to an eager lover should be written in the winds, or in the rapid stream.”—Her declarations are so mutable and so fleeting in their nature, as to be unworthy of record or remembrance.

Mulier

Mulier quæ sola cogitat, male cogitat. Lat. Prov.—
 “A woman when thinking by herself, is always thinking of mischief.”—One of the commonplace raileries directed against the sex.

Multa cadunt inter calicem supremæque labra.

Lat. LABERIUS.

“Many things fall between the cup and the lip.”—Disappointment will interfere between us and our nearest expectations.

*Multa dies, variusque labor mutabilis ævi
 Rettulit in melius, multos alterna revisens
 Lufit & in folido rurfus Fortuna locavit.*

Lat. VIRGIL.

“Time and the changeful labor of ages have restored many things, and Fortune, after many capricious alterations, has again placed them upon solid ground.”—This alludes to the mutations to which kingdoms and empires are subject, and expreffes a hope, confolingly used in revolutionary times, that matters will in the end be brought to rest upon a solid foundation.

Multa docet fames. Lat. Proverb.—“Hunger teaches many things.”—Necessity is the mother of invention.

Multa ferunt anni venientes commoda secum

Multa recedentes adimunt.

Lat. HORACE.

“The coming years bring many advantages with them—when retreating, they take away as many.”—There is a tide in the affairs of men.—What we gain by the influx, we miserably lose by the reflux of that tide.

Multa gemens. Lat.—“Mourning deeply.”—He compliced multa gemens, with every expreffion of grief.

Multa

Multā petentibus desunt multa. Lat. HORACE.—

“Those who covet many things, are in want of many.”—Our wants are limited or extended, in proportion with our desires.

Multa renascentur quæ jam cecidere. Lat. HORACE.

—“Many things shall revive which have fallen into decay.”—Taste and fashion are ever reverting and fluctuating.

———Multi

Committunt eadem diverso crimina fato

Ille crucem sceleris pretium tulit, hic diadema.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“Many men have committed the same crimes with a very different result.—One may ascend a throne by that act, for which another mounts the scaffold?”

———Multis ille bonis flebilis occidit,

Nulli flebilior quam mihi.

Lat. HORACE.

“He died lamented by many good men, but by none more lamented than by me.”

Multis parasse divitias non finis miseriarum fuit sed mutatio. Non est in rebus vitium sed in animo. Lat.

SENECA.—“To have acquired riches is with many not to put an end to, but to change the nature of their misery.—The fault however is not in the riches, but in the mind.”—Wealth is very properly compared to manure; both are useless when in the heap, and both are thrown away upon an unkindly soil.

Multis terribilis, caveto multos. Lat. AUSON.—

“If thou art terrible to many, then beware of many.”

Multi te oderint, si teipsum ames. Lat.—“Many will hate you if you love yourself.”—Self-love, when strongly manifested, is of all things the most disgusting.

MU——MU

Multos ingratos invenimus, plures facimus. Lat.—

“We find many ungrateful men, and we make more.”—Ingratitude is but too frequent, yet it is sometimes provoked by the arrogance of the benefactor.

—Multos in summa pericula misit

Venturi timor ipse mali.

Lat. LUCAN.

“The mere apprehension of a coming evil, has put many into a situation of the utmost danger.”

—Our alarms frequently lead us into perils more fearful even than those which we first apprehended.

Multos qui confictari adversis videantur, beatos; ac plerosque quanquam magnus per opes, miserrimos: si illi gravem fortunam constanter tolerant, hi prosperâ inconsultè utantur. Lat. TACITUS.—

“There are many who appear to encounter with adversity, who are happy; whilst some in the midst of riches are miserable: all depends on the fortitude with which the former bear the pressure, and on the unadvised manner in which the latter employ their wealth.”

Multum abludit imago. Lat. HORACE.—“The picture is by no means like.”—You perhaps intended a likeness, but multum abludit imago: you have given a caricature not a resemblance.

Multum in parvo. Lat.—“Much in a little.”—A great deal said in a few words. A compendium of knowledge.

Mundus universus exercet histrioniam. Lat. PETRO-

NIUS ARBITER.—“All the World practises the art of acting.”

“All the World’s a Stage.”

Munus Apolline dignum. Lat. HOR.—“An offering worthy of Apollo.”—Spoken of an excellent Poem.

Murus

MU———NA

Murus æneus conscientia sana. Lat.—“A sound conscience is a brazen wall of defence.”—Motto of Earl SCARBOROUGH.

Mus in pice. Lat. Proverb.—“A mouse in a pitch barrel.”—Applied to a man who is always perplexing himself in useless disquisitions and enquiries.

Mutata formâ interimitur prope substantia rei. Lat. Law Maxim.—“The form being changed, the substance of the thing is destroyed.”—Thus, if trees are improperly cut down, and laid as beams in a house, their nature is so far altered, that they cannot be seized in that shape; but the owner is to bring his action for the damage.

Mutare vel timere sperno. Lat.—“I scorn to change or fear.”—The motto of the Duke of BEAUFORT.

———Mutato nomine de te

Fabula narratur.

Lat. HORACE.

—“Change but the name, the tale is told of you.”—You smile at the satire whilst you suppose it levelled at another; yet if the name were altered, you would find it reach to “your own business and bosom.”

N.

———Nam dives fieri qui vult,

Et cito vult fieri.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“He who desires to become rich, wishes that desire to be soon accomplished.”—There is a natural alliance between avarice and rapacity.

Nam ego illum periisse duco, cui quidem periit pudor.

Lat. PLAUTUS.—“I regard that man as lost, who has lost his Sense of shame.”

*Nam genus & proavos & quæ non fecimus ipsi
Vix ea nostra voco.* Lat. OVID.

“For birth and ancestry, and that which we have not ourselves achieved, we can scarcely call our own.”—The man who prides himself not on his personal conduct, but on a long line of ancestry, has been ludicrously, but justly, compared to the potatoe-plant, the best part of which is under-ground.

*Nam pro jucundis aptissima quæque dabunt Dii.
Charior est illis homo quam sibi.* Lat. JUVENAL.

“For the gods, instead of what is most pleasing, will give what is most proper. Man is more dear to them, than he is to himself.”

———*Namque inscitia est
Adversum stimulum calces.* Lat. TERENCE.

“It is consummate ignorance to struggle against the spur.”—It is absurd to make an unavailing resistance to superior force, or in the language of Scripture, “to kick against the pricks.”

*Nam scelus intra se tacitum qui cogitat ullum
Facti crimen habet.* Lat. JUVENAL.

“For he who silently intends a crime, has all the guilt of the deed.”—There are cases in which to resolve upon, and to commit a guilty act, are equal in point of criminality.

*Nam vitiis nemo sine nascitur, optimus ille est
Qui minimis urgetur.* Lat. HORACE.

“For no man being born without faults, the best is he who has the fewest.”—No man can attain perfection; the nearest approach to it is therefore entitled to the highest praise.

Natura beatis

Omnibus esse dedit, si quis cognoverit uti.

Lat. CLAUDIAN.

“Nature has granted to all to be happy, if we did but know how to use her benefits.”—The greater part of the calamities of life arise from the abuse and perversion of the gifts and blessings of nature.

Natura ipsa valere, & mentis viribus excitari, & quasi quodam divino spiritu afflari. Lat. CICERO.

—“To be strong from nature; to be excited by the powers of the mind; and to be inspired, as it were, by a Divine spirit.”—Such is the definition of genius, given by this great orator.

Natura lo fece, & poi ruppà la stampa. Ital.

ARIOSTO.—“Nature after making him, broke the mould.”—This eulogy has all the extravaganza of the Italian school. It imports of the subject, what no man can predict—that future time shall never see his equal.

Natura! quam te colimus inviti quoque.

Lat. SENECA.

“Oh! Nature, how we worship thee, however unwilling.”—How potent are thy dictates, and how resistless are thy laws!

Naturam expellas furca, tamen usque recurret. Lat.

HORACE.—“You may turn nature out of doors with violence, but she will still return.”—Nature will continue to plead and enforce her rights, in despite of every temporary restraint.

Ne cede malis

Sed contra audentior ito.

Lat. VIRGIL.

“Do not yield to misfortunes, but advance to meet them with greater fortitude.”

NE———NE

Ne cedo malis. Lat.—“Do not yield to misfortunes.”—Motto of Earl ALBEMARLE.

Nec cupias nec metuas. Lat.—“Neither desire nor fear.”—Motto of Lord DOVER, and of Earl HARDWICKE.

Nec Deus interfit nisi dignus vindice nodus. Lat. HORACE.—“Nor let a god interfere, unless the difficulty be worthy of such an intervention.”—The poet is advising play-wrights.—Do not introduce an extraordinary or supernatural appearance, unless on an occasion of the highest importance.

Necesse est cum insanientibus furere, nisi solus relinquaris. Lat. PETRONIUS.—“It is necessary to be made with the insane, unless you would be left quite alone.”—Even the wise man will bend and accommodate himself in some degree, to the follies and prejudices of those around him, in order to avoid the reproach of singularity.

Necesse est facere sumptum, qui quærit lucrum. Lat. PLAUTUS.—“It is necessary that he who looks for gain, should incur expence.”—No profit in common life, can be made without a previous risk and expenditure.

Necesse est in immensam exeat Cupiditas quæ naturalem modum transiit. Lat. SENECA.—“When once ambition has passed its natural bounds, its progress is sure to be immense.”—It is so with Avarice, which the word Cupiditas may imply, and indeed with the whole train of evil passions. When the first restraints are got over, their further progress mocks all calculation.

Necesse

NE ——— NE

Necesse est ut multos timeat, quem multi timent. Lat. SYRUS.—“He that is feared by many, must be in fear of many.”—The tyrant who governs others by terror, has cause to be himself the most terrified.

Necessitas non habet Legem. Lat. Law Maxim.—“Necessity has no law.”—Any man may justify, for instance, the pulling down the house of another, if it be done to prevent the spreading of a dangerous fire.

—————*Nec lex est æquior ulla,
Quem necis artificem arte perire sua.* Lat. OVID.—“Nor is there any law more just, than that the contriver of destruction should perish by his own arts.”—It is gratifying to man, and seems the peculiar dispensation of God, when the malignant authors of mischief are themselves the victims of their own contrivances.

Nec luisse pudet, sed non incidere ladum. Lat. HORACE.—“The shame is not in having sported, but in not having broken off the sport.”—The levities of youth are pardonable, but if not discontinued in time, they form the strongest reproach to maturity and age.

Nec male notus eques. Lat.—“A horseman or patrician well known.”—The motto of the Ir. Viscount SOUTHWELL.

Nec me pudet ut istos, fateri nescire quod nesciam. Lat. CICERO.—“I am not ashamed, as some men are, to confess my ignorance of that which I do not know.”

Nec mora, nec requies. Lat. VIRGIL.—“There was no rest or repose.”—The affair was prosecuted without the smallest intermission, Nec placida contentus quiete est. Lat.—“Nor is he contented with soft repose.”—Motto of the Earl of PETERBOROUGH.

Nec pluribus impar. Lat.—“Not an unequal match for numbers.”—This was the vain-glorious motto adopted by LOUIS XIV. when he formed his chimerical project of universal empire.

Nec prece nec pretio. Lat.—“Neither by bribe nor entreaty.”—Motto of the Ir. Viscount BATEMAN.

Nec quærere nec spernere honorem. Lat.—“Neither to seek nor despise honours.”—Motto of Viscount BOLINGBROKE.

Nec scire fas est omnia. Lat. HORACE.—“It is not permitted to know all things.”—This approaches to the maxim of the English Poet:
“One Science only can one Genius fit,
“So vast is Art, so narrow human Wit.”

Nec semper feriet quodcunque minabitur arcus. Lat.—“The arrow will not always hit the object which it threatens.”—The best aims are often fruitless.

Nec sibi sed toto genitum se credere mundo. Lat. LUCAN.—“To think that he was born, not for himself, but for the world.”—This is the rare character of an enlarged and philosophic mind.

Nec temere nec timide. Lat.—“Neither rashly or fearfully.”—The motto of E. DARLINGTON, and of Ir. Viscount BULKELEY.

Nec tibi quid liceat, sed quid fecisse decebit Occurrat, mentemque domat respectus honesti.

Lat. CLAUDIAN.

“Do not consider what you may do, but what it it will become you to have done, and let the sense of honour subdue your mind."—This is a most admirable epitome of ethics. If men were to look not to the extent of their power, but to that mode of conduct which will bear reflection, the great would be more respected, and the powerless more happy.

NE———NE

Nec timeo, nec sperno. Lat.—“I neither fear nor despise.”—Motto of the Irish Visc. BOYNE.

Nec quies gentium sine armis, nec arma sine stipendiis, nec stipendia sine tributis. Lat. TACITUS.—“The tranquillity of nations is not to be preserved without arms, troops cannot be maintained without pay, and their pay cannot be made good without taxes.”—This is a favourite quotation with those who think that wars should be waged against opinion, and that the people have nothing to do with taxes, but to pay them.

Ne cui de te plusquam tibi credas. Lat.—“Do not believe any man more than yourself, when he speaks of you.”—When a man flatters you, you should correct his assertions by your own consciousness.

Nec verbum verbo curabis reddere fidus

Interpres.

Lat. HORACE.

“Nor should the translator aim at rendering the original word for word.”—In this servility of translation the spirit of the original will certainly evaporate.

Nec vixit male qui natus moriensque fefellit. Lat. HORACE.—“Nor has he spent his life badly who has passed it from his birth to his burial in privacy.”—The man is fortunate who escapes completely from the cares of public life.

Nefas

Nefas nocere vel malo fratri puta. Lat. SENECA.—

“You should esteem it a crime to hurt even a bad brother.”—You should enlighten, admonish, and, if possible, reform him, but abstain from injury or violence. This maxim should in a great degree govern our conduct towards all our fellow-men.

Negatas artifex sequi voces. Lat. PERSIUS.—“He attempts to express himself in a language which nature has denied him.”

Nem. con. Abbrev. for nemine contradicente.

Nem. dis. Abbrev. for nemine dissentiente.—“No person opposing or disagreeing.”—These two phrases are in fact synonymous. The latter, however, is exclusively used in the House of Peers.

Nemo allegans suam turpitudinem audiendus est. Lat. Law Maxim.—“No man alledging his own baseness is to be heard.”—The evidence of spies, informers, and of every man who does not come into court with clean hands, is to be listened to with distrust.

Nemo bis punitur pro eodem delicto. Lat. Law Maxim.—“No man can be twice punished for the same crime.”

Nemo in sese tentat descendere. Nemo! Lat. PERSIUS.—“What! no man attempts to descend into his own bosom,” and examine his faults.—We are too much busied in looking into those of others.

Nemo me impune lacessit. Lat.—“No man provokes me with impunity.”—The motto of the order of the Thistle, to the nature of which plant it has a reference.

Nemo

Nemo mortalium omnibus horis sapit. Lat. PLINY.—

“No man is wise at all times.”—This phrase, so frequently employed, enforces a serious truth, that the wisest of mankind have their lapses of indiscretion.

Nemo punitur pro alieno delicto. Lat. Law Maxim.

—“No man is to be punished for the crime of another.”—It is to be observed, that this is a Law and not a State Maxim. The people in every State are punished for the sins of those who administer the Government.

Nemo repente fuit turpissimus. Lat. JUVENAL.—

“No man ever became in an instant the most base.”—The progress from virtue towards vice is so gradual and insensible, that it is almost impossible to suppose an instantaneous transition from one to the other.

Nemo sine vitiis nascitur, optimus ille est,

Qui minimis urgetur.

Lat. HORACE.

See “Nam vitiis nemo.”

Nemo solus sapit. Lat. PLAUTUS.—

“No man is wise alone.”—No man should be so confident in his own opinion as to reject all advice.

Ne plus ultra. Lat.—“Nothing more beyond.”—

He was arrived at his “ne plus ultra.” His utmost efforts could not carry him any further.

Nè pour la digestion. Fr. LA BRUYERE.—

“Born merely for the purpose of digestion.”—A man who comes into life merely to enjoy what are called its good things, without rendering any service to the community.

Ne puero gladium. Lat. Prov.—

“Do not trust a boy with a sword.”—Do not commit a rash measure into inconsiderate hands.

Neque

NE———NE

Neque cæcum ducem neque amentem consultorem. Lat. from ARISTOPH.—“Do not take either a blind guide, or a weak adviser.”—The former is not more dangerous than the latter.

Neque culpa neque lauda teipsum. Lat.—“Neither blame nor applaud thyself.”—The latter in conversation is a silly egotism, and the former is most frequently to be traced to an affectation as absurd.

Neque enim quies gentium sine armis, neque arma sine stipendiis, neque stipendia sine tributis. Lat. TACITUS.—“The quiet of nations cannot be maintained without arms: armies cannot be supported without pay; or that pay be made good without taxes.”—This maxim is often quoted in defence of the established systems of taxation. It would however be of much more weight, if it could be proved that an appeal to arms is never made but in cases of necessity, or self-defence.

Neque extra necessitates belli præcipuum odium gero. Lat.—“I bear no particular hatred beyond the necessity of war.”—I feel no resentment beyond that which is justified by the occasion.

Neque fœmina, amissâ pudicitia, alia abnuerit. Lat. TACITUS.—“When a woman has lost her chastity, she will not shrink from any other crime.”—It has been remarked in all ages, that when a woman has abandoned that prime virtue of her sex, the avenues of her mind are open to every temptation, and every vice.

Neque mala vel bona quæ vulgus putet. Lat. TACITUS.—“Things are neither good nor bad, as they appear to the judgment of the multitude.”
—The

NE———NE

—The many, unless in a few prominent instances, are held to be incapable of forming a proper estimate of measures and circumstances.

Neque semper arcum tendit Apollo. Lat.—“Nor does Apollo always bend his bow.”—This phrase is generally used as an apology for those, who, being engaged in grave pursuits, indulge themselves in occasional relaxation.

Nequicquam sapit qui sibi non sapit. Lat.—“He is wise to no purpose, who is not wise to himself.”—The first use of Wisdom is to correct our own faults.

Ne quid detrimenti Respublica capiat. Lat.—“That the common weal shall receive no injury.”—This was the injunction given by the Roman Republic on investing a dictator with supreme powers. This attention to domestic security in contra-distinction to foreign conquest, is often intimated to the statesman at the helm of affairs, as forming his first and most important duty.

Ne quid falsi dicere audeat, ne quid veri non audeat. Lat. CICERO.—“Let him not presume to utter any falsehood, but be bold to promulge every truth.”—In this brief direction are comprised the principal duties of the historian.

Ne quid nimis. Lat. TERENCE.—“Do not take too much of any thing,” or pursue any object too far.

Ne remettez pas à demain ce que vous pouvez faire aujourd'hui. Fr. Prov.—“Do not defer until to-morrow, that which you have it in your power to do to-day.”

Nervis

NE———NE

Nervis alienis mobili lignum. Lat.—“A puppet moved by wires in the hands of others.”—Applied to politicians of a certain class, whose motions are dictated, and whose proceedings are regulated by persons unseen, or by what is called an interior cabinet.

*Nescia mens hominum fati sortisque futurae,
Et servare modum, rebus sublata secundis.*

Lat. VIRGIL.

“The mind of man is ignorant of fate and future destiny, or of keeping within due bounds when elated by prosperity.”—The rich and great in their proudest career should remember the vicissitudes of fortune, and be humbled.

Nescio quâ natale solum dulcedine cunctos Ducit & immemores non sinit esse sui.

Lat. OVID.

“I know not by what sweetness our native soil still attracts all, and implants itself in our recollection.”—Neither time nor distance can eradicate the attachment which every man feels for the spot which gave him birth.

Nescio quid curtæ semper abest rei. Lat. HORACE.—

“Something is always wanting to our imperfect fortune.”—Our desires are never fully gratified.

Nescit vox missa reverti. Lat. HORACE.—“The word which has once escaped can never be recalled.”—We should be careful of what we say.

The impression made by an indiscreet word is scarcely ever to be erased.

Ne scutica dignum horribili sectere flagello.

Lat. HORACE.

“Do not pursue him who deserves a slight whip, with the weightier scourge.”—The advice is to the satyrist, whose severities should ever be proportioned to the offence.

Ne sutor ultra crepidam. Lat.—“Let not the shoemaker go beyond his last.”—These were the words of Apelles to a Crispin who properly found fault with an ill-painted slipper in one of his pictures, but ascending to other parts, betrayed the grossest ignorance. No man should pass his opinion in a province of art, where he is without a qualification.

Ne tentes aut perfice. Lat.—“Attempt not, or accomplish.”—Motto of the Irish Marquis of DOWNSHIRE.

Ne vile fano. Lat.—“Bring nothing base to the temple.”—Motto of the Earl of WESTMORELAND.

Ne vile velis. Lat.—“Incline to nothing base.”—Motto of Lord ABERGAVENNY.

Neutiquam officium liberi esse homines puto Cum is nihil promereat, postulare id gratiæ apponi sibi. Lat. TERENCE.

“A man of liberal sentiments will not stoop to ask that as a favour, which he cannot claim as a reward.”

Nihil cupientium nudus castra peto. Lat. HORACE.
 “Naked I repair to the camp of those who desire nothing.”—Though not rich, I am not dissatisfied, because I have limited my desires.

Nihil dictum quod non dictum prius. Lat.—“Nothing can now be said, which has not been said before.”

Nihil est ab omni parte beatum. Lat. HORACE.— “Nothing is blessed, or perfect on every side.”
 —There is no state or condition of life without its disadvantages.—Nothing human is or can be perfect.

Nihil

Nil est aptius ad delectationem lectoris, quam temporum varietates, fortunæque vicissitudines. Lat. CICERO.—“Nothing is more calculated to entertain a reader, than the variety of times, and the vicissitudes of fortune.”—In the perusal either of history or romance, the pleasure of the reader arises chiefly from variety and contrast.

Nil est tam volucre quam maledictum; nihil facilius emittitur, nihil citius excipitur, nihil latius dissipatur. Lat. CICERO.—“Nothing is so swift in its progress as calumny; nothing is more readily received, and nothing can be more widely spread abroad.”—Or as our poet has it; “On eagles wings immortal scandals fly.”

Nil est tam utile, quod in transitu prefit. Lat. SENECA.—“No book can be so good, as to be profitable when negligently read.”

Nil magis consentaneum est, quam ut iisdem modis res dissolvatur, quibus constituitur. Lat. LAW MAXIM.—“Nothing is more equitable, than that every thing should be dissolved by the same means as it was first constituted.”—A deed under hand and seal can only be released by a similar deed. An obligation in writing cannot be discharged by a verbal agreement.

Nil potest Rex quam quod de jure potest. Lat. LAW MAXIM.—“The King can do nothing but what he can do by law.”—He cannot, for instance, order a man to prison against the writs and processes of law.

Nil scriptum miraculi causa. Lat. TACITUS.—“Nothing composed for the sake of exhibiting prodigies, or exciting wonder.”—Applied to an history which narrates simple facts in plain terms.

Nil

Nil tam absurdum, quod non dictum sit ab aliquo philosophorum. Lat. CICERO.—“There is not any thing so absurd as not to have been said at some time by some philosopher.”—This is sometimes applied in a literal sense, in ridicule of an antagonist. The original meaning of the author was different; the extent of his assertion being only this, that philosophers who first invented, and afterwards reasoned upon particular systems, were frequently driven to absurdities in their defence.

Nil actum reputans, si quid superesset agendum.

Lat. LUCAN.

“Thinking that nothing was done, if any thing remained to do.”—This is the character of a man of talent and enterprize. He never sits down indolently contented with half measures.

Nil admirari prope est res una, Numici

Solaque, quæ possit facere & servare beatum.

Lat. HORACE.

“Not to be lost in idle admiration (of men or things) is the only sure means of making and of preserving happiness.”—Or as thus translated by FRANCIS,

“Not to admire, is of all means the best,

“The only means to make and keep us blest.”

Nil agit exemplum litem quod lite resolvit. Lat. HO-

RACE.—“That example does nothing which in removing one difficulty introduces another.”

—That arbitration is of no avail, which leaves behind it as great a difficulty as it found in the first instance.

Nil conscire sibi, nullâ pallefcere culpâ. Lat. HO-

RACE.—“To be conscious of no guilt, and to turn pale at no charge.”—The latter is the strongest proof of a pure mind, and unsullied conscience.

N I ——— N I

Nil debet. Lat. Law Term.—“He owes nothing.”
—The usual plea in an action of debt.

Nil desperandum Teucro duce, & auspice Teucro.

Lat. HORACE.

“We should not despair of any thing, Teucer being our guide, and we marching under his auspices.”—A compliment often applied to the talents and good fortune of a popular general, or leader.

Nil dicit. Lat. Law Term.—“He says nothing.”
—This plea intimates a failure in the defendant, in not putting in his answer to the plaintiff’s declaration.

Nil dictu fœdum, visuque hæc limina tangat,

Intra quæ puer est.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“Let nothing foul, either to the eye or the ear, be seen or heard within those doors which enclose a boy.”—Nothing indecent or criminal should be mentioned within the early and eager hearing of children. “Little pitchers have large ears.”

Nil ego contulerim jucundo sanus amico. Lat. HORACE.—“Whilst in sound mind I should never deem any thing preferable to a pleasant friend.”

Nil enim prodest, quod lædere non possit idem. Lat. OVID.—“Nothing can be of advantage which is not also convertible to purposes of injury.”—This broad maxim applies to every kind of physical and moral agency. Thus, fire which is so necessary, may be rendered most mischievous; and that eloquence which sometimes saves the innocent, may be made the instrument of rescuing the guilty.

Nil

Nil erit ulterius, quod nostris moribus addat

Posteritas: eadem cupient facientque minores.

Omne in præcipiti vitium stetit. Lat. JUVENAL.

“There remains nothing farther, which posterity can add to our manners. Our successors may desire and act the same thing, but every vice is at present at its height.”—This is the complaint of every century, since a picture of national manners was first drawn. The inventive genius of each succeeding age, has continued, however, to mock the prediction.

Nil falsi audeat, nil veri non audeat dicere. Lat.

CICERO.—“That he should not dare to tell a falshood, or to leave a truth untold.”—This is the brief but just character of an honest historian.

Nil habet infelix paupertas durius in se

Quam quod ridiculos homines facit.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“The greatest hardship of poverty is, that it tends to make men ridiculous.”

Nil intra est oleam, nil extra est in noce duri. Lat.

HORACE.—If this be not true “There is no kernel in the olive, nor has the nut any shell.”

—There is no trusting even to physical evidence.

Nil oriturum alias, nil ortum tale fatentes. Lat. HO-

RACE.—“Confessing that nothing of the same kind had arisen, or was likely to arise in future times.”—Admitting the existence of an unique, a thing not to be equalled.

Nil proprium ducas, quod mutarièr potest. Lat. SY-

RUS.—“Never deem that your own which can be transferred.”—All worldly possessions are precarious, but philosophy and virtue we may call our own.

NI——NI

Nil similius infano quam ebrius. Lat. Prov.—“Nothing is more like a madman than a man who is drunk.”—Insanity and ebriety produce effects so similar, that the principal distinction between them lies in the continuance of the former.

——Nil sine magno

Vita labore dedit mortalibus. Lat. HORACE.

—“In this life, nothing is given to men without great labour.”—No man can achieve the possession of fame, wealth, or influence, without incessant pains and application to his object.

Nil tam difficile quod non solertia vincat. Lat. Prov.

—“Nothing is so difficult, but that by diligence and practice it may be overcome.”

Ni Pun ni Pautre. Fr.—“Neither the one or the other.”

——Nimia illæc licentia

Profecto evadet in aliquod magnum malum.

Lat. TERENCE.

“This excessive licentiousness will most certainly terminate in some mischief of magnitude.”

—This is a maxim often resorted to in political discussions. That licentiousness is mischievous no man will dispute; but in contending parties, there are few who can draw the line exactly between the improper licence, and the fair freedom of discussion.

Nimirum insanus paucis videatur, eo quod

Maxima pars hominum morbo jactatur eodem.

Lat. HORACE.

“He appears mad indeed but to a few, because the majority is infected with the same disease.”

—Thus imitated,

When all are mad—all are alike oppress'd,

Who can discern one madman from the rest?

Nimium

NI——NO

Nimium altercando veritas amittatur. Lat. Prov.
—“In excessive altercation truth is lost.”—In protracted disputes, men forget both themselves and the subject.

Nimius in veritate, & similitudinis quam pulchritudinis amantior. Lat. QUINTILIAN.—“Too exact, and rather studious of similitude than of beauty.”—In the fine arts, even nature may be too closely copied. None seem to be more aware of this maxim than the portrait painters, who are fashionable and successful.

Nisi dominus frustra. Lat.—“Unless the Lord be with you, all your efforts are in vain.”—This, which is the motto of the city of Edinburgh, has been thus whimsically translated:—“You can do nothing here unless you are a Lord!”

Nisi prius. Law Lat.—“Unless before.”—A judicial writ by which the Sheriff is to bring a Jury to Westminster-hall on a certain day.—“Unless before” that day the Lords Justices of the King go into his county to take assizes.—They there dispose of the cause, and thus save expence and trouble to the parties, jury, and witnesses.

Nitimur in vetitum semper, cupimusque negata.

Lat. OVID.

“We always struggle for the things which are forbidden, and covet those denied to us.”

Nobilitas sola est atque unica virtus. Lat. JUVENAL.

—“Virtue is the only and true nobility.”—The pride of birth, and the sound of titles, disappear before the intrinsic dignity of virtue.

Nobilitatis virtus non stemma character. Lat.—

“Virtue, not pedigree, should characterise nobility.”—The motto of Earl GROSVENOR.

NO———NO

Nobis non licet esse tam disertis

Qui Musas colimus severiores. Lat. MARTIAL:

—"We who cultivate the Muses of a graver spirit, cannot indulge ourselves in such license or extravagance."—The nature of our pursuit is such as to exclude those licentious freedoms.

Nocet differre paratis. Lat.—"Those who are prepared, should never delay."—When your preparations are complete, it is injudicious to grant a further time to your adversary.

Nocet empti dolore voluptas. Lat. HOR.—"That pleasure is injurious, which is bought at the price of pain."—We should carefully look to the perils which await upon certain enjoyments.

Nocturna versate manu, versate diurna. Lat. HORACE.—"Be these your studies by day and by night."—Let those objects be never out of your contemplation.

Noli me tangere. Lat.—"Do not touch me."—A name given to a very tender complaint in the nose, or, ironically, to a person who is oversensitive.

Nolle prosequi. Law Lat.—"To be unwilling to proceed."—This is used in law when a plaintiff, having commenced an action, declines to proceed therein.—It is also entered officially by the King's Attorney-general, to stay any further proceedings in certain cases.

Nolo episcopari. Lat.—"I do not wish to be made a bishop."—This is a phrase of form put into the mouth of the person appointed to this high office. It is now applied ironically to those who affectedly disclaim that which is the secret and sole object of their ambition.

Nom

NO———NO

Nom de guerre. Fr.—“A war-name.”—An assumed or travelling title.—Your “Captain” is excellent as a nom de guerre.

Non ampliter sed munditer convivium;
Plus salis quam sumptus. Lat. CORN. NEPOS.
 —“The entertainment was more neat than ample; there was more of relish than of cost.”

Non assumpsit. Law Lat.—“He did not assume,” or take to himself. A plea in personal actions, when the defendant denies that any promise was made.

Non bene conveniunt, nec in una sede morantur Majestas & amor. Lat. OVID.
 “Dignity and love do not blend well, or continue long together.”—Where one of the parties is greatly superior to the other, there cannot be found that energy of passion which is reciprocally felt when the situations are more on an equality.

Non compos mentis. Lat.—“Not of sound mind.”
 —In a delirium of lunacy.

Non conscire sibi. Lat.—“Conscious of no fault.”
 —Motto of Earl of WINCHELSEA.

Non constat. Law Lat.—“It does not appear.”—
 It is not before the court in evidence.

Non cuius homini contingit adire Corinthum.
 Lat. HORACE.
 “It does not happen to every man to go to Corinth.”—It is not to be supposed, that all men can possess the same opportunities, or recur to the same sources of information.

NO———NO

Non eadem est ætas, non mens. Lat. HORACE.—“I am not now of the same age, or disposition as I was formerly.”—I am not about to engage actively in the contest for which I feel myself disqualified.

Non ego mordaci distinxī carmine quenquam Nulla venenato est litera mista joco. Lat. OVID.
“I have not attacked any one with biting verse, nor does any empoisoned jest lurk beneath; in what I have written.”—I always meant to be rather playful than satirical.

Non ego ventosæ venor suffragia plebis. Lat. HORACE.
—“I do not hunt for, or court the votes of the light and veering rabble.”

*Non enim gazæ, neque consularis
Summovet licitor miseros tumultus
Mentis & curas laqueata circum
Tæstæ volantes.* Lat. HORACE.
“It is not in the power of wealth, or of the Consul’s licitor (i. e. of any of the appendages of greatness), to subdue the conflicts of a wretched mind, or to remove the cares which hover about the fretted dome.”—The last image has been thus beautifully rendered by Mr. HASTINGS:
“Where Care, like smoke, in turbid wreaths Round the gay cieling flies.”

Non equidem invideo, miror magis. Lat. VIRG.
“In fact I do not envy, yet still I wonder how it has come to pass.”

Non est ad astra mollis à terris via. Lat. SENECA.
—“There is no easy way from the earth to the stars.”—It is not by common efforts that men can attain to immortality.

Non

NO———NO

Non est inventus. Lat. Law Term.—“He has not been found.”—The return made by the sheriff when the defendant is not to be found in his bailiwick.—It is sometimes used in the way of of-pleasantry, to mark a sudden disappearance.

Non est jocus esse malignum. Lat. HOR.—“There is no joke in being malignant.”—Some men seem to mistake asperity for humour; yet they are things almost incompatible.

Non est vivere, sed valere vita. Lat.—“Life is not life, but with the enjoyment of health.”—The invalid can scarcely be said to live when the faculties either of the mind or body are seriously impaired.

Non exercitus, neque Thesauri, præsidia regni sunt, verum amici. Lat. SALLUST.—“The safety of a kingdom does not depend so much upon its armies, or its treasures, as on its alliances.”—The tranquillity of a nation, like that of an individual, is best secured by cultivating the good-will of its neighbours.

Non fideatevi al alchemista povero, ô al medico ammalato. Prov. Ital.—“Do not trust to a poor alchymist, or a sick physician.”—Do not take the advice of those who have not been able to act properly for themselves.

Non fumum ex fulgore sed ex fumo dare lucem. Lat. HORACE.—“Not to bring smoke from light, but out of darkness to produce splendor.”—This is the difference, as stated by the satirist, between a bad poet and a good one. The former exhausts himself in the glare of his opening, and loses himself in smoke. The latter proceeds from a more modest opening to disclose all the radiance of poetry.

Non

NO———NO

Non generant aquila columbas. Lat.—“Eagles do not bring forth pigeons.”—Motto of Lord RODNEY.

Non hæc in fœdera. Lat. VIRG.—“Not into such leagues or alliances as these.”

*Non id videndum, conjugum ut bonis bona
At ut ingenium congruat & mores moribus;
Probitas, pudorque virgini dos optima est.*

Lat. TERENCE.

“In marriage the relative proportion of property is not so much to be considered, as the union of mind, and the identity of manner and disposition. Chastity and modesty form the best portion which a virgin can bring to her husband.”

Non ignara mali miseris succerrere disco. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Not being myself a stranger to suffering, I have learned to relieve the calamities of others.”—The school of misfortune is (with a few exceptions) the only one which can endue the mind with sympathy.

Non inferiora secutus. Lat.—“Not having followed mean pursuits.”—Motto of Lord MONTFORD.

Non licet in bello bis peccare. Lat.—“It is not permitted in war to err twice.”—At other games a blot may be got over, but at this most dangerous game, a mistake is generally to be considered as irretrievable.

Non magni pendis, quia contigit. Lat. HORACE.—“You do not value it highly, because it came incidentally.”—The wind-falls of fortune are less valued than the usufruct of our own industry.

Non

NO———NO

Non missura cutem nisi plena truoris hirudo. Lat.

HORACE.—“Like a leech which does not quit the skin, until it is full of blood.”—Used to mark a pertinacious claimant or applicant, who cannot be induced to retire until he has obtained his purpose.

Non nobis solum. Lat.—“Not merely for ourselves.”—Motto of the Ir. Baron EARDLEY.

Non nobis solum, sed toto mundo nati. Lat.—“Not born for ourselves alone, but for the whole world.”—Motto of the Ir. Baron ROKEBY.

Non nostrum tantas componere lites. Lat.—“It is not for us to adjust such grave disputes.”—Ironically quoted, in general, and when the contest is of a trivial nature.

Non numero hæc judicantur sed pondere. Lat. CICE-RO.—“These things are not judged of by their number, but by their weight.”—He is speaking of actions useful to the state, one of which may, from intrinsic circumstances, out-value and out-weigh a host of others.

Non nunc agitur de vectigalibus, non de sociorum injuriis: Libertas & anima nostra in dubio est. Lat. CICERO.—“The question is not now respecting our revenues, or the injuries done to our allies: our liberties and lives are all at stake.”

Non obstante. Lat.—“Notwithstanding.”—A phrase used in patents to intimate a dispensing power.

Non omne molitor quæ fluit unda videt. Lat.—“The miller does not see every thing that floats by his mill.”—Metaphorically—the statesman does not notice all the minor circumstances which may either forward or embarrass his most favourite measures.

Non

NO———NO

Non omnia possumus omnes. Lat. VIRG.—“We cannot all of us do every thing.”—The human faculties are generally confined to a narrow line of operation.

Non omnis error stultitia est dicenda. Lat.—“Every error is not to be called a folly,”—Fâtuity is not to be inferred from a single circumstance of mistake.

Non posse bene geri Rempublicam multorum imperiis. Lat. CORN. NEPOS.—“A commonwealth cannot be well conducted under the command of many.”—There must be an unity of will in the executive power of any state to produce a due effect.

*Non propter vitam faciunt patrimonia quidam,
Sed vitio cæci propter patrimonia vivunt.*

Lat. JUVENAL.

“Some men do not get estates for the purpose of enjoying life, but blinded with error, they live only for their estates!”—They are so befuddled, as to mistake the means for the end.

Non quo, sed quomodo. Lat.—“Not by whom, but in what manner,”—(the business is done)—Motto of Earl SUFFOLK.

Non revertar inultus. Lat.—“I will not return unrevenged.”—Motto of the Ir. E. of LISBURN.

Non satis est pulchrâ esse poemata, dulcia sunt. Lat. HOR.—“It is not enough that poetry should be decorated; it should also be interesting.”

Non scribit ille, cujus carmina nemo legit. Lat. MART.—“That man does not write, whose verses no man reads.”—They are as much unknown, as if they had perished in embryo.

Non

NO——NO

Non sibi sed patriæ. Lat.—“Not for himself, but for his country.”—Motto of Earl ROMNEY.

Non sibi sed toto genitum se credere mundo.

Lat. LUCAN of CATO.

“Believing himself to be born not for himself, but for the whole world;” or thus more freely translated:—

“Born not to serve himself, his gen’rous plan
“Takes in the universe, nor ends in man.”

Non si male nunc, & olim sic erit. Lat. HORACE.—

“If matters go on badly at present, they may take a better turn hereafter.”—One of the usual phrases of encouragement under misfortune.

Non sum qualis eram.

Lat. HORACE.

“I am not now what I once have been.”—I felt the natural decay of my vigour and of my faculties.

———Non tam portas intrare patentes

Quam fregisse juvat: nec tam patiente colono

Arva premi, quam si ferro populetur & igni.

Concessâ pudet ire viâ.

Lat. LUCAN.

“The conqueror is not so much pleased by entering into open gates as by forcing his way. He desires not the fields to be cultivated by the patient husbandman; he would have them depopulated by fire and sword. It would be his shame to go by a way already granted to his passage.”—This is the angry language of the poet, animadverting on the conduct of Cæsar. In modern history the conduct has been too often realized.

Nonumque prematur in annum. Lat. HOR.—“Let your piece be kept nine years.”—This is a precept, with which our dramatic poets are too much “pressed by hunger, and request of friends” to afford their compliance.

Non

NO———NO

Non ut diu vivamus curandum est, sed ut satis. Lat. SENECA.—“Our care should be not so much to live long, as to have lived enough.”—The proper estimate of human life is to be taken, not from the years through which it was protracted, but from the good actions by which it was distinguished.

Non vi, sed sæpe cadendo. Lat.—“Not by force, but by often falling.”—Every thing is to be effected by incessant efforts. The idea is taken from drops of water, which unremittingly falling, will hollow out a stone.

Non vultus, non color. Lat.—“There is neither the countenance, nor the colour.”—This quotation is differently used. It is employed to repel a testimony where there is no veri-similitude, or to rebut the imputation of writings to an author, which bear not the features of his style, or the complexion of his sentiments.

Nosce hæc omnia salus est adolescentulis. Lat. TERENCE.—“It is salutary for young men to be informed of these things.”

Nosce teipsum. Lat.—“Know thyself.”—This important lesson may be considered in various points of view. A wise man will endeavour to form a just estimate of his own strength and weakness, of his powers moral, physical, &c. and consider whether they are adequate to the end proposed.

Nescitur ex sociis. Lat. Prov.—“He is known by his companions.”—“Tell me,” says the Spanish proverb, “what company you keep, and I’ll tell you who you are.”

NO———NO

Nos patriam fugimus, nos dulcia linquimus arva.

Lat. VIRGIL.—“We leave our country, we quit our delightful plains.”—We feel all the horrors of migrating from our native soil.

Nota bene. Lat.—“Mark well.”—Used as referring to some remarkable object or circumstance.

Notre défiance justifie la trompérie d'autrui. Fr.

ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Our mistrust justifies the deceit of another.”—Men are neither happy nor safe, but in mutual confidence.

Notre mal s'empoisonne

Du secours qu'on lui donne.

Fr. Prov.

“Our disease is aggravated by the remedies which are administered.”

N'oubliez. Fr.—“Do not forget.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl GRAHAM.

Nous aurions souvent honte de nos plus belles actions, si le monde voyoit tous les motifs qui les produisent.

Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“We should often be ashamed of our brightest actions, were the world but to see the motives by which they were produced.”—That this is frequently true, must be conceded to those, who trace every spring of action up to the source of self-love:—It is more benign, though it may be less in the spirit of this philosophy, to accept of the best motives that can be assigned for a good action.

Nous avons tous assez de force pour supporter les maux d'autrui. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—

“We have all of us sufficient strength to bear the misfortunes of others.”—A sneer is of course meant at the selfish and unfeeling part of mankind.

Nous

NO———NU

Nous desirerions peu de choses avec ardeur, si nous connoissions parfaitement ce qui nous desirons. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“We should wish for few things with eagerness, if we perfectly knew the nature of that which was the object of our desire.”

Nous ne savons ce que c'est que bonheur ou malheur absolu. Fr. ROUSSEAU.—“We do not know what is absolutely good or bad fortune.”—The condition of life is mixed. The highest have their sufferings, and the lowest their consolations.

Nous ne trouvons guère de gens de bon sens, que ceux qui sont de notre avis. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“We seldom find any persons of good sense, but such as are of our opinion.”—Our self-love on such occasions induces us to pass a favourable judgment.

———Novi ingenium mulierum; Nolunt ubi velis, ubi nolis capiunt ultro. Lat. TER.—“I know the nature of woman. When you are desirous, they are unwilling; when you are disinclined, they come forward of their own accord.”—One of the common place satires on the caprices of the female sex.

Novos amicos dum paras, veteres cole. Lat. HERMES.—“Whilst you seek new friendships, take care to cultivate the old.”—Do not lose sight of old attachments, for the sake of making new connections.

Nudum pactum. Lat.—“A naked agreement.”—A promise unconfirmed by any written obligation.

Nugæ canoræ. Lat.—“Melodious trifles.”—Mere sing-song without meaning.

Nugis

NU——NU

Nugis addere pondus. Lat.—“To give weight to trifles.”—To lend a consequence to matters of slight moment.

——Nulla aconita bibuntur

Fictilibus.

Lat.

“No wolfsbane is drunk out of earthenware.”—The danger of poison is reserved for those who drink out of vessels of plate.

——Nulla est sincera voluptas

Sollicitumque aliquid letis advenit. Lat. OVID.

“No joy comes unmixed, and something of anxiety intervenes with every pleasure.”

Nulla falsa doctrina est, quæ non permisceat aliquid veritatis. Lat.—“There is no doctrine so false, but that it may be intermixed with some truth.”

—Even 'midst the wild follies of the Alcoran there are some few precepts which would not disgrace the purity of the Christian code.

Nulla fere causa est in qua non femina litem

Moverit.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“There are few disputes in life, which may not, on tracing, be found to originate with a woman.”—We pretend to command, but in fact are often mere instruments in the hands of the weaker sex.

Nulla fides regni sociis, omnisque potestas

Impatiens consortis erit.

Lat. LUCAN.

“There will be no common faith between those who share in power, and each man will be jealous of his associate.”—This is a strong description of the jealous and distracted councils of a nation, on the eve of ruin.

Nulla pallescere culpa. Lat. HORACE.—“Not to turn pale on any imputation of guilt.”—This is frequently used as a motto, to a declaration of conscious innocence.

Q

Nulli

Nulli iactantius moerent, quam qui maxime letantur.

Lat. TACITUS.—“None mourn with more affectation of sorrow than those who are inwardly rejoiced.”—Those who assume sorrow, or affect grief, in general, out-act the reality.

Nulli negabimus, nulli differemus

Iustitiam.

Lat.

“We shall not refuse or postpone the justice which is due to any man.”—This emphatic phrase is in magna charta—the “great charter” of our rights.

Nullius addictus jurare in verba magistri.

Lat. HORACE.

“Not being bound to swear or speak according to the dictates of any master.”—This quotation is fairly used by a writer professing to give, and using only, his own free, honest, and independent opinions.

Nullum est jam dictum, quod non dictum prius. Lat.

TERENCE.—“Nothing can be now said, which has not been said before.”—This line which is often quoted, is not to be taken in a sense absolutely literal. The meaning is, that in these latter days, it is difficult to arrive at novelty.

Nullum imperium tutum, nisi benevolentia munitum.

Lat. CORN. NEP.—“No government is safe, unless it be fortified by good-will.”—The strongest powers, when they branch into tyranny and oppression, are certain to perish from their very roots. So it was with the Roman; so it will be perhaps with the French Republic. “Peace and good-will towards men,” are the buttresses to support an Empire, which looks for an indeterminate duration.

Nullum

Nullum iniquum in jure præsumendum est. Lat. Law Maxim.—“Nothing unjust is to be presumed in the law.”—All things are taken to be lawfully done until proof is adduced to the contrary: Fraud shall never be intended or presumed by the law, unless it be expressly averred.

Nullum magnum malum quod extremum est. Lat. NEPES.—“That evil can never be great which is the last.”—A man can undergo almost any suffering under the persuasion that it was the last which he should endure. This quotation is, however, generally employed against the fear of death, which terminates all our sufferings.

Nullum numen abest, si sit prudentia. Lat. JUVENAL.—“No protecting power is wanting, if prudence be but employed.”—If men in general acted with prudence, they need not be under the necessity of invoking any other aid.

Nullum tempus occurrit regi. Lat. Law Maxim.—“No time impedes the King.”—The rights of the crown are indefeasible by any lapse of time.

Nullus commodum capere potest de injuria sua propria. Lat. Law Maxim.—“No man can take advantage of his own wrong.”—If a lessor and lessee of lands for years join in the cutting down of timber, the lessor shall not afterwards punish the lessee for waste, as this would be to take advantage of his own wrong.

Nullus tantus quæstus quam quod habes parcere. Lat. PROV.—“There is no gain so certain as that which arises from sparing what you have.”—There is no road to wealth more certain than that of economy.

Nul n'aura de l'esprit,

Hors nous & nos amis.

French. MOLIERE.

"No person shall be allowed to have wit, out of our circle, and that of our friends."—This alludes to the little junto's of wittlings to be found in almost every town, who associate to be-praise and be-puff each other, with a view of excluding the pretensions of those who are not of the party of these monopolists.

Numerisque fertur lege solutis. Lat. HOR.—"He is borne along in numbers free from law."—His verses are licentious, or unrestrained by any of the existing rules.

Numerus certus pro incerto ponitur. Lat.—"A certain is put for an uncertain number."—As we say a thousand, or a million, to express a large number, but without meaning to ascertain the precise amount.

Numini & patriæ asfo. Lat.—"I stand to God and my country."—Motto of the Sc. Lord ASTON.

Nunc aut nunquam. Lat.—"Now or never."—Motto of the Ir. Viscount KILMOREY.

Nunc omnis ager, nunc omnis parturit arbor

Nunc frondent sylvæ, nunc formosissimus annus.

Lat. VIRGIL.

"Now every field and every tree is in bloom; the woods are in full leaf, and the year in its highest beauty."—Used generally to introduce a poetical description of summer.

Nunc patimur longæ pacis mala; sævior armis

Luxuria incubuit, victumque ulciscitur orbem.

Lat. JUVENAL.

"Now we suffer the mischiefs of a long peace. Luxury, more destructive than war, has engrossed us; and avenges the vanquished world."

—This

NU ——— NU

—This is a fine description of Rome in its decline; it exhibits what Shakespeare calls
 “The cankers of a calm world, and a long peace.”

Nunquam ad liquidum Fama perducitur. Lat.—
 “Fame never reports things in their true light.”
 —The strongest impressions are often produced from beginnings the most idle, and rumours the most frivolous.

Nunquam aliud natura, aliud sapientia dicit. Lat.
 JUVENAL.—“Nature never says one thing, and wisdom another.”—Their dictates are always in complete accordance.

———*Nunquam libertas gratior extat
 Quam sub rege pio.* Lat. CLAUDIAN.
 “Liberty never existed in a more gracious form than under a pious king.”—Monarchy is not unfavourable to liberty, if the monarch adheres to the obligations which exist between him and the people.

Nunquam minus solus, quam cum solus. Lat.—“Never less alone than when alone.”—This was the saying of the ancient philosopher, who found his greatest luxury in solitary reflection.

Nunquam nimis dicitur, quod nunquam satis discitur.
 Lat. SENECA.—“That never is too often said, which is never sufficiently learned.”—There are some maxims of so grave and important a nature, that they can never be too often repeated, or too deeply impressed.

Nunquam non paratus. Lat.—“Always ready.”—
 The motto of the Marquis ANNANDALE.

Nunquam potest non esse virtuti locus. Lat. SENECA.
 —“There must ever be a place for virtue.”—
 A wise and good man can never be without a proper scope for his exertions.

Nunquam sunt grati qui nocere sales. Lat.—
“Those witticisms are never agreeable which have an injurious tendency.”—The wit which is too acrimonious, will seldom find an advocate.

Nusquam tuta fides. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Our confidence is no where safe.”—This is spoken of a period of civil war, at which, more particularly, every social tie is unhappily dissolved.

O.

Obiter dictum. Law Lat.—“A thing said by the way.”—An opinion given in passing; and which not applying judicially to the case, is not to be resorted to, as of authority.

Obruat illud male partum, male retentum, male gestum Imperium. Lat. CICERO.—“Perish that power which has been obtained by evil means, retained by similar practices, and which is administered as badly as it was acquired.”—Such a power in any state can never be of long duration.

Obsequium amicos, veritas odium parit. Lat. TERENCE.—“Obsequiousness procures friends, but truth begets hatred.”—Deference and adulation will excite a kindness, where the honest bluntness of truth must have provoked an enmity.

Obstupui, steteruntque comæ & vox faucibus hæsit.
Lat. VIRG.
“I was astonished, my hair stood at end, and my voice lingered in my throat.”—Used to describe an extreme degree of consternation.

Obtestatio ac non promissis auribus accipiuntur, quibus adulationi factum crimen servitutis, malignitati falsa species libertatis inest. Lat. TACITUS.—
“Spleen and calumny are devoured with a greedy ear. Flattery wears the badge of servitude, whilst malignity speaks the tone of independence, and is therefore well received.”—This is justly applied to the factious clamourer, who censures indiscriminately every act of his superiors:—it cannot reach those who speak not from prejudice, and censure not without a cause.

—O cæca nocentum

Conflid! O semper timidum scelus. Lat. STAT.
“Oh the blind councils of the guilty! Oh, how ever cowardly is wickedness.”—It has been often remarked that Providence seems to darken the understandings, and to depress the spirits of great criminals.

Occupet extremum scabies. Prov. Lat.—“Let the itch infect the last.”—Anglice, The Devil take the hindmost.

Occurrent nubes. Lat.—“Clouds will intervene.”
—Motto of the Baron ELIOT.

O! Curas hominum, O quantum est in rebus inane.
Lat. PERSIUS.
“Oh, the cares of men, and how much of frivolity is there in their affairs.”

Oderint dum metuant. Lat. CICERO.—“Let them hate, provided they fear.”—This is the sentiment of a tyrant towards his subjects, briefly and characteristically expressed.

Oderunt hilarem tristes, tristemque jocos. Lat. HOR.
—“The grave dislikes the chearful man, and the man of gayer spirits hates the grave.”—
There can be no pleasurable association between people of a different temperament.

Oderunt peccare boni, virtutis amore. Lat. HORACE.—“ Good men forbear to sin, merely from their love of virtue.”—Those who love virtue for herself, will act solely from her impulses, and without any regard to extrinsic circumstances.

Odia in longum jaciens, quæ reconderet, ausaque promeret. Lat. TACITUS.

“ A man who lays his resentment aside, but stores it up to bring it forward with additional acrimony.”—This, as JUNIUS observes, is a description of the very worst of characters. The man who can dissemble his resentment until occasion serves, is the basest of all hypocrites, and the most dangerous of all enemies.

Odia qui nimium timet regnare nescit. Lat. SENECA.

—“ He who is too fearfully alive to hatred, is ignorant of the art of reigning.”—The sovereign who aims at the general good of his people, should learn to condemn the resentments of individuals.

Qdimus accipitrem quia semper vivit in armis. Lat.

Prov.—“ We hate the hawk, because she always lives in arms.”—All men must detest that power, which is in a state of eternal hostility.

Odi profanum vulgus & arces. Lat. HORACE.—

“ I hate and repel from me the profane vulgar.”—This is the exordium of the poet to a religious hymn, and on a subject of which the common people were supposed to be wholly ignorant. It is now sometimes used to mark their exile from the regions of political mystery.

Odiū

Odium theologicum. Lat.—“A theological hatred.”
—The hatred of divines. It has been observed, that gownsmen bear with them a greater degree of rancour than any other class of disputants.

O faciles dare summa deos, eademque tueri Difficiles. Lat. LUCAN.

“Oh! how gracious are the gods in giving high situations, and how reluctant are they to ensure them when given?”—This is an apostrophe strictly accordant with the ancient mythology. In its more recent application, it can serve only to denote the precarious tenure by which high places are holden.

O fortunatos nimium, sua si bona norint,
Agricolas, quibus ipsa procul discordibus armis,
Fundit humo facilem victum justissima tellus.

Lat. VIRGIL.

“Oh! more than happy, if ye knew your own advantages—Husbandmen, to whom, in the absence of clashing arms, the grateful earth pours forth an early sustenance.”—An eulogy often quoted on the condition of agriculturists. The first line is sometimes taken apart, and applied to those who either rightly or causelessly urge any motives of political discontent.

Ogni medaglio ha il suo reverso. Ital. Proverb.—
“Every medal has its reverse.”—There are two sides to every statement.

Obe! Jam satis. Lat. HORACE.—“Oh! there is now more than enough.”—A phrase used to denote satiety and disgust.

O! Imita-

Oh. Imitatores! Servum pecus! Lat. HORACE.
 “Oh! Ye imitators: what a servile herd ye are.”—How much does the servile copyist sink beneath the originality of genius?

Oi πλεῖστοι κακοί. Gr. Oi pleiones kakoi.—“The greater part of mankind are bad.”—This was the observation of Bias, one of the seven sages of Greece. It is the maxim of cold Prudence to regard all men as vicious, until the contrary appears in proof.

Quam meminisse juvabit. Lat. VIRGIL.—“The future recollection will be pleasing.”—There is a melancholy consolation in the retrospect of past misfortunes.

O Putile secret que de mentir apropos. Fr. Prov.—“Oh! What an useful secret it is to be able to lie to the purpose.”—In the world of politics, all morality being out of the question, nothing is more useful than a well-coined lie, which is of temporary use; and which, the occasion being passed, is soon and completely forgotten.

O major tandem parcas insane minori.
 Lat. HORACE.
 “Oh! thou who art greatly mad, deign to spare me the lesser madman.”—A phrase often used ironically in a paper warfare.

O! miseras hominum mentes, oh! pectora cæca!
 Lat. LUCRETIVS.
 “How wretched are the minds of men, and how blind their understandings!”—A quotation frequently and well applied in a moment of popular delusion.

Omne

Omne actum ab agentis intentione est judicandum. Lat. Law Maxim.—“Every act is to be judged from the intention of the agent.”—In contracts and obligations, the law particularly looks to the intention of the parties. In wills the intent of the testator is to be religiously regarded.

Omne animi vitium tanto conspectius in se Crimen habet, quanto major qui peccat habetur. Lat. JUVENAL.

“Every fault of the mind becomes more conspicuous and more guilty, in proportion to the rank of the offender.”—Persons in high station are not only answerable for their own conduct, but for the example which they may hold out to others. This, joined to their advantages of education, aggravates their vices, and loads them with a greater share of responsibility.

Omne capax movet urna nomen. Lat. HORACE.—“In the capacious urn of death every name is shaken.”—With respect to mortality all are subject to the same lot.

Omne in præcipiti vitium stetit. Lat. JUVENAL.
“Every kind of vice has reached its summit.”—There remains nothing for posterity to add. One of the common places always thrown out on the profligacy of the present day.

Omnes, quibus res sunt minus secundæ, magis sunt nescio quomodo, Suspiciosi; ad contumeliam omnia accipiunt magis: Propter suam impotentiam se credunt negligi.

Lat. TERENCE.
“All those persons, whose affairs are not prosperous, are in a certain degree suspicious. They take take every matter as an affront, and from their conscious weakness, they presume that they are neglected and despised."—There is a sort of jealousy in people of humble fortune or fallen condition, which it is always wise in those who move in a higher sphere, not to awaken or irritate.

Omne ignotum pro magnifico. Lat.—"Every thing unknown is taken for magnificent."—We are apt to annex the idea of greatness to that which is mysterious or remote.

Omnes sibi malle melius esse quam alteri. Lat. TERENCE.—"It is in the nature of man that every individual should wish for his own advantage, in preference to that of others."

Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit utile dulci.

Lat. HORACE.

"He has carried every point, who has mixed the useful with the agreeable."—It is the highest praise of a writer to entertain whilst he instructs, and to interest the heart, whilst he informs the mind.

Omniem crede diem tibi diluxisse supremum. Lat. HORACE.—"Believe that each day is the last to shine upon thee."—Always suppose that your death is near, and when it comes you will be found better prepared.

Omnes amicos habere operosum est; satis est inimicos non habere. Lat. SENECA.—"It is a thing almost impracticable, to have all men as your friends; it is enough, if you have no enemies." You cannot make all men your friends without some sacrifice of character; it is sufficient if you act from a conscience void of offence.

Omnes

Omnes eodem cogimur ; omnium

Versatur urna ; serius, ocius

Sors exitura.

Lat. HORACE.

“We are all compelled to follow the same course. The urn of death is shaken for all, and sooner or later the lot must come forth.”—The duration of life depends on so many chances, that we should always be prepared for the worst.

Omnes habentur & dicuntur tyranni, qui potestate sunt perpetuâ, in eâ civitate quæ libertate usa est.

Lat. CORN. NEP. in Themistoclem.—“All men are held and rated as tyrants, who possess themselves of perpetual power in a state which once enjoyed the blessings of freedom.”

Omne solum forti patria est. Lat. OVID.—“To a brave man, every soil forms his country.”—A stout spirit is not to be subdued even by exile. He will find his country in every clime.

Omnes stultos insanire. Lat. HORACE.—“That all fools are mad.”—A favourite doctrine of Damascippus the Stoic.—Mr. LOCKE has an acute distinction on this subject. He states the difference to be, that fools draw false conclusions from just principles, whilst madmen draw just conclusions from false principles.

Omne supervacuum pleno de pectore manat.

Lat. HORACE.

“Every thing that is superfluous overflows from the full bosom.”—The poet who means to interest, should not overload his subject with unnecessary description or improbable aggravation.

Omnia bona bonis. Lat.—“All things are good with good men.”—Motto of the Irish Viscount WENMAN.

Omnia

Omnia cum amico delibera, sed de ipso prius. Lat.

SENECA.—“Consult with your friend on every thing, but particularly on that which respects yourself.”—He may be able to direct in cases where otherwise your self-love may mislead.

Omnia fanda nefanda, malo permista furore, Justificam nobis mentem avertère Deorum.

Lat. CATULLUS.

“The confusion of right and wrong in this accursed war, has deprived us of the protecting care of Heaven.”

Omnia fert ætas, animum quoque. Lat. VIRGIL.—

“Age bears away with it all things, even the powers of the mind.”—This is a reflection too strikingly true, to be enforced by any comment.

—Omnia Græcè!

Cum sit turpe magis nostris nescire Latine,

Lat. JUV.

“Every thing is affectedly Greek, when it is more shameful for our Romans to be ignorant of Latin.”—This is used as a sarcasm on those who devote themselves to the study of other languages without having previously attained the mastery of their own.

Omnia inconsulti impetibus capta, initiis valida, spatio languescunt. Lat. TACITUS.—

“All matters commenced with hasty violence are strenuous in the beginning, but languish in the end.”—That fervour which seeks no aid from wisdom soon evaporates: the means are therefore exhausted before the end can be attained.

Omnia mala exempla bonis principiis orta sunt. Lat.

—“All bad precedents have had their rise in good principles.”—A daring offence very frequently gives birth to a stretch of power. The punishment punishment being just in the first instance, it gains a sanction from those who do not foresee or dread the extent or abuse of the precedent.

OM———OM

Omnia mea mecum porto. Lat.—“All that is mine I carry with me.”—All my property, it has been waggishly translated, is personal.

Omnia non pariter rerum omnibus apta. Lat. PROPERTIUS.
“All things are not alike for all men fit.”

Omnia prius verbis experiri, quam armis, sapientem decet. Lat. TERENCE.—“It is becoming wisdom to try all that can be done by negotiation before recourse is had to arms.”—Every practicable expedient should be tried by statesmen, before they consent to rush into the horrid, inexpiable mischief of war.

Omnia quæ nunc vetustissima creduntur nova fuisse; & quod hodie exemplis tuemur inter exempla erit. Lat. TACITUS.—“All that we now deem of antiquity at one time were new, and what we now defend by examples, on a future day will stand as precedents.”—This just observation is frequently turned against those who wish to rest every thing on the authority of musty records and antiquated precedents.

Omnia suspendens naso. Lat.—“One who turns up his nose at every thing.”—An eternal joker, or sneerer.

Omnia tuta timens. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Fearing all things, even those which are safe.”—A mind long harassed with dangers, cannot look with confidence to any quarter for security or repose.

Omnia

Omnia vincit amor, & nos cedamus amori.

Lat. VIRGIL.

"Love conquers all things, and let us yield to love."—His power is so despotic that nothing is left to mortals but submission.

—Omnibus hostes

Reddite nos populis—Civile avertite Bellum.

Lat. LUCAN.

"Lead us into hostility against every people upon earth, but at all hazards prevent a Civil War."—If blood must be shed—be it so—but let it not be the blood of countrymen fighting against each other.

Omni exceptione major. Lat.—"Superior to all exception."—Applied in the first instance to the competence and credibility of a legal witness, or more generally to the character of a man, which is to be considered as unimpeachable.

—Omnis enim res,

Virtus, fama, decus, divina, humanaque pulchris Divitiis parent.

Lat. HORACE.

"For all divine and human affairs, virtue, fame, and honour, now obey the alluring influence of riches."—It was said in the days of this poet "that at Rome all things were venal."—Had he lived in later days, he could have furnished even a stronger description of the omnipotence of wealth, and of the yieldings of venality.

Omnis fors ferendo superanda est. Lat.—"Every chance is to be overcome by enduring."—By patience and perseverance a man can subdue the worst vicissitude of fortune.

Omnis pœna corporalis, quamvis minima, major est omni pœnâ pecuniariâ quamvis maxima. Lat. LAW MAXIM.—"The smallest corporal punishment falls more heavily than the largest possible pecuniary penalty."

Omnium

Omnium consensu capax imperii, nisi imperasset.

Lat. TACIT.—“In the opinion of all men he would have been regarded as capable of governing, if he had never governed.”—This was the language of this great historian respecting the Emperor GALBA. It is now frequently applied to others, who exhibit something like a show of talent, but which, when brought to the test, proves to be nothing more than a glittering superficiality.

On commence par être dupe, on finit par être fripon.

Fr. MAD. DESMOULIERES.—“They begin by being fools, and end in being knaves.”—This is a just description as it is applied to the progress of a gambler.

“Such is the equal progress of deceit,

“The early dupe oft closes in the cheat.”

On dit. Fr.—“It is said.”—It is an on dit.—It is merely a loose report.

On dit des gueux qu'ils ne sont jamais dans leur chemin, parce qu'ils n'ont point de demeure fixe. Il en est de même de ceux qui disputent, sans avoir des notions déterminées. French.—“It is said of beggars that they are never in their way, because they have no fixed abode. The same may be applied to those who dispute, without having any precise ideas of the subject.”—No man should argue on matters, the nature of which he cannot accurately define.

On fait souvent tort à la vérité par la manière dont on se sert pour la défendre. Fr.—“An injury is frequently done to the cause of truth, by the manner in which some men attempt to defend it.”—An injudicious advocate is sometimes more hurtful than a violent adversary.

On n'a jamais bon marché de mauvaise marchandise.
Fr. Prov.—“The best is always the cheapest.”

On n'auroit guère de plaisir, si l'on ne se flattoit point.
Fr.—“A man would have but little pleasure if he did not sometimes flatter himself.”

On n'est jamais si heureux, ni si malheureux qu'on se l'imagine. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“People are never so fortunate, or so unfortunate, as they suppose themselves to be.”—In either case the feeling is exaggerated. We are ever too much elated, or too much depressed.

On ne cherche point à prouver la lumière. Fr. Prov.—“There is no necessity for proving the existence of light.”—It is idle to adduce proofs of that which is self-evident.

On ne donne rien si libéralement que ses conseils. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Men give away nothing so liberally as their advice.”

On ne loue d'ordinaire que pour être loué. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Praise is generally given only that it may be returned.”—Applied frequently to the bandying of compliments between two vain persons.

On ne méprise pas tous ceux qui ont des vices, mais on méprise tous ceux qui n'ont aucune vertu. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“We do not despise all those who have vices; but we despise those who are without any virtue.”—In the former case, there may be some good qualities to make atonement.

On n'est jamais si ridicule par les qualités que l'on a, que par celles que l'on affecte d'avoir. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Men are never so ridiculous from the qualities which really belong to them, as

as from those which they pretend to have.”— Affectation is even more contemptible than weakness.

On ne se blame, que pour être loué. Fr. ROCHE-FOUCAULT.—“Men only blame themselves for the purpose of being praised.”—When we impute to ourselves a fault, we generally expect to receive a compliment in return.

On ne trouve guère d'ingrats, tant qu'on est en état de faire du bien. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—
“We find but few people ungrateful, whilst we are still in a condition to confer benefits.”— Expectation in this case sustains the office of gratitude.

On parle peu quand la vanité ne fait pas parler. Fr.
ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Men speak but little when vanity does not induce them to speak.”—
When a person speaks much in company, it is done, in most instances, with a view to distinguish himself.

On perd tout le temps qu'on peut mieux employer. Fr.
ROUSSEAU.—“All that time is lost which might be better employed.”

On peut attirer les cœurs par les qualités qu'on montre, mais on ne les fixe que par celles qu'on a.
Fr. DE MOY.—“Hearts may be attracted by assumed qualities, but the affections are not to be fixed but by those which are real.”—Men or women may captivate each other, in the first instance, by putting on a feigned character, but the masque of the hypocrite is loose, and its fall must inevitably betray the fraud and the disguise.

On prend le peuple par les oreilles, comme on fait un pot par les anses. Fr. Prov.—“The people are to be taken by the ears as a pot is by the handles.”—This is a reflection often cast, and frequently with justice, on the credulity of the masses of the people.

Onus probandi. Lat.—“The burden of proving.”—The onus probandi should lie on the person making a charge. He is bound to prove what he asserts.

Opera illius mea sunt. Lat.—“His works are mine.”—The motto of Lord BROWNLOW.

Operæ pretium est. Lat.—“It is worth while” to hear or to attend.—If non be placed before est the meaning is reversed—“It is not worth while.”

Opere in longo fas est obrepere somnum.

Lat. HORACE.

“In a long work it is allowable that sleep should sometimes creep on the writer.”—A lapse is pardonable in a poem of great length. More indulgence is due to the author of an epic poem, than can be allowed to the framer of an epigram or sonnet.

Opinionum commenta delet dies, naturæ judicia confirmat. Lat. CICERO.—“Time effaces the comments of opinion, but it confirms the judgments of Nature.”—Speculative opinions pass away, whilst inferences drawn from Nature and Truth remain permanently on record.

Opprobrium medicorum. Lat.—“The disgrace of the physicians.”—A name given to a disorder like the Cancer, which is generally considered as incurable.

Optat ophippia bos piger, optat arare caballus.

Lat. HORACE.

"The lazy ox wishes for horse-trappings, and the steed wishes to plough."—It is the same in human nature. Every man wishes to exchange his situation; and frequently to adopt one which is unsuited to his powers.

Optimum obsonium labor. Lat. Prov.—"Labour is the best sauce."—Labour, like hunger, can give a relish to the homeliest food.

Opum furcata cupido. Lat. OVID.—"The ungovernable passion for wealth."—An avarice which knows no bounds.

Ora & labora. Lat.—"Pray and labour."—The motto of the Sc. Earl DALHOUSIE.

Orandum est ut sit mens sana, in corpore sano.

Lat. JUVENAL.

"Our prayers should be for a sound mind in a healthy body,"—as the first great requisites to human happiness.

Ore tenus. Lat.—"From the mouth."—The testimony was ore tenus—i. e. Parole in contradistinction to written evidence.

Os homini sublime dedit cœlumque tueri.

Lat. HORACE.

"To man he (God) gave an upright countenance, and to survey the Heavens."—Other animals move in an horizontal posture. An erect attitude is given to man, as if on purpose that he should survey the works of the creation. It has been thus admirably imitated.

"If prone in thought, our stature is our shame,
And man should blush his forehead meets the skies."

O! si sic omnia. Lat.—“Oh had he thus conducted himself in every respect.”—This quotation is applied to an inconsistent character, who is as meritorious in one great instance, as he is censurable in other points of his conduct.

O! tempora, O! mores. Lat. CICERO.—“Oh the times and the manners.”—How the former are changed, and the latter debased.

Otia si tollas, periere Cupidinis arcus. Lat. OVID.
“Remove but the temptations of leisure, and the bow of Cupid shall lose its effect.”—It is indolence that gives force to our passions; they produce but little effect on the mind which is absorbed in business and industry.

Otium cum dignitate. Lat.—“Leisure and respect.”—He enjoys his otium cum dignitate. He is withdrawn from business, and is honoured in his retreat.

Otium sine dignitate. Lat.—“Leisure, without dignity.”—A character precisely the reverse of the preceding.

Oùbliez je ne puis. Fr.—“I can never forget.”—
Motto of the Sc. Baron COLVILLE.

Ou γνωσις αλλα πραξις. Gr. Ou gnosis alla praxis.—
“Not the theory but the practice.”—The former without the latter is generally found deficient in the day of trial.

Qui & Non son bien courts a dire, mais avant que de les dire, il y faut penser long-tems. Fr. GRACIAN.—“Yes and No are very easily said, but before they are said it is necessary to think a long time.”—In matters of consequence, it is most necessary to deliberate before we give a precipitate assent, or an hasty negative.

Ouvrage

Ouvrage de longue haleine. Fr.—“A long-winded business.”—A work too tediously spun out.

P.

Pabulum. Lat.—“Food.”—Nurtriment.

Pabulum Acherontis. Lat. PLAUTUS.—“Food for the Acheron.”—A fabled river in the infernal regions.—An old fellow just ready to drop into the grave.

Pacta conventa. Lat.—“Conditions agreed upon.”—A diplomatic phrase used to describe certain articles, which are to be observed,—until one of the parties finds a convenience in their violation.

Pallida mors æquo pulsat pede

Pauperum tabernas, regumque turres.

Lat. HORACE.

“Pale death approaches with an equal step, and knocks indiscriminately at the door of the cottage and the portals of the palace.”—Peasants and princes are alike subjected to the immutable law of mortality.

Palma non sine pulvere. Lat.—“I have gained the palm, but not without labour.”—Motto of the Earl of LIVERPOOL.

Papier machè. Fr.—“Chewed paper.”—That mashed substance of which snuff-boxes and other articles are made.

Parcere personis, dicere de vitiis. Lat.—“To be sparing of persons, and to speak of crimes.”—This is a precept of which the honest satyrift should never lose sight. It is his duty to lash the vice in general terms; if he descends to personalities, the world will attribute it to speech against the individual, or perhaps to some motive even less honourable.

Parcere subjectis & debellare superbos. Lat. VIRGIL.—“To spare the lowly and subdue the proud.”—The French have held out their adoption of this maxim, which they thus translate, “Guerre aux châteaux & paix aux chaumières.” —War against the castles, but peace to the cottages.

Pari passu. Lat.—“With an equal pace.”—By a similar gradation.

Paritur pax bello. Lat. CORN. NEP.—“Peace is produced by war.”—The party desirous of peace is often compelled to make a greater shew of hostile preparation, in order to bring about the return of that inestimable blessing.

Par les mêmes voies on ne va pas toujours aux mêmes fins. Fr. ST. REAL.—“By the same means we do not always arrive at the same ends.”—Though acting from the best experience, our plans may be deranged by unforeseen circumstances.

Parlez du loup & vous verrez sa queue. Fr. PROV.—“Speak of the wolf, and you will see his tail.”—Mention but a person's name, and he instantly makes his appearance. Or, as the English proverb has it, “Talk of the Devil,” &c.

Parlez peu & bien si vous voulez qu'on vous regarde, comme un homme de mérite. Fr.—“Speak but little and well, if you would be esteemed as a man of merit.”—You should neither tire by loquacity, or offend by incorrectness.

Par

PA=====PA

Par manere & acquit. Fr. Prov.—“By way of discharge.”—Carelessly.

Par negotiis neque supra. Lat. TACITUS.—“Neither above nor below his business.”—Used to describe a man whose abilities are exactly fitted to his station.

Par nobile fratrum. Lat.—“A noble pair of brothers.”—Used ironically to denote two associates exactly suited to each other.

Par pari refero. Lat.—“I return like for like.”—I have recourse only to means similar to those which were previously employed by my adversary.

Pars beneficii est, quod petitur, si cito neges. Lat. SYRUS.—“It is something like kindness immediately to refuse, what it is intended to deny.”—It is charity not to excite a hope, when it must end in disappointment.

*Pars hominum gaudet vitiis constanter & urget
Proposita; pars multa natat, modo recta capeffens,
Interdum pravis obnoxia.* Lat. HOR.
“Some men exult in their vices, and constantly pursue their vicious objects—but the greater part are fluctuating, sometimes undertaking what is right, and sometimes yielding to that which is wrong.”

Pars minima sui. Lat.—“The smallest part of the man, or of the thing.”—The poor shadowy remains of the man—or the frittered remnant of the subject.

Pars sanitatis velle sanari fuit. Lat. SENECA.—“The wish to be cured is of itself an advance to health.”—Metaphorically: to be conscious of one's own folly is a negative advance to amendment.

Par

Par signe de mépris. Fr.—“As a token of contempt.”

Parturiunt montes, nascitur ridiculus mus. Lat.

HORACE.—“The mountain is in labour, and a ridiculous mouse is brought forth.”—Applied to an author or orator, whose laboured openings produce nothing in the end but abortion or imbecility.

Parvum parva decent. Lat. HORACE.—“Little things besit the humble man.”—The man in a low station never makes himself ridiculous, but when his efforts exceed his means.

Pas à pas on va bien loin. Fr.—“Step by step one goes very far.”—To advance by degrees is in general the most secure, as well as most successful mode of proceeding.

Pescitur in vivis livor, post fata quiescit, Tunc sumus, ex merito, quemque tuetur honor.

Lat. OVID.

“Envy is nourished against the living. It ceases when the object is dead. His deserved honours then will defend him against calumny.”—The sentiment that the world seldom does justice to living merit, will be found, varied only in the expression, in different places of this collection.

Passato il pericolo, gabbato il santo. Ital. Prov.—

“When the danger is past, the saint is mocked.”—In Catholic countries, in every case of danger and difficulty, prayers are eagerly offered to some peculiar saint. If the peril be avoided, the patron saint relapses into cold neglect, until he be elevated into respect by the approach of new danger. It applies to cases of friendship exerted, on protection extended, which are too often forgotten with the occasion.

Passim.

Passim. Lat.—“Every where.”—In various places.

Pater familiās. Lat.—“The father of a family.”

———Pater ipse colendi

*Haud facilem esse viam voluit, primusque per artem
Movit agros, curis acuens mortalia corda.*

Lat. VIRGIL.

“The father himself of tillage, did not wish the way to be easy: he was the first to raise the soil by art; inciting the human heart by anxiety.”—Providence has put care and labour in our way, as blessings too easily enjoyed are soon neglected, if not despised.

Pater patriæ. Lat.—“The father of his country.”

Patience passe science. Fr.—“Patience surpasses knowledge.”—The motto of Viscount FALMOUTH.

Patitur qui vincit. Lat.—“He who conquers, suffers.”—Motto of the Sc. Baron KINNAIRD.

Patriæ fumus igne alieno luculentior. Lat.—“The smoke of one’s own country appears brighter than any foreign fire.”—Every man must love his natal soil, in spite of all its comparative disadvantages.

Patria cara, carior libertas. Lat.—“My country is dear, but liberty is dearer.”—Motto of Earl RADNOR.

Patriâ quis exul se quoque fugit? Lat. HORACE.—

“What exile from his country is able to escape himself?”—Guilt vainly seeks for a refuge in foreign climes from its own consciousness.

“What exile from his native land,

“E’er left himself behind?” HASTINGS.

Patriæ

Patriæ infelici fidelis. Lat.—“Faithful to my unhappy country.”—Motto of the Ir. Earl of COURTOWN.

Patriis virtutibus. Lat.—“By hereditary virtue.”
Motto of the Ir. Baron LEITRIM.

-----*Pauci distinguere possunt
Vera bona, atque illis multem diversa.*
Lat. JUVENAL.

“Few men can distinguish between that which is really good, and that which is directly the opposite.”—There are many who are incapable of chusing that course which is likely to prove advantageous to themselves.

Paucis carior est fides quam pecunia. Lat. SALLUST.
—“There are few who do not set an higher value on their money, than on their good faith.”
—The historian wrote in an æra of the Roman Republic, when all the finer feelings were absorbed in the prevailing passion of avarice.

Paulum sepultæ distat inertie Celata virtus. Lat. HORACE.

“Virtue or energy when concealed differs but little from buried inertness.”—If a man can serve his country or his friend, and withholds his exertions, he is as liable to blame for his indolence as another for his incapacity.

Pauper enim non est cui rerum suppetet usus.
Lat. HORACE.

“That man is not poor who has the use of necessary things.”—The wise man, when the wants of life are supplied, can smile at those who are running after its luxuries and superfluities.

Paupertas

Paupertas fugiunt, totoque arcessitur orbe. Lat.

LECON.—“Poverty is shunned and prosecuted all over the globe.”—It is universally treated as a crime, and where humanity steps not in to make a few exceptions; it every where incurs the penalty of disgrace.

*Pauvres gens, je le plains, car en a pour les fous
Plus de pitie que de courroux.*

FR. BOILEAU.

“Poor gentlemen, I pity them:—for one always entertains for fools more of pity than of anger.”—A sarcasm addressed to a class of disappointed authors.

Pax in bello. Lat.—“Peace in war.”—A relaxed or incompetent system of hostility.—“The king,” says Dr. Johnson, “who makes war on his enemies tenderly, distresses his subjects most cruelly.”—Motto of the Duke of LEEDS.

Pax potior bello. Lat.—“Peace is preferable to war.”

Peccavi. Lat.—“I have sinned.”—To make one cry peccavi—to compel him to acknowledge his transgression.

Pecuniam in loco negligere maximum est lucrum. Lat.

TERENCE.—“To despise money on some occasions leads to the greatest gain.”—There are circumstances where nothing is to be expected but from a liberal expenditure.

Peine forte & dure. Fr.—“A harsh and severe pain.”—This was applied in the old law to the punishment of laying under heavy weights, and feeding only with bread and kennel water the culprit who refused to plead on his arraignment.
—This severity is done away by a later act of Parliament,

PE———PE

Parliament, which enacts, that the culprit so refusing to plead, shall be held to have pleaded guilty.

Pendente lite. Lat.—“Whilst the suit or contest is depending.”

Pense à bien. Fr.—“Think for the best.”—Motto of Viscount WENTWORTH.

Per acuta belli. Lat.—“Through the perils of war.”—Motto of the Ir. Earl of TYRCONNEL.

———Peraget tranquilla potestas

Quod violenta nequit : mandataque fortius urget Imperia quies. Lat. CLAUDIAN.

“Power can do no more by quietude than by violence, and calmness will best enforce the imperial mandate.”—Things lawfully and mildly commanded exact performance ; but if harshly and illegally required, produce dislike, and sometimes refusal and resistance.

Per angusta ad augusta. Lat.—“Through difficulties to grandeur.”—Motto of the Ir. Earl of MASSAREENE.

Per ardua liberi. Lat.—“Freedom through difficulty.”—The Motto of Lord CAMELFORD.

Percunctatorem fugito nam garrulus idem est. Lat. HORACE.—“Shun the inquisitive person, for he is also a talker.”—Those who enquire much into the affairs of others, are seldom capable of retaining the secrets which they learn.

Pereant amici, dum una inimici intercidant. Lat. CICERO.—“Let our friends perish, provided that our enemies fall at the same time.”—This which was a proverb both with the Greeks and the Romans, is quoted by the orator, only to be marked marked by his reprobation. It is a sentiment which bears the stamp of a cold, and most detestable selfishness.

PE———PE

Pereant qui ante nos nostra dixerunt. Lat.—“May they perish who said our good things before us.”—This was an humorous exclamation used even by the ancients, when charged with having borrowed from their predecessors. They acknowledged thereby the truth of the adage, “Nil dictum quod non dictum prius.”—“Nothing can be said which has not been said before;”—or in the words of the English adage, “that there is nothing new under the sun!”

Per fas & nefas. Lat.—“Through right and wrong.”—He pursued his purpose, per fas & nefas. He left no possible means untried.

Periculosa plenum opus aleæ. Lat.—“A work full of dangerous hazard.”—A business pregnant with danger.

*Periere mores, jus, decus, pietas, fides,
Et qui redire nescit, cum perit, pudor.*

Lat. SENECA.

“We have lost all morals, justice, honour, piety, and faith; and with these that modest sense of shame which, once extinguished, never can be restored.”—This is one of the complaints, frequently, and at all times repeated, of the dissoluteness of the present age.

Periissem ni periissem. Lat.—“I had perished unless I had perished.”—The motto of the Sc. Baron NEWARK.

Per il suo contrario. Ital.—“By its reverse or opposite.”—Motto of the Earl of UXBRIDGE.

Perjuri

Perjurii poena divina exitium, humana dedecus. Lat.

"The crime of perjury is punished by Heaven with perdition, and by man with disgrace."—This which was one of the laws of the Romans, called the laws of the Twelve Tables, is sometimes quoted as a maxim by modern judges and lawyers.

Per mare per terras. Lat.—"Through sea and land."—Motto of the Ir. Baron MACDONALD.

Permitte divi cetera. Lat. HORACE.—"Leave the rest to the gods."—Discharge your duty, and leave the rest to Providence.

Per multum risum, poteris cognoscere stultum. Lat.
"By his redundant laughter, you can always distinguish the fool."—Nothing marks a weak mind more strongly than an excess of laughter upon trivial occasions.

Per quod servitium amisit. Law Term.—"By which he lost her service."—The words are used to describe the injury sustained by the plaintiff when the defendant has debauched a daughter or apprentice.

Per saltum. Lat.—"By a leap."—He has taken his degrees per saltum.—He has attained to high honours by passing over the intermediate degrees.

Per scelera semper sceleribus certum est iter. Lat. SENECA.—"The way to wickedness is always through wickedness."—The perpetration of one crime generally leads to the commission of another.

Per se. Lat.—"By itself."—No man likes mustard per se. JOHNSON.

Perse-

Perseverando. Lat.—“By perseverance.”—The motto of Lord DUCIE.

Per varios casus, per tot discrimina rerum.

Lat. VIRGIL.

“Through various chances, and through so many vicissitudes of affairs.”—After such a strange variety of adventures.

Pessimum genus inimicorum laudantes. Lat. TACITUS.—“Flatterers are the worst species of enemies.”—You cannot guard against their attacks.—A secret mine is more to be dreaded than an open assault.

Pétites maisons. Fr.—“The little houses.”—A French phrase for a mad-house; probably from the narrowness of the cells.

Peu de bien, peu de soin. Fr. Prov.—“He who has not much wealth, has not much care.”

Peu de gens savent être vieux. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Few persons know how to be old.”—When the manners of youth are suffered to accompany old age, they only tend to make it ridiculous.

Peu de gens sont assez sage pour préférer le blâme qui leur est utile, à la louange qui les trahit. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“Few persons are so wise as to prefer the censure, which may be useful to them, to the flattery which betrays them.”

Philosophia stemma non inspicit. Platonem non acceperit nobilem philosophia sed fecit. Lat. SENECA.—“Philosophy does not look into pedigrees. She did not adopt Plato as noble, but she made him such.”—In the eye of true philosophy, all men are equal; distinction is only to be acquired by superior worth and talents.

—— Pictoribus atque poetis
Quidlibet audendi semper fuit æqua potestas.

Lat. HORACE.

"The power to dare every thing always belonged to painters and to poets."—The sister arts are entitled to avail themselves of equal boldness of invention.

Pie poudre. Law Fr.—"Dusty feet."—The court of—"This is the lowest court. recognised by the law of England."—The etymology of the name is somewhat doubtful. Sir EDWARD COKE says, that it has its name, because justice is done "as speedily as dust can fall from the foot," whilst others derive it from the "dusty feet" of the suitors. Mr. Barrington derives it more satisfactorily from pieds puldre-aux, a pedlar, in old French—a court of petty chapmen, such as resort to fairs and markets.

—— Piger scribendi ferre laborem;
Scribendi recte, nam, ut multum nil moror.

Lat. HORACE.

"Too indolent to undergo the toil of writing, I mean of writing well; for as to the quantity of his composition, that is wholly out of the question."—Applied with propriety to the numerous tribe of careless, dashing writers, who cannot endure the labour of revising or correcting their own works.

Pindarum quisquis studet studet æmulari,

—— Ceratis ope Dædaleâ,

Nititur pennis, vitreo daturus

Nomina Ponto.

Lat. HORACE.

"He who imitates the poet Pindar, relies on wings affixed with wax, as by the art of Dædalus, and is sure to give his name to a glassy sea."—The allusion is to Icarus the son of Dædalus, who is fabled to have fled from Crete on artificial artificial wings, when the sun melting his waxen pinions, he fell into the Icarian sea.—The lesson relates to the difficulty of what is called Pindaric poetry; the ancient and modern imitators of that bard, having given, in general, in lieu of the Flights of Genius, nothing but flights of extravagance!

Plerumque grata divitibus vices. Lat. HORACE.

“Changes are generally agreeable to the opulent.”—The poet alludes to the love of variety, so generally prevalent in those who can afford to indulge in it.

Ploratur lacrymis amissa pecunia veris.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“The loss of money is deplored with real tears.”—Whatever may be affected on other subjects, nothing wounds the feelings of most men, so much as their pecuniary losses.

Ploravere suis non respondere favorem

Speratum meritis.

Lat. HORACE.

“They lamented that the encouragement for which they hoped did not await upon their merits.”—This was applied in the first instance to the disappointment of poets; but men of talent in other walks of life, are but too sensible that it will bear a wider range of application.

Plura faciunt homines e consuetudine, quam e ratione.

Lat.—“Men do more from custom than from reason.”—In our general conduct, we are found to act rather from habit than from reflection.

Plura sunt quæ nos terrent, quam quæ premunt, et sæpius opinione quam re laboramus. Lat. SENECA.—“Our alarms are much more numerous than our dangers, and we suffer much oftener in apprehension than in fact."—The experience of human life has proved, that imaginary terrors occur more frequently than real dangers.

Plures crapula quam gladius. Lat. Prov.—“Gluttony kills more than the sword.”—We are shocked on hearing of the multitudes mowed down by the scythe of war; but we do not notice the silent and wide-spreading destruction, with which debauchery and excesses thin the ranks of private life.

Pluries. Lat. Law Term.—“At several times.”—It is a name given to a writ which issues after two former writs have gone out without effect.—The original writ is the capias—then follows an alias, which failing, the pluries issues.

Pluris est oculatus testis unus quam auriti decem. Lat. PLAUTUS.—“One eye-witness is of more weight than ten who give evidence from hearsay.”

Plus aloes quam mellis habet. Lat.—“He has more of gall than of honey.”—Applied to a writer whose forte lies chiefly in sarcasm.

Plus apud nos vera ratio valeat quam vulgi opinio. Lat. CICERO.—“Reason shall prevail with me more than popular opinion.”—I shall prefer my own judgment to general prejudice.

Plus dolet quam necesse est, qui ante dolet quam necesse est. Lat. SENECA.—“He grieves more than is necessary, who grieves before it is necessary.”

Plus

*Plus est quam vita salusque,
Quod perit: in totum mundi profternimur ævum.*

Lat. LUCAN.

“More than life and safety is lost in the present conflict; we are laid prostrate even to the last epoch of the world.”—This is said by the poet in lamenting the consequences of the battle fought between Cæsar and Pompey at Pharsalia. It is now often used to describe conflicts of a different kind, in the way of exaggeration, and when not national but personal interests are concerned.

Plus impetûs, majorem constantiam penes miseros.

Lat. TACITUS.—“There is more of violence as well as of perseverance amongst the lowly and the wretched.”—A wise government will therefore always be cautious of provoking this description of men to opposition or resistance.

Plusque exemplo quam peccato nocent. Lat.—“They do more mischief from the example, than from the sin.”—Spoken of persons in distinguished situations. The best example should be given from the highest place.

Plus ratio quam vis cæca valere solet. Lat. CORN.

GALLUS.—“Reason can in general do more than blind force.”—That which cannot be done by mere strength, is sometimes to be accomplished by address.

Plus salis quam sumptûs. Lat. C. NEPOS.—“There was more of relish than of cost.”—A proper definition of a philosophical entertainment.

Plusôt mourir que changer. Fr.—“Sooner die than change.”—This favourite motto is that which was written by a fair one on the sands, when walking by the sea-shore.”—Her lover arrived in time to read it: his joy however was soon dashed by a prophetic wave which instantly erased the inscription.

Poeta nascitur non fit. Lat. Prov.—“A poet is born, but is not made.”—No degree of study can make a poet, unless the man be possessed of innate genius.—This however is a point very warmly litigated.

Point d'argent, point de Suisse. Fr. Prov.—“No more money, no more Swiss.”—An allusion to the mercenary services of that nation.—No longer pipe, no longer dance.

Pol! me occidistis amici. Lat. HORACE.—“By H——n, you have destroyed me, my friends.”—Your misplaced zeal has inflicted on me an injury.

*Ponamus nimias gemitus; flagrantior æquo
Non debet esse dolor viri, nec vulnere major.*

Lat. JUVENAL.

“Let us dismiss all excessive sorrow: the grief of a man should not pass the bounds of propriety, or shew itself greater than the infliction.”—A man is debased by that womanish sorrow, which knows no bounds, and passes far beyond the occasion.

*Pone seram, cohibe; sed quid custodiet ipsos
Custodes? Cauta est & ab illis incipit uxor.*

Lat. JUVENAL.

“Apply locks and restraint, but who shall watch your own spies? Your wife is cunning, and will begin by seducing them.”—When a woman is inclined to mischief, her artifices will mock every preventive effort.

Ponton. Fr. Military Term.—“A temporary bridge for an army.”—Pontonniers, men who are employed in the construction of such bridges.

———Populus

———*Populus me sibilat at mihi plaudo
Ipse domi, simulac nummos contemplor in arca.*

Lat. HORACE.

“The people hiss me, but I applaud myself at home, when I contemplate the money in my chest.”—The miser finds, in the view of his hoards, a consolation and refuge from the public contempt.

Poscentes vario multum diversa palato. Lat. HORACE.

—“Requiring, with various taste, things widely different from each other.”—This phrase is used by an author, who found it impossible, like many of his less fortunate successors, how difficult it was to please the varying taste of each individual reader.

Posse comitatus. Lat.—“The power of the county,” which the sheriff is authorized to call forth whenever an opposition is made to the King’s writ, or to the execution of justice.

Possunt quia posse videntur. Lat.—“They are able, because they seem to be able.”—The greater energy in all cases of force will be found on that side, which from any cause whatever can be taught to look confidently for success.

Post amicitiam credendum est, ante amicitiam iudicandum. Lat. SENECA.—“After forming a friendship, you should render implicit belief; before that period, you may exercise your judgment.”—In a state of perfect friendship, there should be nothing like hesitation or distrust on either side.

Post bellum auxilium. Lat.—“Aid after the war.” A vain and superfluous succour, offered when the difficulty is past.

Postea. Law Lat.—“Afterwards.”—The name given to the writ by which the proceedings by mis prius are returned after the verdict, into the court of common pleas.

—Post equitem sedet atra cura. Lat. HORACE.—“Dark care sits behind the horseman.”—This is said of the man of guilt, who vainly endeavours to fly from his own reflections.

Post malam segetem ferendum est. Lat. SENECA.—“After a bad crop, you should instantly begin to sow.”—Instead of sinking under misfortune, we should immediately think of renewing our industry.

Post nubila Phæbus. Lat.—“The sun shines forth after clouds.”—Motto of the Ir. Baron SHULDHAM.

Post tot naufragia portum. Lat.—“After so many shipwrecks, there appears a harbour.”—After so many dangers, an asylum at length presents itself.—Motto of Earl SANDWICH.

Postulata. Lat.—“Things required.”—The admissions demanded from an adversary, before the main argument is entered upon.

Potentiam cautis quam acris consiliis tutius haberi. Lat. TACITUS.—“Power is more safely to be retained by cautious than by severe councils.”—Mildness combined with vigilance, as a prop of power, is more to be relied upon than a system of irritating severity.

Potentissimus est qui se habet in potestate. Lat. SENECA.—“He is most powerful, who has himself in his power;”—who is able to command himself.

Pour

PO————PR

Pour bien desirer. Fr.—“To desire good.”—Motto of Lord DACRE.

Pour connoître le prix de l'argent, il faut être obligé d'en emprunter. Fr.—“In order to know the value of money, a man must be obliged to borrow.”—He will then learn its value from the price which is set upon the obligation.

Pour s'établir dans le monde, on fait tout ce que l'on peut, pour y paroître établi. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“When a man has to establish himself in the world, he makes every effort in his power to exhibit himself as already established.”

Pour y parvenir. Fr.—“To attain the object.”—Motto of the Duke of RUTLAND.

Præcipuum munus annalium rerum, ne virtutes sileantur, utque pravis dictis factisque ex posteritate & infamia metus sit. Lat. TACITUS.—“The principal office of history I take to be this, to prevent virtuous actions from being passed over in silence, and that some fear of an opprobrious verdict from posterity should attach itself to foul expressions and vicious conduct.”

Præferre patriam liberis regem decet. Lat. SENECA.—“A king should prefer his country to his children.”—His duty to his subjects should take place of his family affections.

Præmunire. Law Lat. (from Præmonere, “to forwarn.”)—A writ by which offenders in certain cases, are put out of the protection of the law.

Præsertim ut nunc sunt mores, adeo res reddit, Si quisquis reddit, magna habenda est gratia.
Lat. TERENCE.

“In the present state of manners, the matter is brought to this point, that if any man pays a debt, debt; the creditor must accept it as a favour."—

In every state of life, which is called civilized, it appears that this same payment of debts was always considered as a most awkward, reluctant, and ill-complexioned sort of business.

Præsto & persto. Lat.—“I perform, and I persevere.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl of HADDING-TON.

———Præto vivere naso,
Spektandum nigris oculis, nigroque capillo.

Lat. HORACE.

“With an ugly nose, to be remarkable for fine black eyes and hair.”—Beauty consists in the proportion, correspondence, and harmony of parts. A fine eye, the poet hints, will only serve to make an ugly nose the more conspicuous. Thus the value of one qualification is frequently impaired through the want of another.

Preces armatæ. Lat.—“Armed prayers.”—Claims made with feigned submission, but which at the same time are to be sustained by force.

Prend moi tel que je suis. Fr.—“Take me just as I am.”—Motto of the Ir. Visc. LOFTUS.

Prendre la lune avec les dents. Fr.—“To seize the moon with one’s teeth.”—To aim at impossibi-lities.

Prendre martre pour renard. Fr. Prov.—“To take a marten for a fox.”—To catch a Tartar—to take a wrong sow by the ear.

Prêt d’accomplir. Fr.—“Ready to perform.”—
Motto of the Earl of SHREWSBURY.

Prêt pour mon pays. Fr.—“Ready for my country.”
—Motto of Lord MONSON.

Prima

Prima facie. Lat.—“On the first face.”—On the first view of an affair; or, in parliamentary phraseology, on the first blush of the business.

Primæ viæ. Lat.—“The first passages” of the human body—the intestinal canal.

Primum mobile. Lat.—“The first motion.”—The main spring, or impulse, which puts all the other parts into activity.

Principibus placuisse viris non ultima laus est.

Lat. HORACE.

“To have pleased great men, is a circumstance which claims not the last degree of praise.”—This poet was also a courtier. The praise could not be great, if the court of Augustus bore a resemblance to some of modern times.

Principiis obsta. Lat.—“Meet the first beginnings.” Look to the budding mischief, before it has time to ripen into maturity. See the next article.

Principiis obsta, sero medicina paratur

Cum mala per longas convaluere moras.

Lat. OVID.

“Meet the disorder in its outset. The medicine may be too late, when the disease has gained ground through delay.”—This precept is universally just. It is at present more frequently applied to political, than to animal economy.

Prius quam incipias consulto, & ubi consulueris mature facto opus est. Lat. SALLUST.—“Advise well before you begin; when you have maturely considered, then act with promptitude.”

Privatus illis census erat brevis commune magnum.

Lat. HORACE.

“Their private fortunes were but small, the wealth of the public was great.”—This description scription was applied to the infancy of the Roman republic, and contrasted with the later and more corrupt times, when individuals were possessed of enormous wealth, while the public treasury was impoverished.

Pro aris & focis. Lat.—“For our altars and our hearths.”—For our religion and our fire-sides.

Probam pauperiem sine dote quæro. Lat.—“I court virtuous poverty without a dowry.”—I throw myself into the embraces of poverty, unactuated by any ambitious wishes.

Probitas laudatur & alget. Lat. Juv.—“Honesty is praised and freezes.”—Acts of probity have too frequently no other reward than a cold commendation.

Probitas verus honor. Lat.—“Probity is true honour.”—The motto of the Ir. Viscount CHETWYND.

Pro bono publico. Lat.—“For the public good.”

Probum non pœnitet. Lat.—“The honest man does not repent.”—Motto of Lord SANDYS.

Pro Christo & patria. Lat.—“For Christ and my country.”—Motto of Sc. Earl KERR.

Procul a Jove, procul a fulmine. Lat.—“Being far from Jupiter, you are also far from his thunder.”—Those who feel not the sunshine of court-favour, are exempted in return from the dangers of courtly intrigue.

—Procul O! procul esto profani.

Conclamat vates, totoque absistite loco.

Lat. VIRGIL.

“Retire! far hence retire ye profane; and quit entirely the sacred grove.”—This was the solemn preface to the Eleusinian mysteries. The first line is often quoted in an ironical sense.

Prodesse

Prodesse civibus. Lat.—“To be of advantage to my fellow citizens.”—To be employed on a work, the end and aim of which is to be of service to the community to which one belongs.

Prodesse quam conspiceri. Lat.—“To do good rather than to be conspicuous.”—Motte of Lord SOMERS.

Pro & con. Lat.—“For and against.”—The reasonings pro & con—on both sides of the question.

Pro hac vice. Lat.—“For this turn.”—A. shall present pro hac vice, when B. has an alternate right of presentation to a living.

Prohibetur ne quis faciat in suo, quod nocere possit in alieno. Lat. Law Maxim.—“It is forbidden that any man should do that in his own, which may injure another.”—If a man does any thing on his ground which offends his neighbour, 'tis held to be a nuisance, and as such may be abated: Such an offence is the building which darkens the windows of another, erecting a dye-house, forming a tan-pit, &c. the smells of which are offensive, and sometimes infectious.

Proh superi! quantum mortalia pectora cæcæ Noctis habent.

Lat. OVID.

“Heavens! what thick darkness pervades the minds of men.”—How clouded is the understanding of the many!

Projicit ampullas & sesquipedalia verba. Lat. HOR.—“He throws away his swollen phrases and his words a foot and a half long.”—When reduced to adversity, a man forgets the lofty tone, and supercilious language of prosperity.

Pro libertate patriæ. Lat.—“For the liberty of my country.”—Motto of the Ir. Baron MASSEY.

PR——PR

Pro magna charta. Lat.—“For the great charter.”
—Motto of Lord LE DESPENCER.

Proprium humani ingenii est odisse quem læseris. Lat.
TACITUS.—“It is in the nature of man to hate those he has injured.”—It is the disposition of many never to be reconciled to those whom they have offended, as supposing perhaps that the forgiveness of the opposite party cannot be sincere.

Pro rege & patria. Lat.—“For my king and country.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl of LEVEN.

Pro rege, lege, & grege. Lat.—“For the king, the law, and the people.”—Motto of Lord PONS-SONBY.

Pro re nata. Lat.—“For a special business.”—An assembly called pro re nata—for that particular affair.

Pro salute animæ. Lat.—“For the health or safety of the soul.”—Thus the ecclesiastical court has cognizance in certain cases pro salute animæ.

Prosperum & felix scelus virtus vocatur. Lat. SE-NECA.—“Wickedness, when successful and prosperous, is called virtue.”—This will be best explained by the English epigram:

“Treason does never prosper; what’s the reason?
“That when it prospers, none dare call it treason!”

Protectio trahit subjectionem, & subjectio protectionem.
Lat. Law Maxim.—“Protection implies allegiance, and allegiance should ensure protection.”
—As the subject owes to the sovereign obedience, so the sovereign is bound to defend the laws, the persons, and property of his subjects.

Pro

Pro tempore. Lat.—“For the time.”—A measure pro tempore—a temporary expedient.

Pro virtute felix temeritas. Lat. SENECA.—“Instead of valour, there was an happy rashness.”—The philosopher speaks of ALEXANDER; but if modern generals were to be tried in the same manner, we should find that the greater part of their “glories,” are to be set down in the same manner, to a successful temerity.

Proximus ardet Ucalegon. Lat. VIRG.—“Your next neighbour’s house is on fire.”—The danger is so near, that it becomes you to consider your own safety.

Proximus sum egomet mihi. Lat. Law Maxim.—“I am always nearest to myself.”—This maxim bears on certain cases, in which a man may, without injustice, take to himself a preference: as an executor may first pay a legacy to himself, or take his own debt before other debts of an equal degree.

Prudens futuri temporis exitum

Caliginosa nocte premit Deus

Ridetque, si mortalis ultra

Fas trepidat.

Lat. HORACE.

“God, in his wisdom, has involved the future in clouded night: and he smiles, if mortals are improperly anxious to know what is to happen.”

—This is a sublime lesson to those who neglect their present opportunities, and are continually employing their thoughts about the future.

Ψυχῆς Ιατρειον. Gr. Psuches Iatreion.—“Physic for the mind.”—Applied to books, or reading.

Publicum bonum privato est præferendum. Lat. Law Maxim.—“The public good is to be preferred before private advantage.”—Thus a woman entitled to a dower, shall not be endowed of a castle of defence; because that is pro bono publico.

——— Pudet hæc opprobria nobis

Et potuisse dici, & non potuisse refelli.

Lat. HORACE.

"It is shameful that such reproaches should be cast upon us, and that we are unable to meet them with a refutation."—Our situation is opprobrious indeed, when we are left without an answer to offer to our adversaries.

Pudore & Liberalitate liberos

Retinere, satius esse credo, quam metu.

Lat. TERENCE.

"It is better to keep children to their duty by a sense of honour, and by kindness, than by fear and punishment."—Severity towards children often produces an effect directly the reverse of that which was intended.

Pulchrum est accusari ab accusandis. Lat.—"It is an honourable circumstance to be accused by those, who are themselves deserving of accusation."

Pulchrum est benefacere reipublicæ, etiam bene dicere haud absurdum est.

Lat. SALLUST.

"It is commendable to act well for the republic—even to speak well, should not be without its praise."

Pulchrum est digito monstrari & dici hic est.

Lat. PERSIUS.

"It is pleasant to be pointed at with the finger, and to have it said, "There goes the man."—Applied to those who are fond of obtruding themselves upon the public notice.

Punica

PU——QU

Punica fides. Lat.—“Punic faith.”—This phrase was used in an ironical sense by the Romans, to denote the treachery of the Carthaginians, a charge from which they were not themselves to be exempted. It is now used generally to mark the absence of good faith, or the breach of a political engagement.

Punitis ingenis gliscit auctoritas. Lat. TACITUS.—“When men of talents are punished, their authority is strengthened.”—When the infliction of the law falls upon the witty or ingenious author of what is termed a libel, it generally serves to give weight and notoriety to that which might have been overlooked in its impunity.

Puras Deus, non plenas, adspicit manus. Lat. SYRUS.—“God looks only to pure, and not to full hands.”—The Supreme Judge looks to the innocence, and not to the wealth of the party. It is sometimes otherwise in the courts below.

Q.

Quæ amissa, salva. Lat.—“What has been lost, is safe.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl KINTORE.

Quæ fuerant vitia mores sunt. Lat. SENECA.—“What once were vices, are now the manners of the day.”—Such is the general depravity, that what once was imputed as a crime, is now exhibited as a boast.

—*Quæ fuit durum pati,
Meminisse dulce est.*

Lat. SEN.

“That which it was harsh to suffer, it is pleasing to remember.”—There is something soothing to a man, in the recollection of his past misfortunes.

T

Quæ

*Quia laedunt oculos festinas demere, si quid
Est animam, differs curandi tempus in unum.*

Lat. HORACE.

“If any thing affects your eye you hasten to have it removed; but if your mind is disordered, you postpone the term of cure for a year.”—Men are infinitely less solicitous about their moral, than their physical state. Every precaution is taken in case of fever, &c., but small pains are taken “to minister to the mind’s disease.”

Qualibet concessio fortissime contra donatorem interpretanda est. Lat. Law Maxim.—“Every man’s grant shall be taken most strongly against himself.”—Whenever the words of a deed are ambiguous or uncertain, they shall be construed against the grantor. If a man grants an annuity out of land, and has no land at the time of making the grant, it shall charge his person.

Quærit, & inventis miser abstinet, ac timet uti. Lat. HORACE.—“The miser is ever on the search, yet fears to use what he has acquired.”

Quæstio fit de legibus non de personis. Lat. Law Maxim.—“The question must refer to the laws, and not to persons.”—In a court of judicature regard must be had to the letter and meaning of the law, and not to the rank or situation of either of the contending parties.

Quæ supra nos nihil ad nos. Lat. Proverb.—“The things which are above us, are nothing to us.”—A maxim frequently used against astrologers, and sometimes, but falsely, applied to politicians. Every man who can understand the first principles of government, has a right to examine into the conduct of his rulers.

Qualis ab incepto. Lat.—“The same as from the beginning.”—Motto of the Irish Earl CLAN-BRASSIL.

Qualis ab incepto processerit & sibi constet. Lat.
HORACE.—“Let him proceed as he began, and be consistent with himself.”—This was written as an instruction to the tragic poet. It is now used to recommend an adherence to consistency.

Quam diu, se bene gesserit. Lat.—“As long as he shall conduct himself properly.”—A phrase first used in the letters patent granted to the chief baron of the exchequer. All the judges now hold their places by this tenure: they were formerly held; “Durante bene placito,” during the king’s pleasure:

Quam prope ad crimen sine crimine. Lat.—“How nearly a man may approach to guilt; without being guilty.”—This was a favourite question with the Jesuits; who reasoned on the different shades and gradations of criminality; until, if it suited their convenience, they could do away the crime itself!

*Quam saepe forte temere
Eveniunt, quae non audeas optare?*

Lat. TERENCE.

“How often things occur by mere chance, which we dared not even to hope for.”—The chances of life are such, very often, as to transcend every prudent expectation. These, however, are rare indeed. They may be regarded as similar to the success of the Grecian painter, who despairing of hitting off the foam at a horse’s mouth, dashed his sponge against the picture, and thereby produced the desired effect.

Quam fissa amans sine rivali. Lat. CICERO de Hirte.—"How much in love with himself, and that without a rival."—Describing a man absorbed in self-love, and despised by the rest of the world.

Quam temere in nosmet legem sancimus iniquam. Lat.—"How rashly do we sanction an unjust law against ourselves."—How blindly do the unthinking part of the world lend their aid and approbation to measures, of which, if better instructed, they would perceive that they must ultimately be the victims.

Quand les vices nous quittent, nous nous flattons que c'est nous qui les quittons. Fr.—"When the power of committing vice forsakes us, we flatter ourselves; by assuming the praise of having forsaken the vices."

Quando aliquid prohibetur, prohibetur & omne per quod devenitur ad illud. Lat. LAW-MAXIM.—"When any thing is forbidden to be done, whatever tends or leads to it as the means of compassing it, is forbidden at the same time."

Quand on ne trouve pas son repos en soi-même, il est inutile de le chercher ailleurs. Fr.—"When a man finds not repose in himself, it is in vain for him to seek it elsewhere."—He cannot escape by change of place from the anxiety which is lodged within his bosom.

Quandoque bonus dormitat Homerus. Lat. HORACE.—"Sometimes even the good Homer nods."—Superior minds are not at all times exempt from lapses, or from frailty.

Quando ullum inveniemus parem? Lat. HORACE.—"When shall we look upon his like again?"—Or with "inveniant," when will they find any person to equal him?

Quanto plura recitatum seu veterum scriptis, tanto ludibria rerum mortalium cunctis in negotiis ob-servantur. Lat. FACITUS:—"The more I revolve in my mind the transactions of the ancients or the moderns, the more of frivolity and absurdity appears to me in all human affairs."

The matters which appear as grave to the present spectator, will take a lighter aspect in the view of the future observer, when acquainted with all their more minute circumstances.

*Quanto quisque sibi plura negaverit,
 A Diis plura feret. Nil cupientium
 Nudus castra peto; multa petentibus*

Desunt multa.

Lat. HORACE.

"The more a man denies himself, the more he shall receive from Heaven. Naked, I seek the camp of those who covet nothing; those who require much, are ever much in want."—Or, as thus quaintly translated by FANSHAWE,

"The more a man himself denies,

"The more indulgent Heaven bestows;

"Let them who will, side with the Ps,

"I'm with the party of the Noes.

Quantum. Lat.—"How much."—The quantum,
 "the due proportion."

Quantum est in rebus inane? Lat. PERCIUS.—
 "How much of folly is there in the affairs of men?"—How senseless and frivolous are the pursuits of men in general.

Quantum meruit. Lat.—"As much as he has deserved."—This phrase occurs in an action on the case, for work done without a previous agreement. The law will in this case give the plaintiff "as much as he has fairly earned."

Quantum quisque sua numerum credidit in arca, Tantum habet & fidei. Lat. JUVENAL.
“Every man’s credit and consequence are proportioned to the sums which he holds in his chest.”—The word credit is not here taken in the modern sense. The meaning is simply—it is wealth alone which can command respect.

Quantum Religio potuit suadere malorum? Lat. LUCRETIVS.—“To how many mischiefs does not Religion persuade?”—The poet is speaking of the sacrifice of Iphigenia, enjoined by the priests on her father Agamemnon.—The line is sometimes invidiously used, and in a broader sense.

Quare facit opium dormire? Quia in eo est virtus dormitiva. Lat.—“Why does opium induce sleep? Because it has in it a sleepy quality.”—This question and answer is asked by MOLIÈRE, in ridicule of that pompous ignorance which affects to solve every difficulty, whilst it dwells only in lofty no-meanings; or, as in this instance, only retorts the terms of the original question.

Quare impedit. Lat.—“Why does he disturb.”—The name of a writ which lies for the patron of a living, against the person who has disturbed his right of advowson.

Quare si fieri potest & verba omnia & vox hujus alumnus urbis oleant: ut oratio Romana plane videatur, non civitate donata. Lat. QUINTILIAN.—“Wherefore, if it can be done, your words and voice should favour of a pupil of this city, that your speech may appear to be truly that of Rome, and not that of a foreigner on whom it had bestowed its freedom.”—This, when modernized, is a good lesson against all provincial and vulgar dialects, which take all its consideration consideration from learning, and preclude, in a great metropolis, even the idea that the person so offending can have made any thing like elegant acquisitions.

Quare vitia sua nemo confitetur?

Quia etiam nunc in illis est. Senecam

Narrare vigilantis est.

Lat. SEN.

“Why does no man confess his vices? It is because he is yet in them. It is for a waking man to tell his dreams.”

Quas aut incuria fudit

Aut humana parum cavit natura.

Lat. HOR.

“Faults originating from carelessness, or of which human nature was not sufficiently aware.”

—Errors in a literary work either springing from haste, or partaking of the infirmity of our nature.

Quemcumque miserum videris, hominem scias. Lat.

SENECA.—“When you see a man in distress, know him for a fellow-man.”—Recollect that he is formed of the same materials, with the same feelings as yourself, and then relieve him as you would wish to be relieved.

Quem paenitet peccasse, pene est innocens. Lat. SEN.

—“He who is sorry for having sinned, is almost innocent.”—His penitence has nearly obliterated his fault.

Quem res plus nimis delectavere secundæ,

Mutate quotient,

Lat. HOR.

“The man who is most fond to revel in prosperity, will most acutely feel the shock of adversity.”—He who is intoxicated by his height, will most severely feel his fall.

Quem semper acerbum Semper honoratum (sic dii voluistis) habebis.

Lat. VIRGIL.

"That day which I shall always recollect with grief, but, as the gods have willed it, with reverence;"—referring to the day on which the speaker had lost a most valued friend.

Quem te Deus esse iussit. Lat.—"What God commanded you to be."—Motto of the Irish Baron SHEFFIELD.

Querelle d'Allemand. Fr.—"A German quarrel."
—A drunken affray.

Qui amicus est amat, quæ amat non utique amicus est. Itaque amicitia semper prodest; amor etiam aliquando nocet. Lat. SENECA.—"He who is a friend must love, but he who loves is not therefore a friend. Thus friendship is always advantageous, whilst love is sometimes injurious."—This is an useful lesson to the fair sex, who should learn to distinguish between that disinterested friendship, which seeks only their happiness, and that selfish love which would destroy their peace for its own gratification.

Quia te non capio tu capies me. Lat.—"Because I do not take (or comprehend) thee; thou shalt take me."—This is the language imputed to ARISTOTLE, who is said to have flung himself into the river, because he could not comprehend the fluctuation of the tides!

Qui Bavium non odit, amet tua carmina Mævi!

Lat. VIRGIL.

"He who does not hate Bavius, let him, oh Mævius, love thy verses."—These were two of the worst poets of antiquity. He who has so

QU——QU

so little taste, as to relish one bad performance, cannot be disgusted with another equally indifferent.

Qui capis ille facit. Lat. Prov.—“He who takes it to himself, makes the allusion.”—He that the cap fits, let him wear it.

Quicquid erit—superanda omnis fortuna ferendo est.
Lat. VIRGIL.

“Whatever the event may be, we must subdue our fortune by bearing it.”—The only way to overcome disaster, is by fortitude and perseverance.

Quicquid excessit modum Pendet instabili loco. Lat. SENECA.

“Whatever has exceeded its due bounds, is ever in a state of instability.”—This is a maxim equally true, whether applied to men or to governments. In politics, as in physics, the power is weakened from being overstrained.

Quicquid præcipies esto brevis. Lat. HORACE.—
“Whatever precepts you give, be short.”—All didactic rules should be given with brevity.”

*Qui cupit optatam cursu contingere metam,
Multa tulit fecitque puer, sudavit & alfit.*
Lat. HORACE.

“He who desires to reach with speed the wished-for end (the winning post of the race), must in his earlier days have suffered and laboured much, and borne the alternate extremes of heat and cold.”—No man ever reached to excellence in any one art or profession, without having passed through the slow and painful process of study and preparation.

Qui

QU—QU

Qui Curios simulant & Bacchanalia vivant.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“Who affect to be Curii, and live like Bacchanals.”—Applied to men whose feigned austerity is nothing more than a mask for their debauchery.

Quid datur a Divis felici optatus heras. Lat. CATULLUS.—“What is there given the Gods more desirable than a happy hour?”—The felix heras of the Romans implied “a lucky occasion,” or what our Rowe calls “a glorious, golden opportunity.”

Quid de quoque viro, & cui dicas, sepe caveto.

Lat. HORACE.

“Take especial care what you say of any man, and to whom it is said.”—Nothing in human life requires more caution than the manner of making our report on the character of others.

Quid dem? quid non dem? renuis tu, quod jubet alter.

Lat. HORACE.—“What shall I give? what shall I withhold? What you refuse, another imperiously ordains.”—The poet is speaking of what authors in all ages have complained, of the difference of taste and the capriciousness of their readers.

Quid domini facient, audent cum talia fures. Lat.

VIRGIL.—“What will their masters do, when low villains can thus presume?”—What are we not to expect from the principals, when we are thus insulted by their subalterns?

Qui de contemnenda gloria libros scribunt, nomen suum inscribunt. Lat.—“Those who write books about despising glory inscribe their own names.”—They shew a wish for that fame which they affect to contemn.

Quid

Quid est turpius quam senex vivere incipiens. Lat. SENECA.—“What is more scandalous than an old man just beginning to live?”—It is shameful to see a man in advanced life entering for the first time on the rudiments of knowledge, or the practice of virtue.

Qui dit docteur, ne dit pas toujours un homme docte, mais un homme qui devrait être docte. Fr. ST. REAL.—“He who speaks of a doctor (or professor) does not always speak of a learned man, but only of a man who ought to be learned.”—Pompous titles only serve, in some instances, as a cover for ignorance.

—— Quid leges sine moribus

Vanæ proficiunt?

Lat. HORACE.

“What can idle laws do without morals?”—If the moral sentiments of a people are completely relaxed or forgotten, little can be expected from the penalties or restraints to be imposed by the wisest legislature.

—— Quid non mortalia pectora cogis

Auri sacra fames?

Lat. VIRGIL.

“Accursed thirst of gold! to what dost not thou compel the human breast?”—To what atrocities cannot that mind reach, which is impelled by selfish avarice.

Quid non ebrietas designat? Operta recludit,

Spes jubet esse ratas, in prælia trudit inermem.

Lat. HORACE.

“To what does inebriety not point. It discloses every secret—it ratifies every hope, and pushes even the unarmed man to battle.”—Drunkenness makes men, at the same time, confident and imprudent.

—— Quid

Quid nos dura refugimus

Ætas, quid intactum nefasti

Reliquimus.

Lat. HORACE.

“What harshness has this age left untried, or what wickedness unaccomplished?”—By this reflection, so often employed, it is meant to intimate, that the present age is worse than any of those which have preceded.

Quid nunc. Lat.—“What now?”—What is the news at present?—Applied in ridicule to a person, who makes the acquisition of news his principal pursuit.

Quid pro quo. Lat.—“What for what.”—A quid pro quo, “a mutual consideration.”

Quidquid agunt homines nostri farrago libelli. Lat. JUVENAL.—“Whatever men do, is the subject of our book.”—The themes on which the author treats, are human life and human manners.

Quidquid delirant reges plectuntur ætoli. Lat. HORACE.—“Whatever error their kings may commit, the Greeks are punished.”

—When doating monarchs urge Unsound resolves, their subjects feel the scourge.

Quidquid excessit modum

Pendet instabili loco.

Lat. SENECA.

“Whatever has passed its due bounds becomes unstable and uncertain.”—To use any power to excess is the sure way to destroy that power.

Quidquid in altum fortuna tulit, ruitura levat.

Lat. SENECA.

“Whatever fortune has raised to an height, she has raised only that it may fall.”—When chance, not merit, has contributed to a man’s elevation, his fall may be considered as certain.

Quidquid

Quidquid multis peccatur inultum est. Lat. LUCAN.
 "The guilt which is committed by many, must pass unpunished."—Where the offenders are numerous, it is sometimes prudent to overlook the crime.

Quidquid præcipies, esto brevis. Lat. HORACE.
 "When you introduce a moral lesson, let it be brief."—Precepts of morality are so little suited to the temper of the general hearer, that they should be made as short as possible.

Quid quisque vitet, nunquam homini satis Cautum est in horas. Lat. HORACE.
 "Man never takes sufficient and hourly care against that which he ought to shun."—That which is called misfortune, contributes but little to the sufferings of human life. They are in general to be set down to our own want of caution and foresight.

Quid rides?
Mutato nomine de te fabula narratur. Lat. HORACE.
 "Why do you laugh? Change but the name, and the story is told of yourself."—We smile, as the satyrist justly observes, at follies related under feigned names, when we should smart if they were linked with our own.

Quid Romæ faciam? Mentiri nescio. Lat. JUVENAL.
 "What should I do at Rome? I cannot lie."—What should he do in a great capital, who cannot adopt its manners?

Quid sit futurum cras, fuge querere. Lat. HORACE.
 "Avoid all enquiry with respect to what may happen to-morrow."—Look not so anxiously into the future, as to preclude all present enjoyment.

Quid

QU ——— QU

Quid sit pulchrum, quid turpe, quid utile, quid non.

Lat. HORACE.—“What is becoming, what is base, what is useful, and what the contrary.”—

These are stated by the poet as the first aims of every moral enquiry.

Quid tam ridiculum quàm appetere mortem, cum vitam tibi inquietam feceris metu mortis. Lat.

SENECA.—“What can be so ridiculous as to seek for death, when it is merely the fear of death that renders your existence miserable.”—A similar idea which occurs in MARTIAL has been thus translated, “Himself he slew, when he the foe would fly!

What madness this—for fear of death to die.”

Quid te exempta juvat spinis e pluribus una?

Lat. JUVENAL.

“What does it avail to you, if one thorn be removed out of many?”—How are you bettered by the removal of a single grievance, if the general pressure is suffered to continue?

Quid terras alio calente—sole mutamus? Lat. HOR.

“Why do we change for soils warmed only by another sun?”—i. e. for different climates? Of what use is the change of residence when the mind bears with it its own disease?

Quid verum atque decens? Lat.—“What is just and honourable?”—The motto of the Ir. Viscount DUNGANNON.

Quid verum atque decens careo & rogo, & omnis in hoc sum. Lat. HORACE.—“My cares and my enquiries are directed in search of decency and truth, and in this I am wholly engrossed and occupied.”—This is the just motto of a satyrast, whose aim should be to correct whatever is improper, and to chastise whatever is indecent.

Quid

QU——QU

Quid violentius auro tyranni. Lat. JUVENAL.—

“What can be more violent than the ear of a tyrant!”—What more dangerous than the confidence of a despot?

Qui est plus esclave qu'un courtisan assidu, si ce n'est un courtisan plus assidu? FR. LA BRUYERE.—

“Who can be a greater slave than the assiduous courtier, unless it be the courtier who is more assiduous?”

Qui facit per alium facit per se. Lat. LAW MAXIM.—

“What a man does by another, he does by or through himself.”—Every man must be responsible for that which he empowers or commands another to do. If he orders another to commit a trespass, he is himself a trespasser.

Qui sit, Mæcenas, ut nemo quam sibi fortem

Seu ratio dederit, seu fors objecerit, illa,

Contentus vivat: laudet diversa sequentes?

Lat. HORACE.

“How comes it, Mæcenas, that no person is contented with his course in life, whether selected by his choice, or thrown in his way by chance, but is always praising those who follow a different pursuit?”—The merchant envies the lawyer, and is envied in his turn. Every man, with few exceptions, seems to think that he would have thriven better in any other pursuit, than that which he has adopted.

Qui genus jactat suum, aliena laudat. Lat. SENECA.

“He who boasts of his lineage, boasts of that which does not properly belong to him.”

Qui invidet minor est. Lat.—“He who envies, admits his inferiority.”—Motto of LORD CADO-GAN.

Qui

Qui male agit odit lucem. Lat. Prov.—“He who commits evil actions shuns the light.”—The worst presumable motives will always be inferred, where the doer of an act seeks to shroud himself in darkness and mystery.

*Qui méprise Cotin n'estime point son roi,
Et n'a selon Cotin, ni Dieu, ni foi, ni loi.*

Fr. BOILEAU.

“He who despises Cotin, cannot respect his king; and, according to Cotin, knows neither a God, a faith, or a law.”—This is applied to the conduct of political disputants, who, when their passions are heated, do not scruple to apply to their opponents the appellations of atheists and traitors, jacobins and jacobites, or whatever may be the opprobrious term of the day.

Qui mori didicit servire dedidicit. Supra omnem potentiam est, certe extra omnem. Lat. SENECA.—“He who has learned to die, has learned how to avoid being a slave. Such a man is most certainly beyond the reach of all human power.”—The writer who afterwards suffered himself to bleed to death, when commanded by a tyrant to terminate his existence, seems, when writing this energetic passage, to have had some presentiment of his fate.

Qui n'a point de sens à trente ans, n'en aura jamais. Fr.—“He who has not sense at thirty years of age, will never have any.”

Qui nescit dissimulare nescit vivere. Lat.—“He who knows not how to dissemble, knows not how to live.”—The man is little fitted for society, who has not the faculty on particular occasions, of concealing his feelings, and dissembling for the moment his resentments.

Qui

QU——QU

Quin corpus onustum

*Hesternis vitiis, animum quoque prægravat una,
Atque affigit humo divinæ particulam auræ.*

Lat. HORACE.

“The body loaded by the excess of yesterday;
depresses the mind also, and fixes to the ground this particle of divine breath.”

“The body too, with yesterday’s excess,

“Burdened and tired, shall the pure soul depress;

“Weigh down this portion of celestial birth,

“The breath of God, and fix it to the earth.”

FRANCIS.

Qui nil molitur inepte. Lat. HORACE.—“Who labours nothing fruitlessly, or absurdly.”—Whose means are always suited to his end. Spoken of a wise and provident statesman.

Qui non libere veritatem pronunciat, proditor est veri-tatis. Lat. 4 INST. EPIL.—“He who does not freely speak the truth, is a betrayer of the truth.”

Qui non vetat peccare cum possit, jubet. Lat. SENECA.
—“He orders the commission of a crime, who does not forbid it, when it is in his power.”

Qui non vult fieri desidiosus, amet. Lat. OVID.—
“Let him who does not wish to be indolent, fall in love.”—That busy passion will call all his faculties into exercise.

Qui pense. Fr.—“Who thinks!”—Motto of the Ir. Earl of HOWTH.

Qui perd, pèche. Fr. Prov.—“He who loses, sins.”
—The man who is unsuccessful, is generally held to be in the wrong.

Qui prête à l'ami perd au double. Fr. Prov.—“He who lends his money to a friend, is sure to lose both.”

Quis custodiet ipsos custodes. Lat. JUVENAL.—“Who shall guard your own guards?”—What check have you upon the very spies which you have set on this occasion?

Qui sentis commodum, sentire debet et onus. Lat. Law Maxim.—“He should endure the burden who derives the advantage.”

Qui se sent galeux se gale. Fr. Prov.—“He who feels himself scabby, let him scratch.”—Let him who feels the allusion, resent it.

Quis furor, O cives, quæ tanta licentia ferri. Lat. VIRGIL.

“What fury, oh citizens, what dreadful outrages of the sword?”—An appeal often and forcibly made in case of popular insurrection.

Qui statuit aliquid, parte inaudita altera, Æquum licet statuerit, haud æquus est.

Lat. SENECA.

“He who decides in any case, without hearing the other side of the question, though he may determine justly, is not therefore just.”

Quis desiderio sit pudor aut modus.

Tum chari Capitis.

Lat. HORACE.

“What blush or bounds shall be annexed to our grief, on losing an individual so intimately and justly esteemed?”—This is a common preface to an elegy or a funeral sermon. By the poet it was originally given as a solemn tribute to the memory of an endeared friend. If Quintilian had the worth ascribed to him in the following part of the quotation, HORACE must be excused from the guilt of posthumous adulation.

—Quis

*Quis enim virtutem amplectitur ipsam,
Præmia si tollas?* Lat. JUVENAL.

“For who will embrace even virtue itself, if you take away its rewards.”—What man is wholly disinterested even in the best pursuit?

Quis expedit psittaco suum hæc. Lat. PERSIUS.—

“Who taught that parrot his ‘how d’ye do.’—Who instructed that pedant to quote so largely from other languages?

Quis fallere possit amantem? Lat. VIRGIL.—

“Who can deceive a lover?”—What can escape a lover’s jealousy and penetration?

Quisque suos patimur manes. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Each man is liable to his peculiar destiny.”

Quis nam igitur liber? Sapiens qui sibi imperiosus.

Lat. HORACE.

“Who then is free? The wise man who can command himself.”—No man is less free than the slave to his passions.

Quis novus hic nostris successit sedibus hospes?

Quem sese ore ferens.

Lat. VIRG.

“What new guest is this that has approached our dwelling, and how proudly he bears himself?”

Quis talia fando temperet a lacrymis? Lat. VIRG.

“Who in speaking such things can abstain from tears?”—Who can remain unaffected by such a narrative?

Quis tulerit Gracchos de seditione querentes?

Lat. JUVENAL.

“Who could endure the Gracchi complaining of sedition?”—The Gracchi were Roman Tribunes, remarkable for being at the head of every seditious movement. The purport of the question therefore is, Who can bear to hear men complaining of faults of which they are themselves particularly guilty?

QU——QU

Qui tam. Law Lat.—“An action in the nature of an information on a penal statute.”

Qui terret, plus ipse timet. Lat. CLAUDIAN.—“He who awes others, is more in fear himself.”
—The despot keeps others in dread of his tyranny, whilst he is himself a prey to his own alarms.

Qui timide rogat, docet negare. Lat. SENECA.—“He who asks fearfully, teaches a denial.”
The claimant who has the greatest share of confidence is the most likely to succeed.

Qui vive. Fr.—“Who goes there.”—He is on the qui vive—on the alert.

Qui uti scit, ei bona. Lat.—“That man should be possessed of wealth, who knows its proper use.”
The motto of Lord BERWICK.

Qui vult decipi, decipiatur. Lat. Prov.—“If any man wishes to be deceived, let him be deceived.”

Quoad hoc. Lat.—“As far as this.”—He is right quoad hoc, as to this stage of the business, or point of the argument.

Quo animo? Lat.—“With what mind?”—The quo animo—the spirit and intention under which any act was performed.

Quocunque trahunt fata sequamur. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Wherever the Fates direct us, let us follow.”
—Let us yield to the imperious necessity of circumstances.

Quod ab initio non valet, tractu temporis convalescere non potest. Lat. Law Maxim.—“That which had no force in the beginning, can gain no strength from the lapse of time.”—A claim or title defective in the first instance, cannot derive any additional weight from prescription.

Quod alias bonum & justum est, si per vim aut fraudem petatur, malum & injustum est. Lat. Law Maxim.—“What otherwise is good and just, if it be aimed at by fraud or violence, becomes evil and unjust.”—Thus it is forbidden, even to those, who have title of entry, to enter into lands or tenements, otherwise than in a peaceable manner.

Quod avertat Deus. Lat.—“Which God forbid.”—An exclamation frequently used on viewing, or auguring an impending calamity.

Quod est inconveniens & contra rationem non est permissum in lege. Lat. Law Maxim.—“Whatever is inconvenient and contrary to reason, is not permitted in the law.”—Thus, if a town has customs which can be shewn to be unreasonable, they shall be no longer binding.

Quod licet ingratum est, quod non licet acrius urit.

Lat. HORACE,
“That which is lawful is less pleasing. Men are more strongly prompted to that which is unlawful.”—As they look, for instance, with more desire to other men’s wives than to their own.

———Quod medicorum est

Promittunt medici, tractant fabrilis fabri.

Lat. HORACE.
“Physicians promise that which belongs to physicians, and workmen handle their own tools.”—In these cases no man interferes with another’s business.

QU — QU

Quod male fers, assuesce, feres bene. Lat. SENECA.
 "Accustom yourself to that which you bear ill, and you will bear it well."—Patience and resignation will lighten every difficulty.

Quod non potest vult posse, qui nimium potest. Lat.
 SENECA.—"He who is too powerful, is still aiming at that degree of power which is unattainable."—It is in the nature of despotism to be insatiable.

—*Quod optanti divum promittere nemo
 Auserat—Fors en! attulit ultro,* Lat. VIRGIL.

"I.o! What none of the gods could have promised to your prayer, Chance has spontaneously supplied."—Spoken of some very unexpected good fortune.

Quod petis hic est—est Ulubris. Lat. HORACE.—
 "What you seek is here—it is at Ulubri."—
 You look for happiness in change of place, when in fact it is every where within your reach, were your search but properly directed.

Quod petiit spernit, repêtit quod nuper omisit. Lat.
 HORACE.—"He despises that which he had formerly claimed, and he recalls that which he had at one time lost sight."—This is applied to a capricious man who changes his views and intents, not from any change of circumstance, but from the veering and fluctuation of his own opinions.

Quod petis id sane inuisum est acidumque duobus.
 Lat. HORACE.—"What you ask is disagreeable and distasteful to two others."—This is the language of an author, labouring under something worse than a dilemma, which has but two horns, as not knowing how to please a trio of readers!

Quod

*Quod quisque vitet, nunquam homini satis
Cautum est in, bonis.* Lat. HORACE.

“Man is never sufficiently aware of the dangers which hourly await him.”—The perils which environ humanity are so numerous, that we should never relax in our caution.

Quod ratio nequit, sepe sanavit mora. Lat. SENECA.
“That which reason could not avoid, has often been cured by delay.”—To forbear and wait for events is sometimes all that is left to the most consummate prudence.

Quod satis est cui contigit, nil amplius optet. Lat. HORACE.
“He who has enough should wish for nothing more.”—The man who has a sufficiency, should learn to smile at the artificial wants of others.

Quod sit esse velit, nihilque malit. Lat. MARTIAL.
“Who wishes to be what he is, and sees nothing preferable.”—A brief and just definition of a state of contentment.

*Quod si deficient vires, audacia certe
Laus erit, in magnis voluisse sat est.* Lat. PROPERTIUS.

“Even though strength should fail, still boldness shall have its praise: in great attempts it is enough to dare.”—The resolution to attempt a great deed is laudable, even though the attempt should be unsuccessful.

Quod fors feret, feremus æquo animo. Lat. TERENCE.—“Whatever Chance shall bring, let us bear it with an equal mind.”—As we cannot controul the vicissitudes of Fortune, let us make sure of a relief and an asylum, in our own fortitude and equanimity.

QU——QU

Quod vos jux cogit, id voluntate impetret. Lat. TERENCE.—“What the law insists upon, let your adversary obtain from your own free will.”—When the merits of the case are decidedly against a man, it is folly to persist in a vexatious course of litigation, Quo fata trahunt, retrahuntque sequamur. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Let us follow the fates wherever they may lead or divert our steps.”—Let us submit ourselves implicitly to Providence.

Quo jure. Law Lat.—“By what right.”—A writ that lies for him who has lands, wherein another challenges common of pasture time out of mind; whereby the party is compelled to shew “by what right” he entertains this claim, Quo me cunque rapit tempestas deferor hospes. Lat. HORACE.

“To whatever quarter the storm may blow, it bears me as a willing guest.”—I endeavour to accommodate myself to every circumstance and condition of life,

Quo mihi fortuna, si non conceditur uti. Lat. HORACE.—“Of what use is fortune, if I am not permitted to use it.”—Of what value is wealth, if its enjoyment be restricted?

Quo minus. Law Lat.—“The appellation given to a writ issuing by fiction from the Court of Exchequer, on behalf of a person supposed to be the king’s farmer or debtor, against another, where there is any cause of personal action.”

Quo modo pyris vesci jubet Calaber hospes. Lat. HOR.—“In the same manner as a Calabrian would insist on your eating pears.”—This fruit is so plenty in Calabria, that it is chiefly used to feed hogs, hogs. The application is therefore to those, who officiously force on you, that which is of little value, and for which you have no liking.

QU——QU

Quondam vicimus armis. Lat.—“We were once victorious in arms.”—Motto of Lord DORCHESTER.

Quoniam diu vixisse denegatur, aliquid faciamus quo possimus ostendere nos vixisse. Lat. CICERO.—
“As length of life is denied to us; we should at least do something to shew that we have lived.”

Quoniam id fieri quod vis non potest Id velis quod possis. Lat. TERENCE.
“As you cannot effect that which you wish, you should wish for that which you may effect.”
You should endeavour to divert your inclination from that which you cannot possibly attain.

Quo nihil majus, meliusve terris. Lat. HORACE.—
“Than whom (or which) was never any thing greater or better on earth.”—A convenient phrase of compliment.

Quo res cunque cadant, unum & commune periculum, Una salus ambobus erit. Lat. VIRGIL.
“Whatever may be the issue of the affair, we (or they) shall share one common danger, or rejoice in mutual safety.”—Whatever may be the result, our fates (or those of the parties) are united.

Quorum. Lat.—“Of whom,” one of the quorum. This description of a justice of peace is taken from the words of his Dedimus. “Quorum unum.”—“One of whom,” I have appointed N. S. Esq. to be.—It is also used in another sense: “Such a number to be a quorum,” i. e. to be of sufficiency to proceed in the business.

Quos

Quos Deus vult perdere prius dementat. Lat.—

“Those whom God has a mind to destroy, he first deprives of their senses.”—This is a phrase most frequently applied to ministers, whose real or imputed faults are taken as the prelude to their approaching fall.

Quo semel est imbuta recens servabit odorem

Testa dia.

Lat. HORACE.

“The cask will long retain the flavour of that with which it was first filled.”—The prejudices imbibed from early education, will probably last through life.

“The odours of the wine that first shall stain.

“The virgin vessel, it shall long retain!”

FRANCIS.

Quot capitum vivunt, totidem studiorum

Millia.

Lat.

“The number of different pursuits and passions is in proportion to the number of men who live.”—Each man has his own prevailing passion, which differs in some respect from that of his neighbour.

Quo teneam vultus mutantem Protea nodo? Lat.

HORACE.—“In what knot shall I hold this Proteus, who so often changes his countenance?” How shall I confine to a specific point the man who so often shifts his ground of argument?

Quot homines, tot sententiæ. Lat. TERENCE.—“So many men, so many different opinions.”—An allusion to the continued diversity of taste and opinion.

Quo warranto. Law Lat.—“By what warrant.”—

A writ lying against the person who has usurped any franchise or liberty, against the king.

Rara

R.

Rara avis in terris, nigroque simillima cygno. Lat. OVID.—“A rare bird on the earth, and very like a black swan.”—Something singular or wonderful.—An unique, a prodigy.

—Rara est adeo concordia formæ Atque puditiæ. Lat. JUVENAL.—“So rare is the union of beauty and of virtue.”—One cause of this may be, that the fairest objects are those first attempted and seduced.

Rara fides, probitasque viris qui castra sequuntur. Lat. LUCAN.—“Good faith and probity are rarely found amongst those who are the followers of camps.”—A military life but too often relaxes the principles of men, and renders their feelings more callous. Yet, by a singular contradiction, it is from the midst of camps, that an historian of the human heart could select the most splendid instances of nice honour, and acute sensibility!

Rarâ temporum felicitate, ubi sentire quæ velis, & quæ sentias dicere licet. Lat. TACITUS.—“Such being the happiness of the times, that you may think as you wished, and speak as you thought.”—This strong description, so seldom realized, is given by the historian of the reigns of Trajan and Aurelius.

Rari nantes in gurgite vasto. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Swimming dispersedly in the vast deep.”—This was originally used in speaking of seamen escaping from a wreck. It is now applied to a literary performance where a few happy thoughts are nearly lost in an ocean of no-meanings.

Rari quippe boni, numero vix sunt totidem quot Thebærum portæ, vel divitis ostia Nili.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“ Good men are scarce indeed. They are scarcely more in number than the (seven) gates of Thebes, or mouths of the rich Nile!”

Raro antecedentem scelestum

Deferuit pede pœna claudo.

Lat. HORACE.

“ Justice, though moving with tardy pace, has seldom failed of overtaking the wicked in their flight.”—It is one of the strongest arguments for the belief of a superintending Providence, that few men, guilty of enormous crimes, whether the scourge fall sooner or later, have finally escaped their deserved punishment.

Rarus concubitus corpus excitat, frequens solvit. Lat.

CELSUS.—“ The bodily powers are excited by infrequent coition; by too frequent repetition they are relaxed.”

Rarus enim ferme sensus communis in illa

Fortuna.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“ We do not commonly find men of common sense amongst those of the highest fortune.”

—————“ For 'tis rare

If mighty fortunes common sense can share.”

Rarus sermo illis, & magna libido tacendi.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“ Their discourse was infrequent, and their seeming desire was to be silent.”—This is spoken of men who affect silence as a characteristic of gravity and wisdom.—It is thus translated by Dryden:

“ Since silence seems to carry wisdom's power,
“ Th' affected rogues, like clocks, speak once an hour.”

Ratio

RA———RE

Ratio & consilium propriæ Ducis artes. Lat. TACITUS.—“The proper qualities of a General are reason and deliberation.”—Inconsiderate rashness may frequently do much in the first instance, but the leader who acts upon sober reflection will, in general, be found to prevail in the end.

Ratio justificæ. Lat.—“The reason which justifies.”

Ratio suaseria. Lat.—“The reason which persuades.”—These two phrases are used to distinguish, when a speaker is impelled by a different motive from that, by which he means to influence his auditory; when he secretly justifies his measures on one ground, and wishes to persuade his hearers on another.

*Rebus angustis animosus atque
Fortis appare—sapienter idem
Contrahes vento nimium secundo*

Turgida vela. Lat.

“In difficulty and adversity you should assume the port of steadiness and fortitude—and it will be also prudent when the wind blows favourably to reef your overfilled sails.”—The latter part of the sentence is metaphorical. You should not suffer yourselves to be too far elated, or carried away by your success.

*Rebus in angustis facile est contemnere vitam.
Fortiter ille facit qui miser esse potest.*

Lat. MARTIAL.

“It is easy in adversity to despise death; he has real fortitude who can dare to be wretched.”

“The coward dares to die, the brave live on.”

Rebus secundis etiam egregios duces insolescere.
Lat. TACITUS.—“In the hour of prosperity even the best Generals become haughty and insolent.”

insolent."—It is in the nature of success to intoxicate leaders of every description, and there is no season in which they are more apt to leave open their weak points to a vigilant adversary.

Resse & suaviter. Lat.—"Justly and mildly."—
Motto of Lord SCARSDALE.

Rectus in curia. Lat.—"Upright in the court."—
A man coming into a court of justice, as the phrase is, "with clean hands."

Reculer pour mieux sauter. Fr. Prov.—"To go backward in order to leap the better."—The metaphor is borrowed from the practice in what is called a running leap. To retreat with prudence for the purpose of coming forward with greater energy.

Reddere personæ scit convenientia cuique. Lat. HORACE.—"He knows how to assign what is proper and becoming to each person."—As a dramatic poet, he gives to every personage its apposite and characteristic expression.

Redire cum perit nescit pudor. Lat. SENECA.—
"When modesty is once extinguished, it knows not a return."—The ingenuous sense of shame, when once lost, can never be restored.

Re infectâ. Lat. CÆSAR.—"The affair not having been done."—He returned re infectâ—without accomplishing his purpose.

———Re ipsa repperi.

Facilius est nihil esse homini melius neque clementiâ.

Lat. TERENCE.

"I have found by experience, that nothing is more useful to man than a spirit of mildness and accommodation."—In the various contacts of human human life, the man of bland and gentle manners will, in general, win his way, before the person who aims to gain his object by a coarse and undistinguishing austerity.

RE———RE

Reipublicæ forma, laudare facilius quam evenire, & si evenit haud diuturna esse potest. Lat. TACITUS.—“It is much more easy to praise than to establish a Republican Government; and when it is established, it cannot be of long duration.”—This assertion of the historian, though often employed, it is out of our province to discuss.

———Rem faciās rem

Rectè si possis, si non quocunque modo rem.

Lat. HORACE.

“A fortune—make a fortune, by honest means if you can; if not, by any means make a fortune.”—This language is put by the poet into the mouth of a corrupt man. It has been thus well translated:

“Get wealth and power, if possible, with grace,
“If not, by any means, get wealth and place.”

POPE.

Rem in re. Law Lat.—“In the act of coition.”

Renovato nomine. Lat.—“By a revived name.”—

Motto of the Ir. Baron WESTCOTE.

Repente dives nemo factus est bonus. Lat. SYRUS.—

“No good man ever became rich of a sudden.”
Immenſe and rapid fortunes, generally speaking, are acquired by fraud or violence.

Requiescat in pace. Lat.—“May he rest in peace.”

—This inscription is often found on tombstones. It is sometimes used ironically, as to a minister departed from office.

Res

RE———RE

Res angusta domi. Lat. HORACE.—“Narrow’d circumstances at home.”—He was impelled by the res angusta domi—by the severe pressure of poverty.

Res est sacra miser. Lat. OVID.—“The person of affliction is sacred.”—There is a hallowed respect due to the wretched, which should protect them from further insult or depression.

Res est solliciti plena timoris amor. Lat. OVID.—“Love is the perpetual source of fears and anxieties.”

Respice finem. Lat.—“Look to the end.”—Before you enter on an affair, let the consequences be well considered.

*Respicere exemplar vitæ morumque jubebo
Doctum imitátorem, & veras hinc ducere voces.*

Lat. HORACE.

“I would advise him who wishes to imitate well, to look closely into life and manners, and thereby to learn to express them with truth.”—Characters to be striking should be drawn from nature, not from fancy. This should be particularly observed upon the stage.

Respondeat superior. Lat. Law Max.—“Let the principal answer.”—In civil cases the master is always to be considered as responsible for the acts of his servant.

Res publica. Lat.—“The common weal.”—The general interest.

Res unius ætatis. Lat.—“A thing of only one age.”—This is a phrase used by Civilians to denote a legal provision, which by no possibility can pass beyond the first generation.

Retrahit

Retraxit. Law Lat.—“He has recalled or revoked.”—A term in law when the plaintiff or defendant says that he will proceed no farther.

Revenons à nos moutons. Fr. Phrase.—“Let us return to our sheep.”—A French lawyer pleading the cause of a client who had lost some sheep, talked of every thing but the matter in question, when his unfortunate client recalled him by the above exclamation. It is used in conversation to check any impertinent wandering from the argument.

Rex datur propter regnum, non regum propter regem. Potentia non est nisi ad bonum. Lat. Law Maxim.—“A king is given to serve the kingdom, not the kingdom to serve the king.—Power is not conferred but for the purpose of general advantage.”

*Rex est qui metuit nihil;
Rex est qui cupit nihil.*

“He is a king who fears nothing; he is a king who covets nothing.”—Such a man has erected in his own mind an independent sovereignty.

——Ridentem dicere verum

Quid vetat?

Lat. HORACE.

“What forbids a man when laughing to speak the truth?”—Why may not wholesome truths be conveyed under the garb of pleasantry?

Ride, si sapiis. Lat.—“Laugh if you are wise.”—Enjoy the ridicule which you will find is directed solely against error, ignorance, or folly.

Ridetur chorda qui semper oberrat eadem. Lat. HORACE.—“That person makes himself ridiculous who is ever harping on one string.”—Nothing is more disgusting than sameness in conversation, or writing.

———Ridiculum acri

Fortius ac melius plerumque secat res.

Lat. HORACE.

“Ridicule is frequently employed with more power and success than severity.”—Playful satire may sometimes reform, where serious indignation would be of no avail.

Rien de plus estimable que la civilité, mais rien de plus ridicule & de plus a charge, que la ceremonie.

Fr.—“Nothing is of more value than complaisance; nothing more ridiculous or troublesome than mere ceremony.”

Rien n'empêche tant d'être naturel, que l'envie de le paroître. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.

—“Nothing prevents a person from being natural and easy so much as the desire of appearing such.”—The study of itself produces the opposite effect—constraint.

Rien ne peut arreter sa vigilante audace.

L'Ete n'a point de feux, l'hiver n'a point de glace.

Fr. BOILEAU.

“Nothing can arrest his daring vigilance. For him the summer has nothing of heat, and the winter has no ice.”—This was the eulogy of the poet to Louis XIV. It has been lately quoted with respect to the First Consul of France; and it is not for a Lexicographer on a small scale to question its application.

Rien ne s'aneantit, non rien, & la matiere

Comme un fleuve eternel, roule toujours entiere.

Fr. ROUCHER.

“Nothing whatever is annihilated. Matter, like an eternal river, still rolls on without diminution.”—This is a just philosophical maxim, from the pen of an indifferent poet. It is only necessary

necessary to look around us, to be convinced, that though every thing perishes yet nothing is lost.

Rien n'est beau que le vrai, le vrai seul est aimable.

Fr. BOILEAU.—“Nothing is beautiful but truth, and truth alone is lovely.”

*Rien n'est si dangereux qu'un indiscret ami ;
Mieux vaudroit un sage ennemi.*

Fr. LAFONTAINE.

“Nothing is more dangerous than an imprudent friend ; it is better to have to deal with a prudent enemy.”—You can more easily guard yourself against the attacks of the latter, than against the indiscretions of the former.

Rira bien, qui rira le dernier. Fr. Prov.—“He laughs successfully who laughs the last.”—Nothing is more ridiculous than when the anticipation of triumph is checked by a defeat.

Risu inepto res ineptior nulla est. Lat. CATULLUS.

—“Than silly laughter nothing is more silly.”

—There is scarcely any thing more absurd than laughter unseasonably or causelessly indulged.

Risum teneatis amici? Lat. HORACE.—“Can even friends abstain from laughter?”—Is not the thing so ridiculous, that even partiality must smile?

Rixator de lanâ caprina. Lat.—“One who will quarrel about goat's wool.”—A person so captious that he will dispute on every thing, however absurd or trifling.

Rôle d'Equipage. Fr.—“A list of the crew.”—An official list of the persons on board, which neutral vessels are compelled to produce in time of war.

RU———SA

Rudis indigestaque moles. Lat. OVID.—“A rude and unarranged mass.”—A chaos of undigested matter.

Ruse contre ruse. French Phrase.—“Trick against trick.”—Diamond cut diamond.

Ruse de guerre. Fr. Phrase.—“A trick of war.”—A stratagem.

Rus in urbe. Lat.—“The country in town.”—Describing a situation which partakes of the advantages of both.

—Rusticus expectat dum defluat amnis, at ille Labitur & labetur in omne volubilis ævum.

Lat. HORACE.

“The peasant sits waiting on the bank, until the river shall have passed away, but still the stream flows on, and will continue to flow for ever.”—This is used to mark the disappointed ignorance of those who seem to be of opinion that the same causes will not continue to produce the same effects.

S.

Sa boule est demeurée. Fr. Ph.—“His bowl has stopt short of the jack.”—He has failed of his object.

Sæpe intereunt aliis meditantes necem. Lat. PHÆDRUS.—“Those who plot the destruction of others very often fall themselves the victims.”—The mischiefs which men devise against others, very often recoil, and crush themselves.

*Sæpe stylum vertas, iterum quæ digna legi sint
Scripturus: neque te ut miretur turba labores
Contentus paucis lectoribus.*

Lat. HORACE.

“You must often turn your style, if you mean to write any thing worthy of being read a second second time: nor should you labour to be admired by the multitude, but be content with few readers."—The first part of this quotation alludes to the stylus, or instrument of steel, with the sharp end of which the Romans wrote on a tablet of wax, and with the flat end erased what they deemed imperfect. The meaning therefore is, that the writer who wishes for permanent fame must submit to the labour of repeated correction.

Sapius ventis agitur ingens

Pinus & celsæ graviore casu

Decidunt turres, feriuntque summos

Fulgura montes.

Lat. HORACE.

"The lofty pine is ofteneft agitated by the winds—high towers rush to the earth with a heavier fall—and the lightning most frequently strikes the highest mountains."—The proud and the exalted are more liable to the strokes of adversity than the lowly and the humble.

Sævit amor ferri, & scelerata insania belli. Lat.

VIRGIL.—"The passions are in arms, and nothing is heard of but the mad wickedness of war."—This is a good description of that species of frenzy, which is too frequently the sole cause of national hostilities.

Sæviturque animis ignobile vulgus

Jamque faces & saxa volant; furor arma ministrat.

Lat. VIRGIL.

"The rude rabble are enraged: now the firebrands and stones are seen to fly about: their fury supplies them with arms."—A striking description of a popular tumult.

Saltabat melius quam necesse est probæ. Lat.—"She danced much better than became a modest woman."—Amongst the Romans, to excel in this art was expected only from the public women.

Salutat Milonius ut semel ieto
Accessit ferper capiti, numerusque lucernis.

Lat. JUVENAL.

"Milonius dances as soon as the wine gets into his heated head, and the lights are doubled to his view."—Used to describe a drunken frolic, where the actor is in other respects of a distinguished character.

Salus per Christum redemptorem. Lat.—"Salvation through Christ the Redeemer."—Motto of the Sc. Earl of MORAY.

Salus populi suprema est lex. Lat.—"To consult the welfare of the people is the first great law."—The main end of every government should be the well-being of the people, the establishment of order and security, and the diffusion of social happiness.

Salvo jure. Lat.—"Saving the right."—A clause of exception.—Such a thing shall be granted, salvo jure Regis, "saving the King's right," if it does not trench upon his rights or prerogative.

Salvo pudore. Lat.—"Without offence to modesty."—I shall describe the matter "salvo pudore," without offending the decent eye or ear.

Sanctio justa, jubens honesta, & prohibens contraria. Lat.—"A just ordinance, commanding what is honest, and forbidding the contrary."—This is the proper definition, given by BRACTON, of our municipal law.

Sang froid. Fr.—"Cold blood."—Indifference, apathy.

Sans changer. Fr.—"Without changing."—Motto of the Earl of DERRY.

Sans

Sans Dieu rien. Fr.—“Nothing without God.”—
Motto of Lord PETRE.

Sans les femmes, les deux extrémités de la vie seraient sans secours, & le milieu sans plaisirs. Fr.—
“Without woman the two extremities of life would be without help, and the middle of it without pleasure.”—Were it not for that enchanting sex, our infancy would be without succour, our age without relief, and our manhood without enjoyment.

Sapere aude. Lat. HORACE.—“Dare to be wise.”
—Pursue the path of wisdom without regarding the obstacles which may be thrown in your course.—Motto of Earl MACCLESFIELD.

Sapiens dominabitur astris. Lat.—“The wise man will govern the stars.”—His prudence and foresight will enable him to counteract that which, with vulgar minds, is suffered to pass for fate or destiny.

Sapientem pascere barbam. Lat. HORACE.—“To nurse a wise beard.”—To assume the outward indications of wisdom.

Sapientes principes sapientum congressu. Lat. from PLATO.—“Princes become wise from the intercourse of wise men.”—The good sense of a monarch may be judged of by that of those whom he takes for his advisers.

Sapientia prima est, stultitia caruissi. Lat. HORACE.—“The first step to wisdom is, to be exempt from folly.”—No man can be called wise who makes occasional lapses in point of prudence.

Satis eloquentiæ, sapientiæ parum. Lat. SALLUST.
—“A sufficient share of eloquence, with little wisdom.”—A fluent elocution is not always a proof of intrinsic good sense.

Sauve qui peut. Fr.—“Save himself who can.”—The phrase of flight, when a French army is routed.

Scan. Mag. Scandalum Magnatum. Law Lat.—“The scandal of the Peerage.”—The name given to a statute of Richard II. by which punishment is to be inflicted for any scandal or wrong offered to, or uttered against, a noble personage.

Scelere velandum est scelus. Lat. SENECA.—“One wickedness is to be concealed by another.”—The guilt of one crime is but too frequently disguised by the perpetration of a second.

*Scelus intra se tacitum qui cogitat ullum
Facti crimen habet.* Lat. JUVENAL.
“He who meditates the commission of a crime has all the guilt of the deed.”—The intention in certain cases is as guilty as the act itself.

Scilicet ut fulvum spectatur in ignibus aurum Tempore in duro est inspicienda fides. Lat. OVID.
“As the yellow gold is tried in the fire, so the faith of friendship can only be known in the season of adversity.”

Scinditur incertum studia in contraria vulgus. Lat. VIRGIL.—“The uncertain multitude is divided by opposite opinions.”—The populace, incapable of judging for themselves, and generally taking their opinions from others, are seldom to be found in a state of unanimity.

Scio,

Scio, coactus tua voluntate es. Lat. TERENCE.

“I know, thou art compelled by thy own will.”

—You plead necessity when in fact you are biassed only by your own inclination.

Scire facias. Law Lat.—“Cause it to be known.”

—The name given to a judicial writ, ordering the defendant to shew cause why the execution should not be made out of a judgment which has passed.

Scire tuum nihil est, nisi te scire hoc sciat alter. Lat.

PERSIUS.—“Your own knowledge is as nothing; unless others know you to possess that knowledge.”—The chief value of acquired knowledge, with many, is to impress others with a sense of their acquirements.

Scire volunt omnes, mercedem solvere nemo.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“Every man wishes to be informed, but few are willing to pay the price;”—to undergo the study and expence.

Scribendi recte sapere est principium & fons.

Lat. HORACE,

“The first principle and source of all good writing is to think justly,”—Those writings are of little value, which do not leave the reader either wiser or better than they found him.

Scribimus indocti doctique poemata passim. Lat. HO-

RACE.—“We, both learned and unlearned, are in the habit of writing poetry.”—Other pursuits are supposed to require some previous study, but most men suppose themselves as it were instinctively qualified to become poets, as well as politicians.

Secretè

SE———SE

Secretè amicos admone, lauda palam. Lat. SYRUS.—
“Admonish your friends secretly, but praise them openly.”

Secundum formam statuti. Law Lat.—“According to the form of the statute.”

Sed fugit, interea fugit, irreparabile tempus.
Lat. VIRGIL.

“But in the mean while time flies;—time, whose loss is never to be retrieved.”—Used as an admonition against procrastination or delay.

*Sed notat hunc omnis domus, & vicinia tota
Introrsum turpem, speciosum pelle decorâ.*
Lat. HORACE.

“This man is regarded by his family and neighbourhood, as a fellow of internal baseness, and exhibiting only a shewy outside.”—Used to describe a specious, but at the same time a notorious and confirmed hypocrite.

Sed nunc amissâ quæramus seria ludo. Lat. HORACE.—
“But now leaving sportiveness aside, let us look to more serious matter.”—Putting wit and raillery out of the question, let us come to facts and arguments.

Sed nunc non erat his locus. Lat. HORACE.—“But there was at this time no place for these matters.”—The observations were sufficiently well in themselves, but they were extraneous, and inapplicable to the subject.

Sed post est occasio calva. Lat.—“But opportunity is bald behind.”—This alludes to the figure of Time as represented by painters, with a forelock only, to intimate that when once past, he cannot by any means be caught or recalled.—An opportunity once missed is most frequently lost for ever.

———Sed

——— Sed te

Nos facimus, Fortuna, Deam, & in cœlo locamus,

“We, Fortune! make thee a goddess, and place thee in the heavens.”—Or as Dryden has it;

“Fortune a goddess is to fools alone,

“The wise are always masters of their own.”

Sed ubi plura nitent in carmine non ego paucis

Offendar maculis.

Lat. HORACE.

“But if there are many brilliancies in the poem, I shall not be offended with a few faults.”—

Where there are many beauties, we should pardon a few defects.

Sed videt nunc omnis domus & vicinia tota

Introrsum turpem & speciosum pelle decora.

Lat. HORACE.

“Yet all the house and the whole neighbourhood see the inward baseness and outward speciousness of this man.”—Applied to a plausible but detested hypocrite.—It is thus translated by FRANCIS.

“Yet his own house, his neighbours, thro’ his art, “Behold an inward baseness in his heart.

Regnem ac desidem, & Circo & Theatris corruptum

Militem. Lat. TACITUS.—“A slothful and listless Military, debauched by the Circus and the Theatres.”—A soldiery enervated by the dissipation of a long peace, and which has seemingly forgotten the arts and exercises of war.

Signius irritant animos demissa per aurem

Quam quæ sunt oculis subiecta fidelibus.

Lat. HORACE.

“The facts, which are merely told, produce a cold impression, compared with that of those which are presented to the eye.”—This is a lesson lesson to the tragic poet, who should rather place his reliance on vivid action than on cold narration.

“That which was form’d to captivate the eye
The ear must coldly taste: Description’s weak,
And the muse falters in the vain attempt.”

In common life we are indifferent hearers of acts, which, had we been eye-witnesses, would have excited our lively indignation.

Semel insanivimus omnes. Lat.—“We have all at some time been mad.”—Every man must recollect some period in his life when his conduct was not influenced by his reason.

Semel malus semper præsumitur esse malus. Lat. Law Maxim.—“Those who are once evil are always presumed to be so.”—This is to be understood in eodem genere mali, “in the same kind of evil:” as persons convicted of perjury are not to be admitted as witnesses in any cause, after having once so offended.

Semita certè Tranquillæ per virtutem patet unica vitæ.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“Virtue offers the only path which, in this life, leads to tranquillity.”

Semper avarus eget. Lat. HORACE.—“The miser is ever in want.”

*Semper habet lites, alterna jurgia lectus,
In qua nupta jacet: minimum dormitur in illo.*

Lat. JUVENAL.

“That bed in which a married woman lies is full of scolding and disputes: It will therefore admit of little sleep.”—This is one of the common place sarcasms on those contests, which but too frequently embitter the matrimonial state.

Semper

Semper honor, nomenque, tuum laudesque manebunt.

Lat. VIRGIL.—“Your honour, your name, and your praises, shall ever remain.”—Your fame shall be eternized.

Semper idem.—Semper eadem. Lat.—“Always the same.”—The former phrase is of the masculine, and the latter of the feminine gender.

Semper inops quicunque cupit. Lat. CLAUDIAN.—

“The man who desires more is ever poor.”—

The avaricious, who are continually extending their wishes, are poor even in the midst of affluence.

Semper fidelis. Lat.—“Always faithful.”—Motto of Lord ONSLOW.

Semper nocet differre paratis. Lat. LUCAN.—“Delay is always injurious to those who are prepared.”—When you are ready, you should leave to your adversary no further time for preparation.

Semper paratus. Lat.—“Always ready.”—Motto of Lord CLIFFORD.

Sempre il mal non vien per nuocere. Prov. Ital.—

“Misfortune does not always come to injure.”

—That which we take for an infliction sometimes comes as a blessing.

Se non è vero, è ben trovato. Ital. Prov.—“If it be not true, it is at least well invented.”—It has the appearance of truth, if it be not true in reality.

Sequiturque patrem non passibus æquis. Lat. VIR-

GIL.—“He follows his father, but not with equal paces.”—He follows his predecessor, but with an inferior share of vigour, or ability.

SE———SE

Seria cum possum, quod delectantia malim

Scribere, tu causa es lector. Lat. MARTIAL.

"That I dwell on lighter topics, when I could handle those more serious, thou, reader, art the cause."—An author must strive to gratify the taste of his reader, for "Those who live to please, must please to live."

Seriatim. Lat.—"In order."—According to place or seniority.

Series implexa causarum. Lat. SENECA.—"The complicated series of causes."—By this is signified what the ancients expressed by the general term—Fate.

*Sero respicitur tellus, ubi fune soluto
Currit in immensum panda carina salum.*

Lat. OVID.

"It is too late to look back upon the land, when the cable being loosed, the vessel is making her way into the immense deep."—We should use all previous circumspection, when about to commit an act which in its consequences may be irretrievable.

Sero sed serio. Lat.—"Late, but seriously."—Motto of the Sc. Marquis of LOTHIAN, and of the Marquis SALISBURY.

Serpentes avibus gementur, tigris agni. Lat. VIRGIL.—"Let serpents couple with birds, and lambs with tygers."—Let things the most dissonant agree, ere this harsh union be completed.

Serum est cavendi tempus in mediis malis. Lat. SENECA.—"The season of caution is past, when we are in the midst of evils."—After-thought is wholly useless in many cases, which by due foresight might have been prevented.

Serus

Servus in caelum redeas, diuque lato

Interis populo.

Lat. HORACE.

“Late may you return to Heaven, and long may you continue to gladden your people with your presence.”—This was the flattering invocation of the poet to the Emperor Augustus. It has since become a common-place, addressed to every potentate of every description.

Serva jugum. Lat.—“Preserve the yoke.”—This is the complaisant motto of the Scotch Earl of ERROL.

Servabo fidem. Lat.—“I will keep faith.”—Motto of Lord SHERRBORNE.

Servare cives, major est virtus patriæ patri. Lat. SENECA.—“To preserve the lives of citizens, is the greatest virtue in the Father of his country.”

Servata fides cineri. Lat.—“Faithful to the memory of my ancestors.”—Motto of Lord HARROWBY.

Servetur ad imum

Qualis ab incepto processerit & sibi consistet.

Lat. HORACE.

“Let the character be preserved to the last as it set out from the beginning, and be consistent with itself.”—Let not your conduct, or that of the character which you pourtray, be disgraced by inconsistency.

Serviet eternum, qui parvo nescitur uti. Lat. HORACE.—“He must be a perpetual slave, who knows not how to live upon a little.”—Prodigality in the first instance, is the natural parent of servility and adulation in the second.

Si

Si ad naturam vivas, nunquam eris pauper; si ad opinionem nunquam dives. Lat. SENECA.—“If you live according to the dictates of nature, you will never be poor; if according to the world’s caprice, you never will be rich.”—The natural wants of man are but few, and those easily satisfied; it is the gratification of their artificial wants that leads the proud and sensual into distress and difficulty.

Si antiquitatem spectes est vetustissima, si dignitatem est honoratissima, si jurisdictionem est capacissima. Lat. COKE.—“If you look to its antiquity, it is most ancient—if to its dignity, it is most honourable—if to its jurisdiction, it is most extensive.”—This is the description given by one of our ablest law-writers on the English House of Commons.

Si cadere necesse est, occurrendum discrimini. Lat. TACITUS.—“If a man must fall, he should manfully meet the hazard.”—When the danger is extreme, it should be met with a proportioned energy.

Sic delatores, genus hominum publico exitio repertum, et pœnis nunquam satis coercitum, per præmia eliciebantur. Lat. TACITUS.—“Thus were informers, a race of men discovered for public destruction, and never sufficiently restrained by pains or penalties, allured and brought forward by rewards!”—The historian is describing some of the worst evils of a despotic government, and he could not have chosen a stronger instance than in speaking of the race of informers,—men who have always been the bane of all social intercourse, and the curse of every civil institution.

Sic

SI———SI

Sic donec. Lat.—“ Thus, until—.”—The motto of the Duke of BRIDGEWATER.

Si ceux, qui sont ennemis des divertissemens honnêtes, avoient la direction du monde, ils voudroient ôter le printemps & la jeunesse,—l'un de l'année & l'autre de la vie. Fr. BALZAC.—“ If those who are the enemies of innocent amusements had the direction of the world, they would take away the spring and youth—the former from the year, and the latter from human life.”

Sic itur ad astra. Lat. VIRGIL.—“ Thus men ascend to the skies.”—Such is the way to immortality.—Motto of the Sc. Baron BALLENDEN.

Sic passim. Lat.—“ So every where.”—This is used to denote, that the same sentiment occurs in several passages of the same work.

Sic præsentibus utaris voluptatibus, ut futuris non noceas. Lat. SENECA.—“ Enjoy your present pleasures, so as not to injure those which are to follow.”—Take care in every indulgence not to destroy your powers by excess.

*Sic omnia fatis
In pejus ruere & retro sublapsa referri.*

Lat. VIRGIL.

“ Thus all things are changed for the worse, and at length borne down by fate.”—By the greater number of the ancient poets in particular, every signal misfortune was supposed to spring from a fixed and irrevocable destiny.

Sic quisque pavendo

Dat vires famæ, nulloque auctore malorum

Quæ finxere timent.

Lat. LUCAN.

“ Thus each person by his fears, gives wings to rumour, and without any real source of apprehension, prehension, men fear what they themselves have feigned."—The popular apprehension too often makes the mischief which it fears.

Y

Sic transit gloria mundi. Lat.—“ Thus passes away the glory of this world.”—Such are the transitions and fluctuations of worldly splendor, and of human happiness.

Sicut ante. Lat.—“ As before.”

Sic utere tuo-ut alienum non lœdas. Lat. Law Maxim.—“ Make use of your own property in such a manner, as not to injure that of another.”—This is often applied in case of nuisances, &c.

Sic volo, sic jubeo, stat pro ratione voluntas. Lat.—“ Thus I wish and order; my will stands in the place of reason.”—This characteristic language is generally put into the mouth of a despot.

Sic vos non vobis. Lat. VIRGIL.—“ So you do not labour for yourselves.”—This is merely the commencement of some stanzas, in which the poet complains, that as bees do not make honey, or sheep bear fleeces for their own use, so the profit and honour of his labours had been usurped by others.”—The application is to those who have suffered by a similar usurpation.

Si Deus nobiscum, quis contra nos. Lat.—“ If God be with us, who shall be against us?”—Motto of the Irish Viscount MOUNTMORRES.

Si fas est magnis componere parva.

Lat. VIRGIL.

“ If it be allowable to compare small things with great.”

Si foret in terris rideret Heraclitus. Lat.—“ If Heraclitus were on earth, he would laugh.”—The philosopher of antiquity who was only remarkable markable for weeping, must laugh perforce, at the absurdity of these arguments or proceedings.

Si dixeris, æstus, sudat. Lat.—“If you say that you are warm, he sweats.”—Spoken of such sycophants, or “water-flies” as Osrick in Hamlet, who amongst other modes of adulation, are ever of the same opinion with those to whom they address themselves.

Si fortuna juvat, caveto tolli

Si fortuna tonat, caveto mergi. Lat. AULON.

“If fortune favours you, do not be elated;—if she should frown, do not despond.”—Preserve an equal mind in all situations.

Si genus humanum & mortalia temnitis arma

At sperate Deos memores fandi atque nefandi.

Lat. VIRGIL.

“If you despise the human race, and mortal arms, yet remember that there is a God who is mindful of right and wrong.”—Recollect that there is a future state of reward and punishment.

Si je puis. Fr.—“If I can.”—Motto of the Scotch Baron NEWBURGH.

Si judicas cognosce, si regnas jube. Lat. SENECA.—

“If you judge, enquire; if you reign, command.”—If your office be judicial, inform yourself; if ministerial, you may decide without enquiry.

Silent leges inter arma. Lat. CICERO.—“The laws are silent in the midst of arms.”—The shock of hostilities is too violent to permit of calm or equitable discussion.

Si mens non læva fuisset. Lat. VIRGIL.—“If my (or the) mind had not been perverted,” literally had not been on the left side. The Romans, all omens relating to human affairs, and occurring on the left side, considered as unfortunate. It was the reverse of this, when the Heavens were to be consulted, as the right hand of the Divinity was supposed to be to the left of the person looking upward, and making his appeal.

Simia quam similis, turpissima bestia, nobis? Lat.—“How like to a man in shape and action is that vile beast the monkey?”—The imitative talents of this animal give rise to the curious query;
“Do chattering monkeys mimic men;
“Or we, turned apes, out-monkey them?”

Si mihi pergit quæ vult dicere, ea quæ non vult Audiet. Lat. TERENCE.
“If he proceeds to state what he pleases against me, he shall have something in return which it will not please him to hear.”

Simplex munditiis. Lat. HORACE.—“Simple in neatness.”—Recommended by propriety of dress, but unincumbered with superfluous ornament.

Simul & jucunda & idonea dicere vitæ. Lat. HORACE.
“To tell at once what is pleasant and proper in life.”—This is the task of the didactic poet, whose business it is to blend amusement with instruction.

Sincerum est nisi vas, quodcunque infundis acescit. Lat. HORACE.
“Unless the vessel be pure, whatever you put in will turn sour.”—If the young mind be not duly prepared, all after instructions are thrown away.

Sine

SI———SI

Sine Cerere & Baccho friget Venus. Lat.—“Without the aid of Ceres and Bacchus, Venus freezes.”—Love will speedily cool, says the Poet from the school of Epicurus, without the aid of wine and good living.

Sine die. Lat.—“Without a day.”—The business was deferred sine die.—no day was named for its reconsideration, or for a further meeting.

Sine invidia. Lat.—“Without envy.”—Not speaking invidiously.

Sine odio. Lat.—“Without hatred.”—I speak sine odio—I feel divested of all animosity.

Sine qua non. Lat.—“A thing without which another cannot be.”—An indispensable condition. An ingredient absolutely necessary.

Sine virtute esse amicitia nullo pacto potest; quæ autem inter bonos amicitia dicitur, hæc inter malos factio est. Lat. SALLUST.—“There can be no friendship without virtue, for that intimacy, which amongst good men is called friendship, becomes faction, when it subsists amongst the unprincipled.”

Singula de nobis anni prædantur euntes. Lat. HORACE.—“Each passing year robs us of a share of what we possessed.”—Talents, beauty, and health, the most valuable possessions of human nature, all fall a prey to the ravages of time.

Singula quæque teneant locum sortita decenter. Lat. HORACE.—“Let each thing keep the place which it occupies with propriety.”—The poet is instructing the play-wright, not to go into any deviation from propriety of character. The phrase is also used in a political sense, to recommend that all things may preserve their due place and order.

Si nous n'avions point de défauts, nous ne prendrions pas tant de plaisir à en remarquer dans les autres.

FR. ROCHEFOUCAULT.—“If we had no defects in ourselves, we should not take so much pleasure in remarking those of others.”—It is the consciousness of our own weakness that forms the ground of satisfaction, on seeing others brought down to the same level.

Si nous ne nous flattions pas nous-mêmes, la flatterie des autres ne nous pourroit nuire. FR. BOUTHOURS.—“If we did not flatter ourselves, the flattery of others could do us no harm.”—Their incense would be thrown away, if it was not grateful to our self-love.

Si parva licet componere magnis. LAT. VIRGIL.—“If small things may be compared with great.”
If I may be permitted to use such a comparison.

Si qua vis apte nubere, nube pari. LAT. OVID.—“If you wish fitly to marry, then marry your equal.”—The Poet alludes to an equality of years, but it may also refer to an equality of conditions, which contributes much to the happiness of the marriage state, by precluding that vain intolerance too often assumed by the party of higher wealth, rank, or pretensions.

Si quæris monumentum circumspice. LAT.—“If you seek my monument, look around.”—This is the epitaph of the architect, (Sir C. WREN) in the church of St. PAUL, which he designed and erected. If you question my merit, behold my works.

— Si quid novisti rectius istis Candidus imparti, si non his utere mecum.

LAT. HORACE.
“If you know of any thing more proper than these (precepts,) be so candid as to communicate cate your knowledge—if not, make use of what I have furnished.”—Thus translated:

———If a better system’s thine,
Impart it freely, or make use of mine.”

Si sit prudentia. Lat.—“If there be but prudence.”
Motto of Lord AUCKLAND.

Sit mihi quod nunc est, etiam minus, ut mihi vivam
Quod superest vivam, quid superesse valent dii.
LAT. HORACE.

“Let me, I pray, possess what I now have, or even less, that I may enjoy myself for my remaining days, if Heaven grants any to remain.”

Sit mihi fas audita loqui. Lat.—“Let me have permission to state what I have heard.”

Sit piger ad pœnas princeps, ad premia velox. Lat.
OVID.—“A monarch should be slow to punish, and swift to reward.”

Sit tibi terra levis. Lat.—“Light lie the earth upon thy grave.”—This was the wish of the Romans to a departed friend, from an idea that the clay which covered the guilty dead, was heavy, painful, and oppressive.

———Si veris magna paratur
Fama bonis, & si successu nuda remota
Inspicitur virtus, quicquid laudamus in ullo
Majorum, fortuna fuit. Lat. LUCAN.

“If honest fame awaits upon the truly good—if setting aside the ultimate success, virtue and valour are alone to be considered, then was his fortune as proud as any to be found in the records of our ancestry.”—This is the poetic incense offered at the shrine of Pompey. It has been kindled anew, and applied to several unfortunate generals, who could not command, though they had deserved success.

*Si vis incolumem, si vis te reddere sanum,
Curas tolle graves, irasci crede profanum.*

Lat.

“If you wish to preserve yourself in health and safety, avoid all serious cares, and never give way to vehement passion.”—This very useful precept has been translated into somewhat homely verse, as follows:

“If you would safe and happy be, abstain
From anxious cares—think anger too, profane.”

———Si vis me flere, dolendum est

Primum tibi ipsi.

Lat. HORACE.

“If you wish me to weep, you must feel first yourself.”—This was the precept of the didactic to the tragic poet. It is equally applicable to the actor in tragedy.

———Si volet usus

Quem penes arbitrium est & jus & norma loquendi.

Lat. HORACE.

“If usage so wills it, within whose power is the rule and law of speech.”—The use and pronunciation of particular words and expressions, must be governed by the fashion of the day.

Soi-disant. Fr.—“Self-called.”—The soi-disant Marquis—the self-named Marquis.

Sola juvat virtus. Lat.—“Virtue alone assists me.”
Motto of the Sc. Baron BLANTYRE.

Solamen miseris socios habuisse doloris.

Lat. VIRGIL.

“It is a comfort to the wretched to have companions in grief.”—This maxim is true only in a certain degree. It may be admitted, however, that man never suffers so much, as when he suffers alone.—The sense of sympathy, under other circumstances, tends to diminish the suffering of the individual.
I that

SO———SO

Sola nobilitas virtus. Lat.—“Virtue alone is true nobility.”—Motto of the Marquis ABERCORN.

Sola salus servire Deo. Lat.—“Our only safety is in serving God.”—Motto of the Irish Earl of Ross.

Sola virtus invicta. Lat.—“Virtue alone is invincible.”—Motto of the Duke of NORFOLK.

Solitudinem faciunt, pacem appellant. Lat. TACITUS.—“They make a desert, and call that tranquillity.”—They exterminate a people, and then say that peace is restored.—It will be for posterity to record that this barbarous solecism was acted upon, in various places, at the latter end of the eighteenth century.

Solvit ad diem. Lat. Law Term.—“He paid it to the day.”—This is a plea to an action of debt on a bond or penal bill, by which it is alleged that the money was paid on the day assigned.

Sol occubuit; nox nulla secuta est. Lat.—“The sun set, but no night followed.”—An ingenious stroke of flattery addressed to the successor to a throne. The meaning is, “The sun of your father’s glory is set, but we feel not the loss, whilst enlightened by your radiance.”

Solvuntur tabulæ. Lat.—“The bills are dismissed.” The defendant is acquitted.

Soyez ferme. Fr.—“Be firm.”—Persevere. The motto of the Irish Earl of CARRICK.

Spargere

Spargere voces in vulgum ambiguas. Lat. VIRGIL.

"To scatter ambiguous sounds amongst the crowd."—To circulate deceptive rumours amongst the populace. This is an imputation frequently attached by either of two contending parties.

Spectas & tu spectabere. Lat.—"You see, and you shall be seen."—You witness here the exhibition of character, but if your faults deserve it, you shall be exhibited in your turn.

Spectatum admissi risum teneatis amici? Lat. HORACE.—"Can even the friends who are admitted to see (the picture) refrain from laughter?"—Must not the risible muscles, even of partiality, give way at an exhibition so ridiculous.

Spectemur agendo. Lat.—"Let us be tried by our actions."—Let us be examined by our conduct. The motto of Earl BEAULIEU, and of the Irish Viscount CLIFDEN.

Spem bonam certamque domum reporto. Lat.—"I bring home with me a good and certain hope."—The prospect which I am to open is highly soothing and encouraging.

Spem pretio non emo. Lat. TERENCE.—"I do not give prompt payment for hope."—I do not annex any value to idle expectations.

Sperate & vosmet rebus servate secundis. Lat. VIRGIL.—"Live in hope, and reserve yourselves for more prosperous circumstances."—An appeal, from the only source of consolation left, to companions in severe adversity.

Sperat

*Sperat infestis, metuit secundis
Alteram sortem, bene preparatum Pectus.*

Lat. HORACE.

"The breast which is well prepared, hopes every thing in adversity, and fears every thing in prosperity."—The philosophic mind can buoy up distress by hope, and curb the insolence of success, by reflecting on its instability.

Sperate miseri, cavete felices. Lat.—"Let the wretched live in hope, and the happy be upon their guard."—The mutability of fortune is such, that the lowest have something to expect, and the highest something to fear.

—————Speravimus ista

Dum fortuna fuit.

Lat. VIRGIL.

"We too have hoped for such things when favoured by fortune."—We presumed as far in our better days.

Sperne voluptates—nocet empti dolore voluptas. Lat. HORACE.—"Despise all vain enjoyment—It is injurious when purchased at the price of pain." The pursuit of pleasure to excess, not only takes away the faculty of enjoyment, but leaves a permanent sting behind.

Spero meliora. Lat.—"I hope for better times or things."—Motto of Sc. Viscount STORMONT, and Sc. Baron TORPHICHEN.

Spes durat avorum. Lat.—"The hope of my ancestors continues."—Motto of Earl ROCHFORD.

Spes mea in Deo. Lat.—"My hope is in God."—Motto of Lord TREYNHAM.

Spes mea Christus. Lat.—"Christ is my hope."—Motto of the Ir. Baron LUCAN.

Spes

Spes tutissima cœlis. Lat.—“The safest hope is in Heaven.”—Motto of the Irish Earl of KINGSTON, Spretæ injuria formæ. Lat. VIRGIL.—“The insult offered to her despised beauty.”—This is spoken of the resentment of Juno, in consequence of the well-known judgment of Paris. The intrigues of courts, where women bear sway, has made it a phrase of modern application.

Stans pede in uno. Lat. HORACE.—“Standing upon one leg.”—A work composed stans pede in uno—with no more than an ordinary degree of exertion.

Stant cætera tigno. Lat.—“The rest stand on a beam.”—Motto of Earl ABOYNE.

Stare decisis & non quietâ movere. Lat. Law Maxim.
“To stand by things as decided, and not to disturb those which are tranquil.”—It is advisable to act upon the ground of precedent, and to resist all innovation.

Stare super vias antiquas. Lat.—“To stand firm on the old paths,”—and not give way to any bold novelties.

Statim daret, ne differento videretur negare. Lat. CORN. NEP.—“He would give at once, lest by delaying he should seem to deny the favour.”—This language is used by the historian of Themistocles. It is in other words the proverb “Bis dat, &c.”—He gives twice, who gives soon.”

Stat magni nominis umbra. Lat. LUCAN.—“He stands the shadow of a mighty name.”—He exhibits only a faint shadow of his former greatness.

Stat

ST———ST

Stat pro ratione voluntas. Lat.—“My will stands in the place of reason.”—Applied to a despot who ordains that his caprices should be obeyed as law.

Stat promissa fides. Lat.—“The promised faith remains.”—Motto of the Sc. Baron LINDÖRES.

*Stat sua cuique dies; breve & irreparabile tempus
Omnibus est vitæ, sed famam extendere factis
Hoc virtutis opus.* Lat. VIRGIL.

“Every man has his brief portion of life, and of time, which cannot be recalled; but it belongs to virtue (or valour) alone to extend our fame by our deeds.”—Superior genius, or virtue can overleap the brief span of human life, and consecrate the name of their possessor to immortality.

Status quo. Lat.—“The state in which,” or status quo ante bellum.—“The state in which both parties were before the war.”—This is used in speaking of belligerent powers when they agree, as a preliminary to peace, to restore their conquests, to return to that condition in which the parties respectively stood before the commencement of hostilities.

Stavo bene, mai per stare migliore sto qui. Italian.—“I was well, but by endeavouring to be better I am here.”—The epitaph on an hypochondriac, who, though well in health, was not easy until he had quacked himself into his grave.—Used to mark the discontent of those who are dissatisfied when in an eligible situation.

Stemmata quid faciunt, quid prodest, Pontice, longo Sanguine censer. Lat. JUVENAL.

“Of what avail are pedigrees, or to derive one’s blood from a long train of lofty ancestors?”—

Without

ST———ST

Without virtue or genius what are the boasted advantages of high birth?

Stimulos dedit æmula virtus. Lat. LUCAN.—“He was spurred on by rival valour.”—An honourable emulation is the best incentive to acts of greatness.

Stratum super stratum. Lat.—“One layer upon another.”—Beds of matter ranged alternately one upon the other.

Studiis & rebus honestis. Lat.—“By honest pursuits and studies.”—Motto of Lord ASHBURTON.

Stultitiam patiuntur opes. Lat.—“Riches will bear out folly.”—The rich fool is suffered to play such pranks with impunity, as if played off by one in an inferior station, would meet, not only with derision, but punishment.

Stultitiam simulare loco sapientia summa est. Lat. Prov.—“To assume the garb of Folly is, in certain situations, the most consummate wisdom.”—Such was the conduct of the first Brutus, who, by affecting to be mad, eluded the vengeance of Tarquin, and ultimately succeeded in expelling that tyrant.

Stultorum incurata malus pudor ulcera celat. Lat. HORACE.—“The false shame of fools makes them hide their uncured sores.”—It is the height of folly to conceal our faults from those, from whom we may derive amendment.

Stultum est timere quod vitare non potes. Lat. SYRUS.—“It is idle to dread that which you cannot avoid.”—In such a case, instead of giving way to fear, we should summon all our fortitude.

Stultus

Stultus labor est ineptiarum. Lat. MARTIAL.—

“The labour is silly which is bestowed on trifles.”—Industry is respectable only when it is applied to useful objects: it degenerates and becomes ridiculous, when it is directed to the collection of cockle-shells, butterflies, and such objects as are wholly destitute of profit and of use.

Stultus, nisi quod ipse facit nil rectum putat. Lat.

Proverb.—“The fool thinks nothing well done but what is done by himself.”—There is often a combination of selfish pride with folly, which leads the person to believe, that he is not only wise, but wise alone.

Sua cuique voluptas. Lat. Proverb.—“Each man has his own pleasure.”—Every person has a taste for some particular enjoyment.

Sua quisque exempla debet æquo animo pati. Lat.

PHÆDRUS.—“Every man is bound to tolerate the act of which he has himself given the example.”—No man can fairly complain of that, as an injustice, of which he has himself furnished a previous specimen.

Suave est ex magno tollere acervo. Lat. HORACE.—

“It is pleasant to take from a great heap.”—The poet speaks sarcastically of a miser, whose perverse delight it is to take from a large hoard the little which he dares to use.

*Suave mari magno, turbantibus æquora ventis,
E terra magnum alterius spectare laborem.*

Lat. LUCRETII.

“It is pleasant when the sea runs high to view from land the great distress of another.”—It is not uncommon for men to enjoy the distresses of others, when they can indulge the sense of their own security.

Suaviter

Suaviter in modo, fortiter in re. Lat.—“Gentle in the manner, but vigorous in the deed.”—In affairs of importance, outward complacency should be joined with inward firmness.—This has been adopted as a motto by the Ir. Lord NEWBOROUGH.

Sub cruce candida. Lat.—“Under the fair cross.”—Motto of Lord LOVELL.

Sub hoc signo vinces. Lat.—“Under this sign thou shalt conquer.”—Alluding to the cross which appeared in the air, as the signal of victory, to CONSTANTINE.—Motto of the Ir. Viscount DE VESCI.

Sublatâ causa, tollitur effectus. Lat.—“When the cause is removed the effect must cease.”—The efficient cause of a distemper in the human frame, for instance, being done away, its effects must be expected speedily to terminate.

Sublimi feriam sidera vertice. Lat. HORACE.—“My lofty head shall strike the stars.”—This flight of the poet is now employed as a common place pleasantry.

Sub pœnâ. Law Lat.—“Under a penalty.”—The name given to a writ for the summoning of witnesses.

Sub silentio. Lat.—“In silence.”—The matter passed sub silentio—without any notice being taken.

Substantia prior & dignior est accidente. Lat. Law Maxim.—“The substance should be considered as prior to, and of more weight than the accident.”—No judgment, it is held, shall be arrested in any court of record for any defect in point of form, or unless it be a matter of substance, on which the Judges of those courts are to decide.

Succedaneum

Succedaneum. Lat.—“A substitute.”—A matter substituted.—Impudence is frequently used as a succedaneum for argument.

Suggestio falsi. Lat.—“The suggestion of a falsehood.”—This and the suppressio veri, or “suppression of the truth,” are the strongest charges which can be made against a public orator or writer.

Sui cuique morēs fingunt fortunam.

Lat. CORN. NEPOS.

“His own morals (or manners) shape the fortune of every man.”—Thus the English proverb, “manners make the man.”

Sui generis. Lat.—“Of its own kind.”—Not to be classed under any ordinary description.

Suivez raison. Fr.—“Follow reason.”—Motto of the Ir. Earl ALTAMONT, Viscount MONTAGUE, and Lord KILMAINE.

Sum quod eris, fui quod sis. Lat.—“I am what thou shalt be, as I have been what thou now art.”—An admonition frequently met with as a sepulchral inscription.

Sumite materiam vestris qui scribitis æquam

Viribus

Lat. HORACE.

“Let those who write fix on a subject to which their force is equal.”—Every author should look to his mental power, and consider whether it be equal to the task which he is about to undertake.

Summam nec metuas diem, nec optes. Lat. MARTIAL.

—“You should neither fear nor wish for your last day.”—The philosophic mind neither timidly shrinks from death, nor desperately wishes to accelerate its approach.

Summum bonum. Lat.—“The chief good.”—The object of attainment most desirable, which some of the ancient philosophers stated to be pleasure, and others virtue.

*Summum crede nefas, animum præferre pudori
Et propter vitam vivendi perdere causas.*

Lat. JUVENAL.

“Believe it to be the last of all infamies, to prefer your existence to your honour, or for the sake of life, to lose every inducement to live.”

Summum jus, summa injuria. Lat.—“Strictness of law is sometimes of the greatest injustice.”—A too rigorous interpretation of the law is not infrequently productive of results which do not accord with equity.

Sunt lacrymæ rerum & mentem mortalia tangunt. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Tears are due to human misery, and the woes of mortality affect the mind.”—Every virtuous mind, on hearing of such calamities, must be touched by sympathy.

Sunt superis sua jura. Lat. OVID.—“The gods or supreme powers have their own laws.”—This is sometimes quoted in political discussions, to intimate that the higher powers often overlook those duties and promises, which are supposed to be binding on the lower orders of the community.

Suo Marte. Lat.—“By his own exertion.”—He performed it suo Marte—by his own unaided skill and ability.

Suo sibi gladio hunc jugulo. Lat. TERENCE.—“With his own sword do I stab this man.”—I defeat him, figuratively, and in argument, with the weapons and the admissions which he has himself furnished.

Superanda omnis fortuna ferendo est. Lat. VIRGIL.
—"Every misfortune is to be subdued by patience."

Supersedeas. Law Lat.—"You may remove or set aside."—A writ to stay proceedings.

Super subjectam materiam. Lat.—"On the matter submitted."—A lawyer is not responsible for his opinion, when it is given super subjectam materiam—on the circumstances as they are laid before him by his client.

Suppresso veri. Lat.—See suggestio falsi.

Suspectum sempe invisumque dominantibus qui proximus destinaretur. Lat. TACITUS.—"The next in succession is ever hated and suspected by those who are actually in possession of the supreme power."—This can only apply to those governments where the persons, in possession of absolute power, fear that it may be wrested from them by violent means. They of course, in the language of our poet,

"Bear, like the Turk, no brother near the throne."
POPE.

Suum cuique. Lat.—"Let each man have his own."—Let the laws of property be strictly observed.

Suum cuique incommodum ferendum est, potius quam de ulterius commodis detrahendum. Lat. CICERO.
—"Every man should bear his own grievances and inconveniencies, rather than detract from, or abridge the comforts of another."

Suus cuique mos. Lat. TERENCE.—"Each man has his particular habit."—In opinions and habits, there is a permanent diversity, and every person should in fairness be left to the free exercise of his own.

T.

Tabula rasa. Lat.—“A shaved, or smoothed tablet.”—His mind is a tabula rasa—it is a mere blank. The idea is taken from the waxed tablets of the ancients, on which they made their memoranda with a sharp instrument, called a stylus, with the other flatted end of which they afterwards erased what they had written.

Tacent, satis laudant. Lat. TERENCE:—“Their silence is sufficient praise.”—It is ample proof of worth, when the censorious have nothing to alledge.

Tâche sans tâche. Fr.—“A work without a stain.” The motto of the Sc. Earl of NORTHESK.

Tacitum vivit sub pectore vulnus. Lat. VIRGIL.—“The secret wound still lives within the breast.”—The injury is not forgotten, but is treasured up for an opportunity of revenge.

———Tale tuum carmen nobis, divine Poeta, Quale sopor fessis. Lat. VIRGIL.
“As pleasing are thy verses to us, divine Poet, as sleep is to the wearied, &c.”—This compliment, for such it is meant, in the original, is sometimes ironically turned against a different description of Poets, who are “Sleepless themselves, to give their readers sleep!”

Talibus ex adyto dictis cumæa Sybilla
Horrendas canit ambages, antroque remugit,
Obscuris vera involvens. Lat. VIRGIL.
“In words like these the Sybil utters her fearful oracles of dubious import, and sounds them forth from her cavern, blending truth with obscurity.”— obscurity."—This quotation is frequently used to reprobate a style which is at once pompous and ambiguous.

Tam deest avaro quod habet, quam quod non habet.

Lat. SYRUS.—“The miser is as much in want of that which he has, as of that which he has not!”

Tam Marte quam Minerva. Lat.—“As much by Mars as by Minerva.”—He has succeeded, “tam Marte quam Minerva,”—equally by his courage and his genius.

Tandem fit surculus arbor. Lat.—“A shoot at length becomes a tree.”—Motto of the Marquis of WATERFORD.

Tantæne animis cœlestibus iræ. Lat. VIRGIL.—

“Can heavenly minds such anger entertain?”
Is it possible for exalted minds to descend to such low resentments?

Tant mieux. Fr.—“So much the better.”

Tanto buon, che val niente. Prov. Ital.—“So good, that he is good for nothing.”—Applied to that weak good nature which is injurious to the possessor, without being of advantage to any other person.

Tanto homini fidus, tantæ virtutis amator. Lat.—

“A faithful friend to so great a man, and a steady admirer of such distinguished excellence.”

Tant pis. Fr.—“So much the worse.”

Tantum de medio sumptis accedit honoris. Lat. HO-

RACE.—“So much of honour is due to subjects taken from middle or common life.”—This is a praise very justly granted to the authors of such plays as “George Barnwell,” or, the z 3 “Gamester,”

"Gamester," where the sentiments come home to every man's business and bosom, as contradistinguished to those, where Emperors, Queens, and Heroes, fill the scene; and whose sorrows abound for the moment, but in a moment are forgotten.

Tantum se fortunæ permittunt, etiam ut naturam dediscant. Lat. QUINT. CURT.—"They give themselves up so much to fortune, as even to forget their nature."

Tantum series juncturaque pollet. Lat. HORACE.—
"Of so much force is system and connection."
—A less perfect book, if stamped with these characters, will please more than one of superior quality, in which the principles are scattered, and the reasoning disjointed.

——— Tarde, quæ credita lædunt, credimus. Lat. OVID.—"We are slow to believe that which if believed would hurt our feelings."

Tel brille au second rang qui s'eclipse au premier. Fr.—
"A man may shine in the second rank, who would be eclipsed in the first."—Many who conceive themselves fitted for first-rate characters in life, would in fact appear to more advantage in subordinate situations.

——— *Tel en vous lisant admire chaque trait
Qui dans le fond de l'ame & vous craint & vous hait.* Fr. BOILEAU,
"Such a one, on reading your work, admires every stroke, but from the bottom of his soul he fears and hates you."—The living satyrist excites more of fear than of regard.

Tel maître, tel valet. Fr. Prov.—"Like master, like man."

T 245

Tetras opais mangeti Dm. Gr. Tetras oron macron Bion.—

“To see the end of a long life.”—This was the wish of Chilias, one of the celebrated seven Wise Men of Greece.

Tel vous semble applaudir, qui vous raille & vous joue ; Aimez qu'on vous conseille, & non pas qu'on vous loue. Fr. BOILEAU.

“That man appears to applaud you, who in fact makes you his jest and his sport. Let your inclination be to those who advise, rather than to those who praise your conduct.”—This is an advice which cannot be too frequently repeated to men in power and opulence. Their idle advisers are many, their serious counsellors but few.

Telum imbelle sine ictu. Lat. VIRGIL.—“A feeble weapon thrown without effect.”—Applied metaphorically to a weak or imbecile argument.

Templa quam dilecta. Lat.—“Temples how beloved.”—The motto of the Marquis of Buckingham. This is a poor pun on the family name of Temple.

Tempora mutantur & nos mutamur in illis. Lat.—

“The times are perpetually changing, and we change with the times.”—There is nothing fixed or stable, either in situations or opinions.

“Men change with fortune, Manners change with times,

“Tenets with books, and principles with times.”

*Tempore ducetur longo fortasse cicatrix
Horrent admotas vulnera cruda manus.*

Lat. OVID,

“The wound will perhaps be covered by the process of time, but it shrinks from the touch, whilst it is yet recent.”—This is figuratively applied to sorrow, in the first burst of which, it will reject the most friendly appeal; some time should therefore be suffered to elapse before any attempt is made to administer consolation.

Tempus edax rerum. Lat. HORACE.—“Time that devours all things.”

Tempus omnia revelat. Lat.—“Time reveals all things.”—Few things, these two proverbs say, escape the disclosure of time, and nothing its ravages.

————— Tenet insanabile multos

Scribendi cacoethes, ægroque in corde senescit.

“Many have an incurable itch for writing, which takes full possession of their disordered faculties.”—The race has been numerous in every age of those

“————— who in despite

“Of nature, and their stars, will write.”

Teres atque rotundus. Lat. HORACE.—“A man smooth and round in himself.”—One whose conduct, like a polished globe, can surmount each difficulty, and defy each asperity.

Terræ filius. Lat.—“A son of the earth.”—An Oxford phrase, signifying a man of no birth, Terra nunc educat malos homines, atque pusillos.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“The earth now maintains as before, both bad and weak men.”—The condition of the human species in all ages, is nearly the same.

Tertium quid. Lat.—“A third something.”—Struck out by the collision of two opposite forces or principles.

T E ——— T O

Τῆς Φύσεως γραμματεὺς ἦν, τοῖς καλάμῳ ἀποβρέχων εἰς νοῦν. Gr. SUIDAS. Tes Phuskos grammateus en, ton calaman apobrexon eis noun.—"He was the writer or interpreter of nature, dipping his pen into Mind."

Tibi nullum periculum esse perspicio, quod quidem se-junctum sit ab omnium interitu. Lat. CICERO.—
"I can see no danger to which you are personally exposed, separately and apart from the destruction of us all."

Tiens ta foy. Fr.—"Keep thy faith."—Motto of Earl BATHURST.

Timeo Danqos & dona ferentes. Lat. VIRGIL.—
"I fear the Greeks, even when they offer presents."—I am on my guard against an enemy, and particularly when he proffers kindness.

Timet pudorem. Lat.—"He fears shame."—Motto of the Irish Visc. DOWNE.

Timidus se vocat cautum, parcum sordidus. Lat. Prov.
"The cowardly man says, that he is cautious, the miser, that he is sparing."—We have each an excuse, or palliation for our respective faults.

Tirer le diable par le queue. Fr. Prov.—"To pull the devil by the tail."—To be put to one's shifts for a livelihood.

Toga virilis. Lat.—"The manly robe."—This was the dress which the Roman youth assumed on reaching a certain period of life. He has assumed the toga virilis—he has entered into a state of manhood.

Τὸ ὅλον. Gr. To holon.—"The whole."—Unity.

Τὸ καλον. Gr. To kalon.—The summum bonum—the supreme good.

T O ——— T O

Tolle jocos—non est jocus esse malignum. Lat.—

“Away with such jests—there is no jest in being malignant.”—This is properly applied to that sarcastic merriment, which wounds the peace or feelings of the individual, for the purpose of giving entertainment to the many.

Tolle moras—semper nocuit differre paratis. Lat.

LUCAN.—“Away with all delays—it is even injurious to postpone, when you are in readiness.”—The application is in particular to war. When you are ready, you should allow the enemy no time for preparation.

Tolluntur in altum

Ut lapsu graviore ruant. Lat. CLAUDIAN.

“They are raised to such a height, that they may tumble with a heavier fall.”—Some men seem to have been raised to the summit of their ambition, only to aggravate the subsequent reverses which Providence has doomed them to experience.

To agenor. Gr. To prepon.—“That which is decorous.”—Decency. Decorum.

Tot homines quot sententiæ. Lat.—“So many men so many opinions.”—There will be as many different suffrages as heads.

Toties quoties. Lat.—“As many times as, then so often.”—A term frequently used in law proceedings, as thus:—if A. B. commit a certain offence, he shall be fined L. 10, and so on, toties quoties, viz. on every repetition of the offence, he shall incur a similar penalty.

Toto cælo. Lat.—“By the whole heavens.”—The men differ toto cælo—their dispositions are as opposite as the two poles.

Totus

T O ——— T O

Totus in toto, & totus in qualibet parte. Lat.
 “Whole in itself, and whole in every part.”—
 This was the definition given by the ancient scholiasts of the human mind.

Totus mundus agit histrionem. Lat.—“All the world acts the player.”—All the world’s a stage.

Totus teres atque rotundus. Lat.—“Every way round and smooth.”—A man so polished, as to roll through the world unbiassed by any asperity.

Toujours prêt. Fr.—“Always ready.”—Motto of the Ir. M. of ANTRIM & E. CLANWILLIAM.

Toujours propice. Fr.—“Ever propitious.”—Motto of the Ir. Viscount CREMORNE.

Tourner casaque. Fr.—“To turn a man’s coat.”—
 This in former times was regarded as a disgrace!

Tous frais faits. Fr.—“All expences paid.”

*Tous les hommes sont foux, & malgré leur soins
 Ne different entr’eux, que du plus ou du moins.*
 Fr. BOILEAU.

“All men are fools, and with every effort they can only differ in the degree.”—There will only be the more foolish and the less foolish.

Tout bien ou rien. Fr.—“The whole or nothing.”
 Motto of Earl GAINSBOROUGH.

Tout éloge imposteur blessé une ame sincère. Fr. BOI-LEAU.—“Nothing wounds a feeling mind more than praise unjustly bestowed.”

Tout le monde se plaint de sa mémoire, & personne ne plaint de son jugement. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT, —“Every man complains of his memory, but no man complains of his own judgment.”— However great the cause may be, our pride will not suffer us to impeach the latter.

———Trabit

———Trahit ipse furoris
Impetus, & visum est lenti quæssisse nocentem.

Lat. LUCAN.

“They are borne away by the violence of their rage, and they think it a waste of time to enquire who are the guilty.”—This is a forcible description of popular and indiscriminate vengeance.

Trahit sua quemque voluptas. Lat. VIRG.—“Each man is led by his own peculiar taste or pleasure.”—A remark on the ever-prevailing diversity of tastes and passions.

Transcat in exemplum. Lat.—“May it pass into an example.”—May an act so meritorious stand recorded as a precedent for others to follow.

Tribus Anticyris caput insanabile. Lat. HORACE.—“A head incurable by three Anticyræ.”—The island of Anticyra, in the Archipelago, was famous for the growth of bellebore, which is administered to purge the head.—The phrase, therefore, means an incurable madman.

Triumpho morte tam vita. Lat.—“I triumph in death, as in life.”—Motto of the Ir. Viscount ALLEN.

Tros, Tyriusve mihi nullo discrimine agetur. Lat. VIRGIL.—“The Trojan and the Tyrian shall be treated by me without distinction.”—I profess no attachment to either of the contending parties, and shall of course speak of them with due impartiality.

Traditur dies die. Lat. HORACE.—“One day is pressed onward by another.”—The progress of time, however neglected by man, is silent and irresistible.

Tua

TU——TU

Tua res agitur, paries cum proximus ardet. Lat. HORACE.—“Your affairs are at stake, when the next house is on fire.”—We should remember, that the calamity which afflicts our neighbour, most seriously threatens ourselves.

Tuebor. Lat.—“I will defend.”—The motto of Viscount TORRINGTON.

Tu ne cede malis, sed contra audentior ito. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Do not yield to misfortunes, but meet them on the contrary with fortitude.”—You can only subdue adversity, by bearing up against it.—The four first words form the motto of the Ir. Baron MILTON.

Tuo tibi judicio est utendum. Virtutis & vitiorum grave ipsius conscientia pondus est; quâ sublata jacent omnia. Lat. CICERO.—“You must use your own judgment on yourself. Great is the weight of conscience in deciding on your own virtues and vices: if that be taken away, all is lost.”

Turpe est aliud loqui, aliud sentire; quanto turpius aliud scribere, aliud sentire. Lat. SENECA.—“It is dishonourable to speak one thing, and to think another; but how much more base is it to write that which is contrary to a man’s real sentiments?”—The act of writing is of greater deliberation, and of broader tendency. An attempt to deceive in this way, is therefore more highly criminal. If this maxim were properly felt by party-writers, the world would not be inundated by such a torrent of falsehoods.

Turpe est in patria peregrinari, & in iis rebus quæ ad patriam pertinent hospitem esse. Lat. MANUTIUS.—“It is shameful for a man to live as a stranger in his own country, and to be uninformed formed of her affairs and interests."—This is a maxim which should be inculcated to all young travellers. Did they previously make themselves informed of the affairs of their own country, they would be likely to reap something different from a harvest of follies on their foreign tour.

T U ——— T U

Turpe est laudari ab illaudatis. Lat.—"It is degrading to be commended by those, who are not themselves worthy of praise."

Turpe est viro, id in quo quotidie versatur ignorare. Lat.—"It is shameful that a man should be ignorant of that, in which he is every day employed."

Turpis & ridicula res est elementarius senex: juveni parandum, seni utendum est. Lat. SENECA.—"Nothing can be so ridiculous or absurd as to see an old man in his rudiments. It is for youth to acquire, and for age to employ those acquirements."

Tussis pro crepitu. Lat.—"A cough which is feigned to disguise a f——t."—A poor pretext to cover a foul design.

Tuta timens. Lat.—"Fearing even that which is safe."—Men, who are at the pinnacle of fortune, should know that they are not out of the reach of its vicissitudes.

Tutor & ultor. Lat.—"The protector and the avenger."—A compliment of little meaning, but which is generally found on the medals inscribed to a successful prince or potentate.

Tuum est. Lat.—"It is your own."—Motto of Earl COWPER.

Uberrima

U.

Uberrima fides. Lat. Phr.—“A full growth of confidence.”—An implicit faith or reliance.

*Uberibus semper lacrymis semperque paratis
In statione sua, atque expectantibus illam Quo jubeat manare.* Lat.
“She has an inexhaustible fund of tears ready to at a call, and the flow of which she has only direct.”—A man’s tears, says the ingenious Mrs. Inchbald, seem to come from a distance—those of a woman drop in upon us as ready visitants.

Ubicunque ars ostentatur, veritas abesse videtur. Lat.
“Wherever art is displayed, truth seems to be wanting.”—We seldom witness a laborious exertion to excite interest or to give pleasure, that we do not begin to doubt the reality of the interest or pleasure which is thus forced upon us.

Ubi lapsus?—Quid feci? Lat.—“Where am I fallen?—What have I done?”—Motto of Viscount COURTENAY.

Ubi major pars est, ibi est totum. Lat. Law Maxim.
“Where the greater part is, there by law is the whole.”—The only way of determining the acts of many, is by the major part, or the majority; as the majority in parliament enact laws, &c.

Ubi mel, ibi apes. Lat. PLAUTUS.—“Where there is honey, there will be bees.”—Where there is a pleasing attraction, there will be no want of followers.

Ubi

UB———UB

*Ubi plura nitent in carmine non ego paucis
Offendar maculis, quas aut incuria fudit,
Aut humana parum cavit natura.*

Lat. HORACE.

"Where there are many beauties in a work, I shall not cavil at a few faults, proceeding either from negligence, or from the imperfection of our nature."—In a great work of general merit, candour requires that we should excuse any small, or partial defect.

Ubique patriam reminisci. Lat.—"Every where to remember our country."—Motto of Lord MALMESBURY.

Ubi reddunt ova columbæ. Lat. JUV.—"Where the pigeons lay their eggs."—This at Rome, was in the interstices under the roofs of houses, in the garrets of which then, as now, poets had that honourable residence, which by some is called, "the first floor down the chimney," and by others, "the roof of eminence," and still more generally, "the Attic story."

Ubi supra. Lat.—"Where above mentioned."—A reference to a preceding quotation.

*Ubi velis nolunt, ubi nolis volunt ultro,
Concessâ pudet ire viâ.*

Lat. TERENCE.

"When you are willing, they are disinclined—when you are averse, they are willing. They are loth to tread in that path where it is permitted."—This is rather a severe description of the caprices of woman. It has been thus translated:—

"You would, they woult, when you would not, they would ;

"Consent does freeze, denial fires their blood."

Udum

Udum & molle lutum es; nunc nunc properandus & acri

Fingendus sine fine rotâ.

Lat. PERSIUS.

"Thou art now but soft and moist clay, and therefore instantly and incessantly to be formed by the glowing wheel."—The allusion is to the potter's wheel, and the application is to the mind of youth, which should be formed with assiduity, whilst it is tender, pliant, and susceptible.

Ultima ratio regum. Lat.—"The last reasoning of kings."—An appeal to violence and hostility. This inscription, if we rightly recollect, was ordered to be graven by Louis XIV. on his cannon.

—Ultima semper

Expectanda dies homini est, dicique beatus.

Ante obitum nemo & suprema funera debet.

Lat. OVID.

"Man should ever look to his last day, and no man should be accounted happy before his decease, or until his funeral rites are performed." Such is the instability of human affairs, that no man should be rated as fortunate, until death has precluded any further possibility of change.

Ult. ultimus. Lat.—"The last."

Una salus victis nullam sperare salutem. Lat. VIRG.

"The only hope for the conquered, is to expect no safety."—The despair of the vanquished sometimes brings about a relief not to be effected by any other means.

Unde habeas quærit nemo, sed oportet habere. Lat.

JUVENAL.—"No man enquires how you have got your wealth, but it is necessary to possess it."^{non}

A A

it."—All men pay respect to riches, without enquiring very scrupulously into the means by which they have been obtained.

Unde tibi frontem libertatemque parentis,

Cum facias pejora senex. Lat. JUVENAL.

"When do you derive the power and privilege of a parent, when you, though an old man, fall into greater errors."—How can you presume to chide your juniors, when you, though advanced in years, set the vicious example.

Un enfant en ouvrant ses yeux doit voir la patrie, & jusqu'à la mort ne voit qu'elle. Fr. ROUSSEAU.

"The infant on first opening his eyes, ought to see his country, and to the hour of his death never to lose sight of it."—The love of our country should be implanted early, and nourished through life.

Unguibus & rostro. Lat.—"With talons and beak."

He fought it unguibus & rostro—tooth and nail.

Unguis in ulcero. Lat. CICERO.—"A nail in the wound."

—This strong phrase was applied by the orator to the conspirator Cataline.—"Your country," he would have said in a periphrase, "has received a dangerous wound, into which you, vulture like, infix your talons, for the purpose of irritating and keeping it open."

Un homme d'esprit seroit souvent bien embarrassé sans la compagnie des fots. Fr. ROCHEFOUCAULT.

"A man of wit may be often much embarrassed without the company of fools."—He would lack a butt for his sarcasms.

Un homme toujours satisfait de lui-même, peu souvent l'est des autres, rarement on l'est de lui. Fr.

ROCHEFOUCAULT.—"A man who is always well well satisfied with himself, is seldom so with others, and others are as little pleased with him." A man who has an overweening conceit of himself, is too proud to be pleased with the efforts of others, and by that pride, is sure to excite a general disgust against himself.

Uni æquus virtuti, atque ejus amicis. Lat. HORACE.
 "Friendly to virtue alone, and to the friends of virtue."—The three first words form the motto of Earl MANSFIELD.

Unica virtus necessaria. Lat.—"Virtue is the only thing necessary."—Motto of the Irish Earl of MORNINGTON.

Uni quippe vacat, studiis odiisque carenti
Humanum lugere genus. Lat. LUCAN.
 "There is only one man, who being equally free from attachments and resentments, is at leisure to weep for the miseries of the human race."—This praise, which the poet has given to Cato, applies to the disinterested patriot, who fights only for the sufferings of his country.

Un je servirai. Fr.—"One I will serve."—Motto of the Earl of PEMBROKE and Lord PORCHESTER.

Uno avulso, non deficit alter. Lat. VIRGIL.—
 "When one is plucked away, another shall not be wanting."—Used in a political sense—remove that man, and you shall have his like for a successor.

Un roy, une foy, une loy. Fr.—"One king, one faith, one law."—Motto of the Irish Marquis CLANRICARDE.

Un sot à triple étage. Fr.—"A fool of the third story."—An egregious blockhead.

Un sot trouve toujours un plus sot qui l'admire.

Fr. BOILEAU.

"A fool always finds a greater fool to admire him."—Used in reproaching a silly, or adulatory commendation of an indifferent work.

Un 'tien' vaut mieux que deux 'tu l'auras.' Fr. Prov.

"One 'hold fast' is better than two 'I'll give thee.'"—A bird in the hand, &c.

Un tout seul. Fr.—"One alone."—Motto of the Ir. Earl VERNEY.

*Unus homo nobis cunctando restituit rem,
Non ponebat enim rumores ante salutem.*

Fragment of ENNIUS.

"One man by delay restored the State, for he preferred the public safety to idle report."—This was applied to Fabius, who, by prudently avoiding a battle, at length wasted away the army of Hannibal, the inveterate and sworn enemy of the Romans. It is now sometimes quoted, when caution or delay is to be justified on the part of a general or a statesman.

—Unus utrique error

Sed variis illudit partibus.

Lat. HORACE.

"The same error belongs to each, but it mocks them in different ways."—Several men may engage in a pursuit of the same folly, yet each travel by a different road.

Urbem lateritiam invenit, marmoream reliquit. Lat. SÜETONIUS.—"He found a city built of bricks, and he left it constructed of marble."—This was the boast of Augustus, with respect to the city of Rome. It is sometimes flatteringly applied to other princely suggesters, or promoters of great improvements.

Urit

*Urit enim fulgore suo qui prægravat artes
Infra se positas—extinctus amabitur idem.*

Lat. HORACE:

“He is consumed by his own brightness, who depresses the arts beneath him—yet he, after his decease, shall be admired.”—The man of exalted genius, throws by the splendor of his talents all inferior merits into shade. He is exposed, therefore, to all the shafts of cotemporary jealousy. His death alone can deprive envy of her sting; then those who were most forward to detract, will be the first to do justice to his merits.

——— Usque adeone

Scire tuum nihil est, nisi te scire hoc sciat alter?

Lat. PERSIUS.

“Is therefore your own knowledge to pass for nothing, unless others are aware of that knowledge?”—Is it not the sole object of your studies, to impress others with a sense of your acquirements?

Usque adeone mori miserum est? Lat. VIRGIL.—“Is it then so very wretched a thing to die?”—Are the thoughts of mortality so very dreadful?

Ut ameris, amabilis esto. Lat. OVID.—“That you may be beloved, be deserving of love.”—To merit regard, is the surest mode of obtaining it.

Ut apes geometriam. Lat.—“As bees practise geometry.”—The motto of the Marquis of LANSDOWN.

Utatur motu animi, qui uti ratione non potest. Lat.
“Let him be guided by his passions, who can make no use of his reason.”—Fools may be impelled by their passions, but the man of reason is left without an excuse.

UT——UT

Utcunque placuerit Deo. Lat.—“As it shall please God.”—Motto of Earl HOWE.

*Utendum est ætate, cito pede præterit ætas;
Quam cuperes votis hunc revocare diem?*

Lat. OVID.

“You should employ your youth, which passes swiftly away. With how many wishes would you not then endeavour to recal the present day?”

Ut homo est, ita morem geras. Lat. TERENCE.—“As the man is, so you should conduct yourself.”—This is a practical maxim of the most useful kind. The dexterous man who has a purpose to carry, will be full of deference before the lofty, easy with the free, and complacent with the humble.

Utile dulci. Lat.—“The useful with the pleasant.” To say, that he has combined the utile dulci—is to give the very first praise to a writer.

Utilium sagax rerum. Lat. HOR.—“Sagacious in making useful discoveries.

Utinam tam facile vera invenire possem, quam falsa convincere. Lat. CICERO.—“I wish that I could as easily discover the truth, as I can detect the falsehood.”—I have no clue to the former, but the latter betrays itself by its inconsistency.

Uti possidetis. Lat.—“As you possess.”—A diplomatic phrase, used when two sovereigns, after sacrificing a number of human lives, &c. chuse to make peace, “each retaining the possessions which they have acquired.”—Its opposite is the status quo, when both parties re-enter into the condition in which they stood before the war.

——Ut

— Ut nec pes, nec caput uni

Reddatur formæ.

Lat. HORACE.

“So that neither the foot nor the head shall belong to the same form.”—Applied to a dramatic piece or to a picture, where all is incongruity.

Ut nemo in sese tentat descendere, nemo;

Sed præcedenti spectatur mantica tergo

Quæseris.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“You ask why no man attempts to descend into himself, but looks to the wallet on the shoulders of him who precedes.”—The allusion is to the fable, where men are represented as marching in a line with a double wallet, the forward part containing their neighbour’s faults, whilst their own are slung unseen behind their backs.

Utque alios industria, ita hunc ignavia ad famam protulerat.

Lat. TACITUS.—“Other men have been advanced to fame by industrious exertion, but this man has succeeded by mere sluggishness and indolence.”—The person in question owes not his elevation to his deserts.

Ut quimus, quando ut volumus non licet.

Lat. TERENCE.—“When we cannot act as we wish, we must act as we can.”—Every man should accommodate himself to circumstances, and particularly in suiting his aims to his powers.

Ut sementem feceris, ita & metes.

Lat. CICERO.—“As you have sown, so shall you reap.”—As your conduct has been, so shall be its fruits.

Ut pictura, poësis erit.

Lat. HORACE.—“It will ever be in poetry, as in painting.”—There must always be an affinity between those sister arts.

Varium & mutabile semper

Fœmina.

Lat. VIRGIL.

“A woman is always changeable and capricious.”—The opinions of that sex are ever fluctuating.

Vae victis! Lat.—“Woe to the conquered.”—If it should come to that point, vae victis—it will be a war of extermination.

Vedettes. Fr. Mil. Term.—“Sentinels on horseback, to watch and give notice of the approach of an enemy.”

Nelim mehercule cum istis errare, quam cum aliis recte sentire. Lat.—“I would rather in fact err with those men, than think rightly with others.”—I so much approve of their general consistency, that though they may be erroneous in this single point, they still shall have my concurrence.

Velis & remis. Lat.—“With sails and oars.”—He pushed forward velis & remis—by every possible means.

Velle suum cuique, nec voto vivitur uno. Lat. PERSIUS.—“Each man has his own wish, the inclinations of all cannot be the same.”—Taste and opinion must differ in men and in nations.

———Velocius ac citius nos

*Corrumpunt vitiorum exempla domestica, magnis
Cum jubeant animos auctoribus.*

Lat. HORACE.

“We are more speedily and fatally corrupted by domestic examples of vice, and particularly when they are impressed on our minds, as from authority.”—Such is the effect, for instance, of bad example, held forth by a father or mother, to children of either sex.

Velox

Velox consilium sequitur pœnitentia. Lat. LÆBER.—
 “Hasty counsels are generally followed by repentance.”

Veluti in speculum Lat.—“As if in a mirror, or looking-glass.”—You shall here see your follies reflected.

Venalis populus, venalis curia patrum. Lat.—“The people are venal, and the senate is equally venal.”—A description once given of Rome. It would not now be necessary to travel to Rome, in order to make the application.

Vendentem thus & odores. Lat. HORACE.—“Selling frankincense and perfumes,” applied to such pamphlets as are destined to wrap up groceries, line trunks, &c.

Vendidit hic auro patriam. Lat. VIRGIL.—“He sold his country for gold.”—He is nothing less than a venal traitor.

Venenum in auro bibitur. Lat. SENECA.—“Poison is generally drunk out of gold.”—Those who use less costly utensils, are not so liable to such murderous attempts.

Venienti occurrere morbo. Lat. PERSIUS.—“Meet the approaching disease.”—Do not let the malady strike root, but seek the proper advice and remedy on its first approaches.

Venire facias. Law Lat.—“You shall cause, or order to come.”—The judicial writ by which the sheriff is empowered to summon a jury.

Veni, vidi, vici. Lat.—“I came, I saw, I overcame.”—This was the brief account transmitted by Julius Cæsar of a victory.

Ventis

Ventis secundis. Lat.—“With prosperous winds.”—
With uniform success.—Motto of Lord Hood.

Ventre affamé n'a point d'oreilles. Fr. Prov.—“A starved belly has no ears.”—A hungry audience is not to be satisfied by mere argument.

Verba animi proferre, & vitam impendere vero.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“To speak the words of the mind, and to stake one's life for the truth.”—To speak with honest frankness, and to prefer liberty to life.
An admirable summary of the duties of a good citizen.

———Verbosa ac grandis epistola venit

A Capræis.

Lat. PERSIUS.

“A verbose and turgid epistle comes from Capræ.”—This is applied by the poet to the haughty mandates issued by Tiberius in his retreat. It is now used to mark a lofty tone, assumed by the opposite party in any polemic discussion.

———Verbum verbo reddere fidus,

Interpres.

Lat. HORACE.

“As a faithful interpreter to translate word for word;”—to give a translation strictly literal.

Veritas nihil veretur nisi abscondi. Lat. LAW MAX.

“Truth is afraid of nothing but concealment.”
The characters of truth are plainness and frankness. It is in the nature of fraud, on the contrary, to be evasive and mysterious.

Veritas vincit. Lat.—“Truth conquers.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl MARISHALL.

Veritas visû & morâ, falsa festinatione & incertis valescunt. Lat. TACITUS.—“Truth is confirmed by inspection and delay: falsehood avails itself of haste and uncertainty.”—Falsehood relies lies on the first impressions; the truth comes haltingly behind, as wishing to meet the test of deliberation and circumspection.

Veritatis simplex oratio est. Lat. SENECA.—“The language of truth is simple.”—The orator, who is conscious of having truth on his side, should be careful not to veil or degrade her beauty by any meretricious decoration.

Verité sans peur. Fr.—“Truth without fear.”—The motto of Lord MIDDLETON.

Ver non semper viret. Lat.—“The spring does not always flourish—or Vernon always flourishes.”
Motto of Lord VERNON.

Versus. Lat.—“Against.”

Versus inopes rerum, nugæque canoræ. Lat. HORACE.
“Verses devoid of substance, melodious trifles.”
Or, as a modern poet has it,
“Your filmy, gauzy, gossamery, lines.”

*Verum illud est, vulgo quod dici solet,
Omnes sibi malle melius esse quam alteri.*

Lat. TERENCE.

“The common assertion is certainly true, that we all wish matters to be better with ourselves than with others.”—Whatever may be theoretically said of philanthropy and benevolence to others, self-love will be found to be the prevailing principle.

Verum opere in longo fas est obrepere somnum. Lat. HORACE.—“But in a long work it is allowable that sleep may creep on.”—A degree of negligence is pardonable in a long work, which in a brief production would be highly reprehensible.

Verum

VE———VI

Verum putes haud ægre, quod valde expetas. Lat. TERENCE.—“You believe that easily, which you hope for earnestly.”—Men are led without difficulty into the belief of that which they passionately desire.

Vestigia nulla retrorsum. Lat.—“There are no traces backward.”—All the footsteps lead to the lion’s den, but there are no marks of any returning. It is a danger from which there is no retreat. Motto of Vis. HAMDEN.

Vetera extollimus, recentium incuriosi. Lat. TACITUS.—“We extol the ancients, regardless of those of later date.”—We are more ready to give praise to the deeds, or writers of antiquity, than to do justice to contemporary merit.

Vetustas pro lege semper habetur. Lat. Law Maxim.—“Ancient custom is always held as a law.”—Where there is no positive law, the custom, if from time immemorial, may be pleaded.

*Viam qui nescit, quâ deveniat ad mare,
Eum oportet amnem quærere comitem sibi.* Lat. PLAUTUS.

“He who knows not his way to the sea, should take a river as his companion.”—By this figure it is intimated, that a tedious but certain course to any given object, is preferable to one which may possibly be more brief, but is at the same time uncertain.

———*Viamque insiste domandi
Dum faciles animi juvenum, dum mobilis ætas.*

Lat. VIRGIL.

“Take the course of strong rule, whilst the mind of youth is flexible, and capable of strong impressions.”—Vigorous methods, but divested of harshness, should be early called into use by those, those, to whom the education of youth is committed.

Vice versa. Lat.—“The terms being exchanged.”
Thus—the generous should be rich, and vice versa, the rich should be generous.

Vicinus urit Ucalegon. Lat. VIRGIL.—“Your neighbour Ucalegon’s house is on fire.”—The danger is approaching to you so nearly as to demand your utmost exertion.

Victor volentes per populos dat jura. Lat.—“He, as a conqueror, dictates his laws to a willing people.”—This is a compliment generally paid to a victorious leader. The will of the people subdued, though it does not actually follow, is presumed as a thing of course.

Victrix causa Diis placuit, sed victa Catoni. Lat. LUCAN.—“The victorious cause was adopted by the gods, that of the vanquished by Cato.”

“The gods and Cato did in this divide,
“They chose the conqu’ring, he the conquer’d side.”

This extravagant flight of the poet is sometimes applied to a man who having wrestled, though unsuccessfully, against superior powers, has derived glory even from defeat.

Victrix fortunæ sapientia. Lat. JUVENAL.—“Wisdom frequently conquers fortune.”—A wise man will often parry or subdue the reverses of chance.

Vide. Lat.—“See.”—Vide ut supra.—“See the preceding statement.”

Vide & crede. Lat.—“See and believe.”—If any thing like incredulity remains, convince yourself by ocular demonstration.

———Video

Video meliora proboque,

Deteriora sequor.

Lat. OVID.

"I see and approve of better things, but I follow the worse which I condemn."—This is frequently used by the speaker or writer, as a sentence of self-condemnation.—It may also be applied to a third person, where his conduct is directly opposite to his known sentiments.

Vi & armis. Lat.—"By force and arms."—By a force not sanctioned by law. By main force.

Vigilantibus. Lat.—"To the watchful."—Motto of Ir. Viscount GOSFORD.

Vigilantibus non dormientibus servit lex. Law Max.
—"The law regards those only who watch, and not those who sleep."—The law is only for the protection of those who take due care of their property. It notices not those who may suffer from their own neglect.

Vigueur de dessus. Fr.—"Strength is from above." Motto of the Ir. Earl of INCHQUIN.

Vincit amor patriæ. Lat.—"The love of my country overcomes."—Motto of the Irish Viscount MOLESWORTH, and Lord MUNCASTER.

Vincit omnia veritas. Lat.—"Truth conquers all things."—It must ultimately prevail over every cavil, and every objection.—Motto of the Ir. Baron KINSALE.

Vincit qui se vincit. Lat.—"He conquers who overcomes himself."—Motto of Lord HOWARD of WALDEN.

Vincit veritas. Lat.—"Truth conquers."—Motto of the Ir. Earls of BELLAMONT and MONTRATH.

Vino

VI——VI

Vino tortus & irā. Lat. HORACE.—“Though tortured both by wine and anger.”—The poet is speaking of a man who can keep his friend's secret, though the lene tormentum, or gentle compulsion of wine, or the more forcible excitation of anger were both employed to wrest it from his bosom.

Vir bonus dicendi peritus. Lat.—“A good man skilled in the art of speaking.”—By this, which was the ancient definition of an Orator, it appears that none could rank as such, but men of probity. Our modern notions are rather more relaxed.

———Vir bonus est quis?

Qui consulta patrum qui leges juraque servat.

Lat. HORACE.

“Who is a good man? He who respects the decrees of the legislature, and bows to every positive law, and every moral obligation.”

Virescit vulnere virtus. Lat.—“Virtue flourishes from a wound.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl of GALLOWAY.

Vires acquirit eundo. Lat.—“She acquires strength in her progress.”—This is spoken by the poet of fame or rumour.—Every report in its passage gathers strength, is enforced by new circumstances, and from a puny abortion swells very often into a gigantic admeasurement.

Viri infelicis procul amici. Lat. SENECA.—“Friends are always distant from a man who is unfortunate.”—Misfortune occasions a shyness even amongst friends the most professed.

Virtus ariete fortior. Lat.—“Virtue is stronger than a battering ram.”—Motto of the Earl of ABINGDON.

B B

Virtus

VI—VI

Virtus repulso nescio sordida

Intemperatis fulgat honoribus.

Lat. HORACE.

"That virtue which is unconscious of a base repulse, shines with unstained honours."

Virtus incendit vires. Lat.—"Virtue kindles the strength."—Motto of the Ir. Visc. STRANGFORD.

Virtus est medium vitiorum & utrinque reductum.

Lat. HORACE.—"Virtue is the middle between two vices, and is removed from either extreme."—Thus, generosity is the middle virtue, the extremes of which are avarice and prodigality.

Virtus in actione consistit. Lat.—"Virtue consists in acting."—It does not rest on cold theory, but on positive exertion.—Motto of Lord CRAVEN.

Virtus laudatur & alet. Lat. JUVENAL.—"Virtue is praised and freezes."—Every virtuous effort is viewed with cold admiration, and met only with sullen neglect.

Virtus mille scuta. Lat.—"Virtue is equal to a thousand shields."—Motto of the Earl of ESSEX.

Virtus est vitium fugere, & sapientia prima

Stultitiâ caruisse.

Lat. HORACE.

"It is a virtue to avoid vice, and the first step to wisdom is to be free from folly."

Virtus in arduis. Lat.—"Virtue (or valour) in difficulties."—Motto of the Ir. Visc. CULLEN.

Virtus requiei nescia sordida. Lat.—"Valour which knows not mean repose."—Motto of Ir. Visc. DESART.

Virtus

VI———VI

Virtus semper viridis. Lat.—“Virtue is always flourishing.”—Motto of the Ir. Visc. BELMORE.

Virtus vincit invidiam. Lat.—“Virtue conquers envy.”—Motto of the Marquis CORNWALLIS.

Virtus vincit invidiam. Lat.—“Virtue overcomes envy.”—However cotemporary jealousy may prevail, the virtuous man is in the end sure of his reward.

Virtute non astutia. Lat.—“By virtue, not by craft.”—Motto of the Ir. Visc. PERRY.

Virtute non viris. Lat.—“From virtue not from men.”—Motto of the Ir. Earl of KERRY.

Virtute ac labore. Lat.—“By virtue and toil.”—Motto of the Sc. Earl DUNDONALD.

Virtute fideque. Lat.—“By virtue and faith.”—Motto of the Sc. Baron ELIBANK.

Virtute & operâ. Lat.—“By virtue and industry.”—Motto of Ir. Earl FIFE.

Virtute quies. Lat.—“Content in virtue.”—Motto of Baron MULGRAVE.

Virtute & fide. Lat.—“By virtue and faith.”—Motto of the Earl of OXFORD, and the Ir. Visc. MELBOURN.

Virtutem incolumem odimus Sublatam ex oculis quærimus invidi.

Lat. HORACE.

“We hate virtue when it is safe and flourishing, but when removed from our sight, even envy itself regrets it.”—Such is the nature of man.

Virtutem videant, intabescantque relicta.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“Let them (the wicked) see the beauty of virtue, and pine at having forsaken her.”—This is the greatest curse that can befall them.

Virtuti nihil obstat & armis. Lat.—“Nothing can resist valour and arms.”—Motto of the Earl of ALDBOROUGH.

Virtuti non armis fido. Lat.—“I trust to virtue and not to arms.”—Motto of Lord GREY DE WILTON.

Virtutis amor. Lat.—“The love of virtue.”—Motto of the Ir. Earl ANNESLY.

Virtutis amore. Lat.—“Through the love of virtue.”—Motto of the Ir. Viscount VALENTIA.

Virtutis avorum premium. Lat.—“The reward of the virtue of my ancestors.”—Motto of the Ir. Baron TEMPLETOWN.

Virtutis fortuna comes. Lat.—“Fortune is the companion of virtue.”—Motto of the Ir. Barons NEWHAVEN, and HERBERTON.

Vis consilii expers mole ruit sua. Lat. HORACE.—“Force, not directed by wisdom, falls by its own weight.”—Brutal force is as nothing, when it is not guided by the counsels of reason.

Vis inertiae. Lat.—“The power of inertness.”—In physics, this is applied to the power of a stationary body, resisting that which would set it in motion. In morals, it has a figurative application, and serves as another name for indolence.

Vis unita fortior. Lat.—“Force or power is strengthened by union.”—Motto of the Ir. Earl MOUNT CASHEL.

Vita

VI——VI

Vitâ cedat, uti conviva satur. Lat. HORACE.—

“Let him take leave of life, as a guest satisfied with his entertainment”

Vitæ est avidus, quisquis non vult

Mundo secum pereunte mori.

Lat. SENECA.

“He is greedy of life, who is not willing to die when the world is perishing around him.”—

When he sees that every thing is hastening to destruction and decay.

Vitæ post-scenâ celant. Lat. LUCRETIVS.—

“They conceal that part of their life which is passed behind the scenes.”—They throw a veil over their private life, and hide it from the world.

Vitæ summa brevis, spem nos vetat inchoare longam.

Lat. HORACE.—“The short span of our lives forbids us to encourage a lengthened hope.”—

Such is the brief term of our existence, that he who looks to remote prospects is generally disappointed.

Vitæ via virtus. Lat.—“Virtue is the way of life.”

Motto of the Ir. Earl of PORTARLINGTON.

Vita enim mortuorum in memoria vivorum est posita.

Lat. CICERO.—“The life of the dead is placed in the memory of the living.”—They survive in remembrance, and still exist, as a biographer would say, in fair report.

Vitam impendere vero. Lat.—“To stake one’s life for the truth.”—Stated as the best character of a good citizen.

Vitam regit fortuna non sapientia. Lat. CICERO.—

“Fortune, and not wisdom, governs human life.”

Vitanda est improba Syren—Desidia.

Lat. HORACE.

“That destructive Syren Sloth is ever to be avoided.”—The man who devotes himself to indolent habits, must be considered as lost to himself and to society.

———Vitavi denique culpam,

Non laudem merui.

Lat.

“I have been careful to avoid censure, if I have not deserved commendation.”—This is a suitable motto for a very numerous class of poets, who seem to aim at no higher praise than that of faultless insipidity.

Vitia otii negotio discutienda sunt. Lat. SENECA.—

“The vices of sloth are only to be shaken off by business.”—The mind will rust and canker without employment.

Vitiant artus agræ contagia mentis. Lat. OVID.

“When the mind is ill at ease, the body is in a certain degree affected.”

Vitiis nemo sine nascitur. Lat.—“No man is born without his faults.”—We owe every allowance to the faults of others, being conscious that every human being has his share of imperfection.

———Vitium commune omnium est,

Quod nimium ad rem in senectâ attenti sumus.

Lat. TERENCE.

“It is a fault which is common to all, that in advanced age we are too much attached to our property and interest.”—As prodigality is proverbially said to be the fault of youth, so is avarice that of later years.

Vitium

Vitium fuit, nunc mos est, adfentatio. Lat. SYRUS.

—"Flattery, which was formerly a vice, is now grown into a custom."—It has become so familiar that it no longer provokes our detestation.

Viva voce. Lat.—"By the living voice."—By oral testimony as opposed to written evidence.

Vive la bagatelle. Fr.—"Success to trifling."

Vive sine invidia mollesque inglorios annos.

Exige, & amicitias tibi junge pares.

Lat. OVID.

"Live free from envy, and without a wish for glory; desire only placid years, and to live in friendship with your equals."—Seek the quiet shade of life, and avoid the friendships of the great.

Vive memor lethi.

Lat. PERSIUS.

"Live ever in the remembrance of death."—This solemn recollection will be the best preservative from vice and error.

Vive vale—si quid novisti rectius istis

Candidus imperti; si non his utere mecum.

Lat. HORACE.

"Farewell and be happy—if you know of any precepts better than these, be so candid as to communicate them, if not, partake of these with me."

———"If a better system's thine,

"Impart it freely, or make use of mine.

———Vivendi recte qui prorogat horam,

Rusticus expectat dum defluat amnis.

Lat. HORACE.

"He who postpones the hour of living rightly, is like the rustic who waits till the river shall have have passed away."—He defers his reformation to a period which can never arrive.

*Vivendum est recte, cum propter plurima, tum his Præcipue causis, ut linguas Mancipiorum
Contemnas—nam lingua mali pars pessima servi.*

Lat. JUVENAL.

"You should live virtuously for many reasons, but particularly on this account, that you may be able to despise the tongues of your domestics. The tongue is the worst part of a bad servant."

Vivere sat vincere. Lat.—"To conquer is to live enough."—Motto of the Irish Earl of SEFTON.

Vivida vis animi. Lat.—"The strong force of the mind."—The lively impetus of genius.

Vivit post funera virtus. Lat.—"Virtue survives the grave."—Motto of the Irish Earl of SHANNON.

Vivite felices, quibus est fortuna peracta Jam sua.

Lat. VIRGIL.

"May those be happy whose fortunes are already completed."—Though struggling through life, I can see without envy those whose efforts have had a successful termination.

*Vivitur exiguo melius—natura beatis
Omnibus esse dedit, si quis cognoverit uti.*

Lat. CLAUDIAN.

"Men live best upon a little—nature has granted to all to be happy, if the use of her gifts were but known."

*—Vivo & regno, simul ista reliqui
Quæ vos ad cælum fertis rumore secundo.*

Lat. HORACE.

"I live and reign within myself, since I have abandoned those things which you by your praises praises extol to the skies.”—I have been happy since I have resigned to you the pleasures of sensuality, and betaken myself to those of reflection.

Vivre ce n'est pas respirer, c'est agir. FR. ROUSSEAU.

“Life does not consist merely in breathing, but in action.”—The man can scarcely be said to live, who does nothing but obey his animal impulses.

Vix ea nostra voco. Lat.—“I can scarcely call these things our own.” (alluding to ancestry.)—Motto of Lord SUNDRIDGE and Earl WARWICK.

Vixere fortes ante Agamemnona.

Multi: sed omnes illacrymabiles

Urgentur ignotique longa

Noctē, carent quia vate sacro.

Lat. HORACE.

“Many heroes lived before Agamemnon, but they are all unmourned, and consigned to long oblivion, because they are without a sacred bard,” to sing their praises.—This quotation is used in shewing the value of poetry, in consecrating and embalming the deeds of virtue and of valour.

Voilà pour l'achever de peindre. Fr. Prov.—“But to finish his picture.”—To give the last and strongest feature of his character.

Voilà une autre chose. French.—“There you see another thing.”—The circumstances of the two cases are wholly different.

Volenti non fit injuria. Lat. Law Maxim.—“An injury cannot be done to a willing person.”—None can complain of wrong in a proceeding, when the measure had their previous assent.

V O ——— V U

Volo non valeo. Lat.—“I am willing but unable.”— Motto of the Earl of CARLISLE.

———Voluptates commendat rarior usus.

Lat. JUVENAL.

“Our pleasures have an higher relish when they are rarely used.”—The keenest sense of pleasure is blunted by a too frequent repetition.

Vota vita mea. Lat.—“My life is devoted.”—Motto of the Irish Earl of MEATH.

———Vous me fîtes, seigneur,

En m'attaquant beaucoup d'honneur. French.

“You did me, sir, by attacking me, a great deal of honour.”—The reproaches of such an adversary, I consider rather as a compliment than a disgrace.

Vous y perdrez vos pas. Fr.—“You will there lose your steps.”—You will find that your labour and pains are thrown away.

Vox & præterea nihil. Lat.—“A voice and nothing more.”—An empty and unavailing sound. A fine speech without matter. A mere display of words.

Vox faucibus hæsit. Lat. VIRGIL.—“The voice stuck in the throat.”—Spoken of a person struck dumb with amazement.

Vox populi, vox Dei. Lat.—“The voice of the people is the voice of God.”

Vulnus alit venis, & cæco carpitur igni. Lat. VIRGIL.—“She (or he) nourishes the poison in the veins, and is consumed by the hidden fire.”—Applied very frequently to a secret passion, where, according to our immortal bard, ———“Concealment, like a worm i' th' bud, Feeds on the damask cheek.”

Zest.

ZE———ZO

Z.

Zest. Fr.—“An interjection.”—Pshaw, stuff, ridiculous.

Zon kai ψυχη. Zoe kai psuche. Gr.—“My life and soul.”

Zonam perdidit. Lat. HORACE.—“He has lost his purse.”—He is desperate through the want of money.

Zonam solvere. Lat.—“To unloose the virgin zone or cestus.”—To deprive a maiden of her virginity.

THE END.

G. Woodfall, Printer,
Paternoster-row.

HW 2QF0 5

PR 8 1900

DEC 10 1913

DUE JUL 21 1928

